reth it openly & the very shadowe of death bringeth he to lycht. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplye, and dyueth them awaye. He chaungeth þe hertes of them that rule the people of the earth, and dyslapopntet þe them: so that they go wandrynge out of the waye, and grope in the darke wpythout lycht: he maketh them also to stagger to and fro lyke drunken men.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Job reproveth his friends with theyr owne sayenges, & contempneth pocrtye.

In all thys haue I sene wpyth myne eye, herd wpyth myne eare, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that I same do I know also, nether am I inferior vnto you. Neuerthelesse, I talke with the Almighty, & my desyre is to come men with God. As for you ye are workemasters of lyer, & vnprofytable & phylpions altogether. Wolde God ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyle men. Nowe heare my chydnyng, and ponder the sentence of my lpps.

Do ye speake iniquite agaynst God, & talke agaynst hym wpyth dyscepter. Wyl ye not accept the person of hym? Wyl ye contende w God? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to rekenyng? For as one mā mocketh an other, so do ye moche hym. He shall punyssh you, & reprove you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shall he not make you astrayde, when he seeth with him selfe? Shall not his terribyle feare fall vpon you your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodies lyke the clape.

Holde your tonges, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorowe shalbe the lesse. Wherefore do I beare my flesh in my tery, & and put my soule in mine hādes? Lo, though he slay me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But I wyl reprove myne owne wayes in his syght he shal make me whole & there maye no pocrtye come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayenges wpyth your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shal be founde ryghteous. What is he, that wyl go to lawe wpyth me? (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tounge, and dye. Neuerthelesse, graunte me two thynge, and then wyl I not hyde my selfe from the.

Drawe thynne hande from me, and let not the fearefull drede of the make me astrayde. And then call me, and I wyl answere or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answer. How many are my mysdedes & synes? Let me know my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thynne enemye? Wylt thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a flyenge lease, and folowe vpon dyre stubble? for thou layest tharpely to my charge, and punysshest me* for the synes of my yowthe. & Thou puttest my fete also in the stocks and lokest narrowly vnto all my pathes, and markest þe stepes of my fete where as I not withstandynge) muste consume lyke as a foule carpon, and as a clothe that is motheaten.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Job dyscepereth the spere of man, and propheseth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the godly, tyll they attayne that they loken for.

In that is borne of woman, hath he but a short tyme to lyue, and is full of myserye. He commeth vp and is cut downe lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer cōsynucth in one state. Wylt thou open thynne eyes vpon suche one, & bypnyge me in thy iudgement? Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vn-cleane thynge? No bodye. * The dayes of mā lyfelye are determyned, the nombze of hys monethes are knowen only vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his boundes, which he can not go beyonde. So fro hym that he maye rest (a lytle) vntyll his daye come: whiche he loketh for, lyke as an byrlynge doeth.

If a tre be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyl sproute, and shote forth the braunches agayne. For though þe rote of it be warent olde, and the stocke therof be dead in þe grounde yet when it getteth þe sent of water, it wyl bud and bypnyge forth the bowes, lyke as a trece that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed away, what becometh of hym?

The floudes when they be dyed vp, and þe ryuers when they be emptye, are fylled agayne to rowe the flowyng waters of the see: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne (of hys owne strength) vntyll the heauen perple he shal not wake vp, nor ryse out of his slepe. What thou woldest kepe, and hyde me in the bell, vntyll thy wrath were stilled, and to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Wylt thou deade man lyue agayne? * All the dayes of my lyfelye wyl I waite styll, tyll my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalte call me and I shal answere the, & despyse not thou the worke of thynne owne handes.

Now thou noblyest all my goynyes, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synes. My iniquite is sealed vp, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyfull vnto my wyckednes. The mountaynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are removed out of theyr place, & waters pearce thorow the very stones by lytle & lytle, & floudes waiche awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyest þe the hope of mā? Thou preuailest styll agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest hys estate, and puttest hym from the. And whether his chyldzen come to wo, they or no, he can not tell. And yf they be men of lowe degre, he knoweth not. Wyle he lyueth hys fleshe must haue trauayle, and wyle the soule is in hym, he must be in sorowe.

The. xv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reuerbereth Job because he ascepereth wpyth and purgeth to hym selfe. He dyscepereth the iuste that falleth on the wycked, rekenyng Job to be one of þe nombre.

worsh. and speake the thynges: whiche can do no good: Is for shame, thou hast set it aspre, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God, but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen þa crafty tonge. Thine owne mouth condempneth the, & not I: yea, thine owne lippes shalpe an answer agaynst the.

Arte thou the first mā, that euer was bozne? Wast thou made before the byls: haste thou herde the secrete counsell of God that all wysedome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou þ we knowe not: And what understandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both old and aged men: yea, suche as hane lyued longer then thy father.

B Thyngest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God? With the is a lyngge worde. Why doth thyne hart so be witch þ. And wherfore wprukest thou wyth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so putt up agaynst God, & lettest such wordes go out of thy mouth? What is mā, that he shuld be cleane: what hath he, which is borne of a woman, wherby he myght be ryghteous?

A Beholde he doth not trust his sayntes: yea, the very brauens are not cleane in his syght. Howe much more then an abhominable and vyle mā, which dypneth wyckednes lyke water? I wyl tell the, heare me and I wyl shewe the þ I haue seene whiche wyse men haue tolde, and hath not ben hyd from the þ fathers vnto whome ony þ erth was geue & no strainger went amōge the.

C The vngodly sozoweth all þ dayes of his lyfe as it were a woman with a chyld, and the nombre of a tpyauntes peares is vnkowen. A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered oute of darkenesse, for the swearde is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his liuyng, he seeth playnely þ the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sozow and carefulnesse wyl make him aspre, & compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge w his hoste ready to the batayle. For he hath stretched out his hande agaynst God, & armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghty. He ruyneth proude lye vpon hym, and with a styffe necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth his face wyth fastnesse, and maketh his bodye well lykynge. Therefore shall his dwellynge be in desolate ctyes, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones. He shall not be ryche, neither shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpo earth. He shal neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shall brye vpon hys braunches. With the blast of the mouth of God, shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vayne, and yet he is out of the waye, & vaine shal be his recompence.

He shal perishe, asore hys tyme be woyme out, and his braunche shall not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntimely grape fro þ wyne: and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregacyon of ppoctes shal be desolate and vnfrutefull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are greedy to receyue gyl-

tes. * He conceynerh traunple, and beareth vaine, and theyr bodye byngeth forth deceyte.

The xvi. Chapter.

Job repeateth his myserie, sayth that he suffereth more then his wyckednes hath deserued.

Ob answered and sayd: I haue ofty times herde suche thynges, miserable geuers of comforte are ye, all þ sozte of you. Shal not vayne wordes yet come to an ende?

Wast thou yet any more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. Wold God that your soule weece in my soules steade. Then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, & shalke my head at you. I shulde comforte you w my mouth, and releafe your payne with the sayyng of my lippes. * But what shall I do. For all my wordes, and my sayowes wyl not cease, and though I holde my tonge, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath lent me a ductile, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast fylled me wyth wyngles, my fle is in recorde, and my leane is lyeth vpon agaynst me, & beareth wynges agaynst me. He is angrie at me, he hateth me: and gnasheth vpon me wyth his teeth. Myne enemye shal let vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpo me, * and impten me vpon the cheke despytful lye, they gather them selues together agaynst me. God hath put me in pteace wyth the vngod lye, and deliuered me into the handes of þ wycked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and sette me as a marke for hym selfe. Hys archers compasse me rounde about. He wound my loynes, and doth not spare. Hys bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a graunte. I haue sowed a sackcloth vpon my supine, and lye wyth my heare in the dulle.

My face is swollen with wepryng, & myne eyes is the shadowe of death. Howbeit there is no wyche duelle in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. * Earth, ceue not thou my bleude, and let my cryenge fynde no rowme.

For lo, my wytnesse is in heuen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the hepyrth: My fren- des geue me many wordes to scoyne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. * That a bo- dye myght please wyth God, as one man doth wyth another: yet the nombre of my peares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The xvii. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth aspre, and yet doth he repently aspre it.

Ob breathe synketh, my dayes are shortned. I am harde at deathes doze. Forwarde men are wyth me, and myne eye must continue in the bytternesse of them. * Deliuer me, and loke out one to be my suretye in thy syghte. What is he that knoweth who wyl promise for me?

The. x. Chapter.

¶ Sopht sayeth, that the vnterchail, the courtour, and the wycked shall haue a shorte moe.

Then answered Sopht the Naama-rite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why my mynde is readye wpythin me. I haue suffycientlye hearde thy checkynge and reprove, therfore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not thys, namely, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creati- on of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of þe vngodlye hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of pprocytes contynued but the trowpkyng of an eye? Though he be magnified vnto the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he perysheth for euer, in so muche þe they which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he? He shall vanishe as a dreame: so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a visp on in the nyght. So that þe eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no more. Hys chyldren shall be sapne to a gree wpyth the poore, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

From hys yowth hys bones are full of pleasures, but now shall it lye downe wpythin hym in the earth. The wyckednes was swete in his mouth, he dyd it vnder hys tounge. That he fauoured, that wolde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the popson of the serpentis, wpythin his body. The ryche that he deuoured, shall he parbake agayn, for God shall drawe them out of hys belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpentis, and the adders tounge shall slaye hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The chynges that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp.

Great traunple shall he make for ryche, but he shall not entoye them. And why: he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perysh in hys couetousnesse. There shall none of hys meat be left behynde, therfore shall no mā loke for hys prosperite. When he had plenteousnesse at euery chyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fylle hys belly, yet God shall sende his wrauth vpon him, and cause his indignaciō to rapyne ouer hym: so that yf he fye the yron weapons, he shall be shot wpyth the stele bowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of þe quyer, and a glysterynge swarde thorowe the gall of hym, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darke- nesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkynndlye fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substance that he hath in hys house, shall be taken a waye and perysh, in the daye of the Lordes wrauth. * This is the poore cōpon that the wycked man shall haue of God, & the herptage that he maye loke for of God: by cause of hys wordes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Job answered and sayde: O beare I my wordes, and that shall be my com- forte of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorne. (ye lyghten you.) Is it toz mannes sake that I make this disputaciō? Whyde yf it were so, shoulde not my spete be then sore in trouble? Marke me well, and be a- bashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth for when I consyder my selfe I am afraid, & my flethe is smytten with feare. * Wherefore do wycked men lyue in helth and prosperite, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Their chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr genera- cion before theyr eyes. Theyr houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by flockes and theyr sonnes led the daunce. * They beare wpyth them tabrettes and harpes, and haue in- strumettes of musycke at their pleasure. They spende theyr dapes in welthyne: but sodayne- ly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God go from vs we despye not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we shoulde serue hym? And what profyte shoulde we haue to submytte our selues vnto hym? Lo, there is vtterlye no goodnesse in them, therfore I wyll not haue to do with the counsaile of the vngodly. Howe ofte shall the candle of the wycked be put out: howe oft cometh theyr destruc- cion vnto them? What sorow shall God geue them for theyr part in his wrauth? Yea they shall be euē as they were before the wynde, and as chaffe that the Royme carpeth a waye.

And though God saue theyr chyldren from suche sorowe, yet wyll he so rewarde them sel- ues, that they shall knowe it. Theyr owne de- strucciō and mysferte shall they se wpyth theyr eyes, and dyneke of the fearful wrauth of the Al- myghtye. For what careth he what becometh of his household after hys death, when the num- bre of hys monethes is cut shorte? In as muche then as God hath the best power of all, who can teach hym any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye, and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperite, euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of maye. Another dyeth in sorowe and heynnesse, and neuer hadde good dapes. They shall slepe bothe alyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Beholde, I knowe wat ye thynke, yea and the subtyltye that ye ymagyn agaynst me. For ye say, whete is the pynnes palace: & where is the dwelling of the vngodly: hane ye not asked them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye cannot denye the tokens, that * the wycked is kept vnto the day of destruccyon, and that the vngodlye shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre reprove hym for his wape to his face? Who wyl rewarde hym, for the vngodlye that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwel amonge the heape of the deade. Then shall he be sayne to be buryed amonge the stones of p'plaine. All men also must folow hym, and there are innumerable gone before hym. How wayne then is the comforte that ye gae me? Dost thou falslyd remaine in all your answers?

The. xxi. Chapter.

Eliphaz rep. chendeth Job of his vngodlye.

Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, and sayd. How a man be profitable vnto God, as he is wyle maye be profitable to hym self? Is it any auantage vnto the Almightye, that thou arte ryghteous? Or shall it profite hym, that thou makest thy wapes pacyfe? Is he afrayde to reprove the, and to stepe forth with the into iudgement? Is not thy wyckednesse great, & thyne vngodlye dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyre clothynge: To suche as were wey, hast thou gynn'd no water to drynke, and haste withdrawen breade from the hongrye. Shulde such one the as vseth violence wronge and oppresyon (dopng all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons, dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent wydowes awaye emptye, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therefore art thou compassed aboute wyth snarres on euery syde, and suddenly vered wyth feare. Wuldest thou the is no darknesse? Shulde not the water floude runne ouer the? Now * because that God is hyer then the heauens, and by cause thou seest that the starres are so hye, wylt thou therfore saye. Cuius, how shuld God knowe Dot, his dominyon reach beyonde the cloudes? Cuius, the cloudes couer hym that he maye not se, and he dwelleth aboute heauē. Dost not thou hepe the olde wape that wayne men haue gone? Which were cut downe out of tyme, and whose foundacyon was as a runnyngge water, whiche sayd vnto God go from vs, and what dyd y' Almightye wyth them? He fylled theyr houses w' good thynges. But the counsaile of the vngodlye is farre fro me. The ryghteous sawe it, and were glad, & the innocent laughed hym to scorne. Is our encrease be wen downe? As for the remnant of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

Deu. 11. b.

Therefore reconyle the vnto God, & be content, so shall all thynges prospere wyth y' ryghte well. Receyue the lawe at hys mouth, and laye vp hys wordes in thyne harte. For * yf thou wylt turne to the Almightye, thou shalt stande fast, and put all vngodlye counsels from thy dwel-lyngge: Thou shalt make golde as plentyfull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the fynnes of the ryuers. Yea, Almightye God hys owne selfe shall be thy defence, and thou shalt haue pletye of synner. The shalt thou haue thy dellyte in the Almightye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto hym, & he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promysse. Then loke what thou takest in hand, he shall make it to prospere wyth the: and the lyght shall shyne in thy wapes. For * who so humblyeth hym selfe, hym shall he set vp and who so loketh mekelye shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the country, bycause of the vngodlye synne of thy handes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Job answereth that he hath knowen & feared the power and sentence of the Judge, and sayeth that he hath walked in his righteousness.

Job answered, and sayde: My saying is yet this daye in byternesse, and my hande heup, bycause of my greeuynge. That I myght se him, and synde hym. That I myght come before his seate to please my cause before him, and to syl my mouth wyth argumentes. That I myght knowe what answer he wolde gyue me and that I myght vnderstand what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he please agaynst me wyth hys greate power and strength? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall enter d'sputacyon wyth hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. He holde, though he go before, I synde hym. If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym: If I go on y' lette syde where he doth his worke I can not attayne vnto hym. Agayne, If I go on the ryght syde he byderth hym selfe, that I can not se hym. But as for my wape, he knoweth it and * t'repeth me as the golde in y' fyre.

My fote doth kepe his path, hys hye wape hane I holden, and wyl not go out of it. I wyl not forsake the commaundement of his lypes, but loke what he charged me wyth hys mouth, that haue I put vpon my harte. He is styl at one poynt, and who wyl turne hym backe? He doeth as hym lysteth, & bynggeth to passe what he wyl. Her perfourmeth the thyng that is appoynted for me, and manye suche thynges doeth he. This is the cause that I wepne at hys presence, so that when I cōsyder hym, I am afrayd of hym. For in so much as he is God, he maketh my harte soft. and sayng that he is Almightye he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenes, neyther hath he couered the cloude from my face.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that the wysdom of God is vnsearchable.

JHE is a place: where spluer is brought oute of, and where golde is tryed: where yron is dygged out of the grounde, and stones resoluēd to metalle. The darkenesse shall ones come to an ende. he can take out the grounde of all thynges, the stones, the darke, and the shadowe of death. Wth the ryuer of water parteth he a sonder the straunge people, that know no good neyghbourhede: suche as are rude, vn-manerly and boysterous: he byngeth food out of the earth, and that whyche is vnder, consumeth he wth drye.

There is founde a place, whose stones are all cleane Sappires, and where the clottes of the earth are all golde. There is a way also that the byrdes know not, that no vulturs eye hath sene wherin the Lyons whelpes walke not, & wher no Lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the stoupe rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rockes: and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it.

Out of droppes byngeth he greates floudes together, & the thyng that is hyd, byngeth he to lyght. Howe commeth a man then by wysdom * Where is the place that men soude vnderstan-thyng he is, neyther is he founde in the lande of them that lyue. (or theyr owne pleasure)

The depe sayth: He is not with me. * The see sayeth: He is not with me. She can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, neither may y<sup>e</sup> pryce of her be bought with any spluer. No wedges of gold of Ophir, no precious smit stones, no Sappires maye be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor chrystall, neyther swete odoures, nor golden plate. There is nothyng so wortye, or so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her, for perfyte wysedome goeth farre beyonde them al.

The Topas that commeth out of Inde: may in no wyse be likened vnto her: yea, no maner of ap-parell howe pleasaunt and saye so euer it be.

From whence then commeth wysedom? and where is y<sup>e</sup> place of vnderstandyng? She is hyd from the eyes of all men lyuynge: yea, and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and death saye, we haue heard tell of her wth oure eares.
But God seeth her way, and knoweth her place.

Job complained of the prosperite of the tyme past, sub-that Job suffered accordeyng to his deservynge.

Job proceeded and wente forth in (as sone as they sawe me) hyd them selues, and kept theyr voyce, and when theyr tonge cleued sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered y<sup>e</sup> the wyddowes hart praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghtuousnes, whych couered me was an eye to the blynde, and a foote to y<sup>e</sup> lame: I was a father vnto the poore: & when I knew not y<sup>e</sup> cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the spoule out of his teth.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest and that my dayes shoulde my roote was spred out by the water syde: and

The great despayre of men, and curse of God that Job suffereth.

At now they þ are yonger the I, haue me in derision yea, euen they whole fathers I wolde haue thought scoone to haue set wth the dogges of my cattel. The power & strength of theyr handes myghte dome no good, for the tyme is but lost amonge them. For very mysery and hunger they fled in to the wyldernesse, a darke place, horrible and wast, pluckynge vp nettels amonge the bushes and the iuniper rotes for theyr meate. And whē they were dyscuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had bene after a thefe. Theyr dwellynge was besyde foule brookes: yea in the caues and denues of the earth. Amonge the bushes wente they about cryenge: and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyldren of fooles and byllaynes which are veyred out of the worlde. * Now am I theyr songe and am become theyr iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, and fye farre from me, and stapne my face wth spetle. For the Lorde hath loosed the strength of my body, and brought me lowe: The byrdle haue they cast out of my syght. I pō my ryght hande vnto the yonge mē agaynst me, they haue yert my fete treadynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wold destroy. My pathes haue they cleane marred. It was so calye for them to do me harme, that they neded no mā to helpe them. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heape to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is touned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanquished a wave more swyftly then the wynde, and my prosperitie departed hence lyke as it were a cloud. Therefore is my mynde poured full of heynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearced thoro we in the nyght season, and my synewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorowe is my garment chaunged, and accordynge to the dyuersitie of heynesse, am I gyrded wth my coote. He hath cast me into the myre, and I am become lyke ashes and duste. Whē I crye vnto the, thou dost not heare me, and though I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and wth thy violente hande thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vpon hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou gyuen me a very sorowfull. Sure I am that thou wylt deliuer me vnto death: euen to þ lodgynge that is due vnto al men lyuyng. No doubt not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed already, but where hurt is done, there vnto they to helpe. Wd not I wepe wth hym þ was in trouble: had not my soule cōpassion vnto the poore? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euyl happened vnto me: & where as I wayted for lyght, there came darkenesse. My bowels seeth within me, & take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Wehely and lowly came I in: yea, and wthout any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion, & communed with them: But now I am a cōpanion of dragons, & a felow of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke, and my bones are bent wth heate: my herte is turned to sorowe and my yppe to wepyng.

The xxxi. Chapter:

Job receyved the innocencye of hys lyuynge, and knowde of hys vertues.

I made a couenaunt with myne eyes * that I wolde not loke vpon a dam-sell. For how great a porcion shal I haue of God? & what enberptauce fro the almyghty on hye? As for the vngodlye & he that toyneþ hym selfe to the company of wicked doers, shal not destruction & mys-ery come vnto hym? Doth not he se my wayes & tell all my goynges? yf I haue walked in va-nitye, or yf my feet haue rāne to disceyue, let me be wayed in an euen balaunce, that God may se myne innocencye. * If so be þ I haue withdrawen my feet out of the ryght waye, & yf my hert hath folowed myne eye syght: yf I haue stained or despyled my handes: thā shal I sowe, & an other eat: yea, my generaciō & posteritie shal be cleane rooted out. yf myne herte hath lusted after my neighbourys wyfe, or yf I haue layed wayte at hys doore. O then let my wyfe grinde vnto an other man, and let other mē lye wth her. * For this is a wyckednesse & synne, that is worthe to be punyshed: yea, a fyre that utterly shuld cōsume & root out all my substance. Wd I euer thynke scoone to do ryght vnto my seruantes & maydes, whē they had any matter agaynst me?
But seng þ God wyl lye in iudgement, what shal I do? And forsomuch as he wyl nedes by-lyte me, what answer shal I gyue hym? he that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not hym also: were we not both shapen alyke in our mothers bodies? When the poore despyred anye thyng of me, haue I denyed it? yea, haue I caused the wyddowe to stande waytynge for me in vayne: haue I eatē my porcyon alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte wth me: for mercy grewe vnto me fro my youth, & cōpassion from my mothers wombe. haue I bene any mā perpeth thoro nakednesse, & want of clothynge?
Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose spyes thanked me not, bycause he was warmed wth the woll of my shepe?

Wd I neuer lyft vp myne hande to hurt þ fatherlesse: yea, in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in aucthoritie, then let myne arme fall fro my shulders, and myne arme holes be broken fro

the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and knew very wel, that I was not able to beare hys burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I layde to the fynest golde of all. thou art my confidence? Haue I reioyced by cause my power was great, and by cause my hande gat so much? * Dyd I euer regarde greatly the ryling of the Sunne? Or had I the goynge downe of the Moone in great reputacion? Hath my herte medled prauelye woth any decept? Or dyd I euer kysse myne owne hande: that were a wyckednesse worthe to be punished, for then shuld I haue denyed the God that is aboue.

* Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of myne enemye? Or was I euer glad, that any harme happened vnto him? Oh, no: I neuer suffered my mouth to do suche a synne, as to wysh hym euil. Dyd not the men of myne owne household say: who shal let vs to haue our helyful of his fleshy? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye wthout, but I opened my doores vnto hym, that went by the waye. Haue I kept secret my synne, and hysd myne iniquitie, as Adam dyd? Haue I feared any great multitude of people: or yf I had bene dyspyled of the spmple, then shulde I haue ben affrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyf, and not gone out of the doze: That I had one whych wolde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. In the whych the almyghty shall answer for me: though he that is my contrarie partye hath wyrtten a booke agaynst me. Yet wyll I take hym vpon my shulder, and as a garlande about my heade. I wyll tel hym the nombre of my goynges, and go vnto hym as to a prynce. But yf case be, that my lande crye agaynst me, or that the fowles therof make any complaynt: Yf I haue eat the frutes therof vnpayd for: yea, yf I haue greued any of the plowmen: the let thy stiles growe in steade of my wheat, and cockle for my barleye.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Eliahu after the other had synned theye communt: eachen reproveth the other of synne, and age maketh not a man wiser: but the sprete of God.

Elisa the sonne of Sarachell, the Bullite of the kynred of Ram, was verely sore dyspleased at Job, by cause he helde hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Eliahu sonne of Barachell, the Bullite of the kynred of Ram, was verely sore dyspleased at Job, by cause he called hym selfe in steade of God. And wh Job's thre frendes he was angry also because they had found no resonable answer to ouercome Job. Now taried Eliahu, til they had ended their communication wth Job, for wher they were elder then he. So when Eliahu the sonne of Barachell the Bullite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answer: he was myscontent. Eliahu the sonne of Barachell the Bullite answered hym selfe, & sayd * Consydeyringe, that I am yonge, and ye be me of age: I was afrayd and durste not shewe forth my mynde. For I thought thus within my selfe. It becometh olde men to speake, and the aged to teache wysdom. Every man (no doubt) hath a mynde, but it is the inspiration of the Almyghty that giveth vnderstandynge. Grete men are not alwaye wyse, neyther doth euery aged man vnderstande the thyng that is lawfull. Therefore, wyll I speake also (heare me) and I wyll shewe you also myne vnderstandynge. For wher I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and hearde youre wysedome, what argumentes ye made in your communication: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayd, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coude make answer vnto hys wordes: lest ye shulde saye: We haue soude out wysedome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. He hath not spokē vnto me, and I wyll not answer him as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coude not make answer, nor speake one worde, but in so much as ye wyll not speake, standynge still lyke domme men, & makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shawe hym an answer, and to shewe hym my menynge: For I am full of wordes, & the spete that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, whiche hath no vent, and bursteth the newe vesselles in sonder. Therefore wyll I speake, & I maye haue a vent: I wyll open my lippes, and make answer. I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no man wyll I spare. For yf I wolde go about to please men, I knowe not how soone my maker wolde take me awaye.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Eliahu sheweth wordes in Job's offensed: wth God maps we not streue, nor curiouslye searche out hys wordes.

Therefore, heare my wordes. N Job and herken vnto me al. I wyll saye: Beholde, I haue nowe opened my mouth, my tōge hath spokē in my throte. My herte doth orde my wordes aright, & my lippes talke of your pure wysedom. The sprete of God hath made me, and the breath of the almyghty hath geuen me my lyfe: Yf thou canst, then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me, face to face. Beholde, before God am I euen as thou, for I am fashioned and made enen of the same molde. Therefore, thou needest not to be afrayed of me, neyther needest thou to feare that my authoritie shalbe to greue for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faute, I am vnocent, & there is no wyckednesse in me.

Gen. 1. 1. b

But lo, he hath pycked a quarel agaynst me, and taketh me for hys enemye. * he hath put my foote in the stocks, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, in this hast thou not done ryght. D He chastereth hym wyth syckenesse, & byngeth hym to his bed. he layeth soze punishment vpon his bones, so that his lyfe maye awaye wyth no breade, and his soule abhorreth to eat any dayntye meate: in so muche that his bodie is cleane consumed awaye, and his bones appere nomore. his life draweth vnto the graue and his lyfe to death. Now yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousand) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is merciful vnto hym, & sayeth: he shalbe deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue for I am sufficiently reconcyled.

Then shall his flesh be as well lykynge as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in his yowth. For yf he submitte hym selfe vnto God, he shalbe gracious vnto hym, and shewe hym his countenance ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his ryghteousnes. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore, let a man confesse (and saye) I haue offended: I dyd vnrightheously, and it hath done me no good. Pea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall se the lyght. So, thus worketh God alway wyth man that he kepeth his soule from perishing, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyfynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the still, and I wyll speake. But yf thou hast any thyng to say, then answer me, and speake: for thy answer please me. Yf thou haste no thyng, then heare me, and holde thy tounge: so shall I teache the wysedome:

gement let vs seke it out amonge our selues, & we may knowe what is good. And why? Job hath sayd I am ryghteous, but God doth me wroge I must nedes be a liar. though my cause be ryght, and violentlye I am plaged where as I made no fault, where is there such a one as Job, that drynketh vp scornfulnesse, lyke water? whiche goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walkech wyth vngodly men: for he hath sayde, though a man be good, yet is he nauzhe before God. Therefore hearken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

workes of man, and cause every man to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that * God condempneth no man wronfullye, and the iudgement of the almyghtye is not vnrigh- teous: Who ruleth the earth in his steade? Or whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whome hath he geuen his herte, for to draw his sprete and breath vnto hym? All flesh shall come together vnto naughte, and all men shal turne agayne vnto * duille. Yf thou now haue vnderstandynge heare what I saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryghte? Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the kynge: Thou arte wycked, or thou arte vngodlye, and that before the prynces? * He hath no respecte vnto the persones of the lord- lyce, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore. For they be all the worke of his han- des. In the twynchelynge of an eye shal they dye: and at mydnyght when the people and the tyrantes rage, then shall they perishe and be taken awaye wythout handes: And wher- * his eyes loke vpon the warcs of man and he seyth all his goynge. There is no darkenes nor shadow of death, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement wyth God.

Many one: pea innumerable doeth he pun- ish, and setteth other in theyr steades. Ther- fore shall he declare theyr workes, he shal turne the nyghte, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the steade of Seares, dealt lyke vngodlye men: and therefore he punished them, be- cause they turned backe from hym, and wolde not consyder all his wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complaynt of suche as are in trouble.

Yf he graunt pardone, who wyll condemne? And yf he hyde awaye his countenance, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus wyll he do. For the vngod- lynesse of the people, doth God make an pproit to ragne ouer them. For so muche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hynde the. Yf I haue done amysse, enforme thou- me: Yf I haue done wronge, I wyll leaue of. Can he do nothyng wythout the? For thou haste reprobud his iudgement. Thou also haste thynne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandynge tell me, and let a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the pur- pose: nor wyllye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wycked men: pea, about his synne he doth wyckedlye: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplyeth his wordes agaynst God.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Eliphaz saith the iustice of God: or vngodlynesse hurteth God: but to man.

D Eliphaz

I thou speake moreouer, and said. Thinkest thou it ryght, that thou speakest: I am righteous before God? For thou sayest. What aduantage wyl it be vnto the, and what profyte shalte thou haue of my synne. Therefore wyl I geue answere vnto the, and to thy companions wyth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou.

Yf thou hast sinned, what hast thou done agaynst hym? Yf thynne offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? Yf thou be ryghteous what gyueth thou hym? Or what wyl he recctue of thynne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be: ther is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed wyth violence, yea euery mā complayneth vpo the crueltye of tyrauntes.

For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that gyueth vs occasion to prayse hym in þ nyght? Whych gyueth vs more vnderstandynge then he doth the bestes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doth þ foules of heauen.

No man can complayne, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpo God, doth not he heare hym? Doeth not the Almighty accepte hys crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardone the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym? Then vicht he no violence in hys wyath, neither hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisitiones. Therefore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and foolishly doth he make so many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.
Job sheweth wherfore God punyssheth and correcteth.

I thou proceeded forth in hys talkynge, and sayd: holde the still a lytle, & I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandynge, and proue my matter ryghteous. And truly, my wordes shall not be vayne, for he is wyth the that is presyde in knowlege, beholde the great God casteth awaye no man, for he hym selfe is myghtye in power & wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not preserue him but shal helpe the poore to theyr ryght. he shal turne hys eyes a waye from the ryghteous, but as kynge shal they be in theyr trone: he shal stablish the them for euer, and they shal be exalted.

But yf they be layed in prison and chaynes, or bounde wyth the bondes of trouble, then wyl he shewe them theyr worke and þ synnes wherwyth they haue vled cruel violence.

He wyth punysshynge and nurreynge of the roundeth the in the care, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckednesse, and to amende. * Yf they nowe wyl take hede and serue hym, they shal were out theyr dayes in prosperite, & theyr yeares in pleasure: and ioye. But yf they wyl not herken, they shal go thorowe the swerde, and perthe or euer they be aware. As for suche as be fained hypocrites, they shal heape vpon wyath for the selues: for they cal not vpo hym, though they be hys prisoners. Thus shal theyr soule perthe in foolysheite, and theyr lyfe shal be condemned amonge the fornicatours. The poore shal be deliuered out of hys affliction, and rounde them in the care when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (yf thou wylt be contente) fro the bottomlesse pyt that is beneth: and yf thou wylt holde the quyte, he shal fyll thy table wyth plenteousnesse.

Reuerthelesse: thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodlye, yea, euen such a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffer.

For then shal not thy cause be stylled wyth crueltye, nor pacified wyth many gyftes. Thinkest thou, that he wyl regarde thy rychelesse? he shal not care for golde, nor for al them that excel in strength. Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyl there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aslyde to wyckednesse and synne, whiche hether to thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghtye hye power. Where is ther suche a guyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyl reprove hym of hys waye? Who wyl save vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

Consyder howe great & excellent hys workes be, whome al men loue and prayse: yea wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde: so greete is God, that he passeth oure knowlege, neyther are we able to come to the experience of hys peares. * He turneth the water to small droppes, he dryueth hys cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure downe & droppe vpon men. he can sprede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottomie of the see. By these thynges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate. Wyth the cloudes he hydeth the lyght & at hys commaundement it cometh agayne. The rplynge vpon therof sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the cattell.

Job proueth that the wysedome of God is vnsearchable.

A thys my herte is astonnyed, & I am moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of hys voyce, and the noyse that goeth oute of hys mouth. he gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, and hys lyghte teacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A rorynge voyce foloweth hym: for hys gloruous maiestye gyueth suche a thondre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out hys voyce: great thynges doeth he whiche we can not comprehend. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As loone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the thow-ers haue theyr strength, and fall downe.

H

C He sendeth feare vpon euerye man, that they myght know theyr owne workes. The beastes crepe into theyr denues, and take theyr rest: out of the South cometh the tempest, and colde out of the North.

At the breath of God the frooste cometh, and the waters are shed abroad. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in geyng moynesse, and agayne with his lyght he dypueth away the cloude. He distributeth also on euery syde, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale. At his workes: that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thowre the whole worlde whether it be to punyssh any land, or to do good vnto them that feke hym.

C Herken vnto this, O Job. Stand still, and consydre the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of counsaile with God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsaile, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, when the land is still thowre the South wynde? Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shal saye vnto hym, for we are vnnete bycause of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what we saye? Shulde a man speake or shoulde he kepe it backe? For euerye man seeth not the lyghte that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe: Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse and honour of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equitie and ryghtousnesse: he is hyer then can be expressed. Let men therfore feare him, for there is no man so dum, that is wyse in his owne conceit.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The wordes and maruailes that the Lorde hath done from the begynnyng.

When answered the Lorde vnto Job, out of the storme, & sayd: what is he þy dyeth his mynde with foolyshe wordes? * Spyd vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyll questyon with the: se, thou gyue me a direct answer.

Where wast thou when I layed the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou hast vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spred the lyne vpon it?

Where vpon stande the pylles of it? Or who layed the corner stone therof? Where wast thou when the moynynge starres prayled me to gyther, and all the children of God reioysed triumphantly? * Who shut the see with doords, when it brake forth as a chylde oute of hys mothers

Womb? When I made the cloudes to be a coueryng for it, and swadled it with the duche: When I gaue it my commaundement, makynge doores and barres for it, sayinge: hitherto shalte thou come, but no farther, and here shalte thou laye downe thy proude and hye waues. Hast thou gyuen the moynynge his charge (as sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spynges hys place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be shakken out? Theyr tokens and weapons are tourned lyke claye, and set vp agayne: as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe disapoynted of theyr lyght and the arme of þy proude shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the ground of the see? or walkedst in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou seene the doores of the shadow of death? Hast thou also perceyued howe brode the earth is? Yf thou hast knowledge of all this, then shew me where lyght dwelleth: and where darkenesse is: that thou mayest bypunge vs vnto theyr quarters, yf thou canst tel the way to their houles.

Knewest thou þy afoze þy waste borne) howe olde thou shouldest be? Wentest thou euer into the treasures of þy snow? or hast thou seene the secreete places of the bayle, * whiche I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre? By what way is the lyght parted, and into what lande breaketh the east wynde? Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers? or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenynge and thundre, that it watereth and moystureth the dry and barren ground: to make the grasse growe, in places where nobody dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remaineth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hath begotten the droppes of dew? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hath gendred the coldenesse of the aye, that the waters are as harde as stones: and yce congeled aboue the depe? Wylte thou byndre the swete influences of the seuen starres? Or art thou habile to breake the cyle of heauen?

Canst thou bringe forth the moynynge starre, or the euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, and conuey them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordynance therof vpon the earth? Whoeuer, canst thou lyft vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poure downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canst thou thundre also that they may go theyr waye, and be obedyente vnto the, sayinge: Lo, here are we? Who gyueth sure wysedome, or stedfast vnderstandynge? Who nombzeth the cloudes in wysdome? Who stylyeth the vehement waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne? Wylte thou hunte the praye from the ipon, or fede hys whelpes lyng in theyr denues, and luryng in theyr couteys? Who * prouydeth meate for the rauen, when his yonges crye vnto God, and flye about for lacke of meate?

Knowest thou the tyme when the wyld geestes bynge forth theyr yonge amonge the stoupe rocks? Or layest thou waite when the byrdes vse to fawne? reckenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearynge? Or when they lye downe, when they cast theyr yonges, and when they are deliuered of theyr trauaile and payne: how they yonges growe vp, and ware greates thow we good fedynge? When they go forth and retorne not agayne vnto them: who letteth the wyld ass go free, or who looseth the bondes of the mule? Euen I which haue giuen the wylder nesse to be theyr house and the vntilled lande to be theyr dwelling place. That they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cities neyther regarde the crynge of the dyspurer: but seke theyr pasture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene grasse. Wyl the vntoome be so tame as to do the seruyce, or to abyde stil by thy cryble? Canst thou bynde the poke aboute the ynnocent in thy sorowe, to make hym plowe after the in the valleyes? Wappest thou tenst hym, (because he is stronge) or commyt thy labour vnto hym? Wappest thou beleue hym, that he wyl bring home thy corne, or to carry any thing vnto thy barne? Sauest thou the fayre wynges vnto the perowes, or wynges and fethers vnto the storkes? It is he leaueth his egges in the earth and layeth them in the dust: he remembereth not that they myght be troden with feet, or broken with some wyld beast. So hard is he vnto his yonges, as though they were not his, and labourerth in wayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wysedome from hym, and hath not giuen hym vnderstandynge. Whē his tyme is that he flyeth vp on hye, he careth neyther for horse nor man.

Euen thou giuen the horse his strength or leueth hym to beare downe his necke with feare, that he letteth hym selfe be dryuen forth lyke a gallopper, where as the stoupe neynges that he maketh, is fearefull: he breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his feete chearefullye in his strength, and runneth to mete the harness men. He layeth abyde all feare, his stomacke is not abated, neyther starteth he at a lacke for any sword. Though the quyers rattle vpon hym, though the spere and shyld glysteth, yet russeth he in fearelesse, and beatech vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the Tawines blowe, russeth, (sayth he, for he smelleth the byrtayle a fenne of, the noyse the captaynes, and the shoutynge.

Commeneth it therfore that wysdome, that the geistlike flyeth towards the south? Seeth the eagle mount vp and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abideth in the stoupe rocks and vpon the toppes of the harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence seeth he his pray, and loketh far about with his eyes his yonges are fed with bleade: and any dysc body lyeth, there is he immediatly

Now, God spake vnto Job, and sayde: Can he that stryuethe with the almyghtye, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answer? Job answered the Lord, saying: Beholde, I am to vyle a person to answer the, therfore wyl I laye myne hand vpon my mouth. Once or twyle haue I spoken, but I wyl saye nomore.

Then answered the Lord vnto Job out of the storme, and sayd: *gyrd vp thy loynes now lyke a man, and tell me the thynges that I wyl aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous? Is thy power the n lyke the power of God? Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as his doth? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power: vp, decke the in thy colye araye, poure oute the indignacion of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all the proude, loke well that thou makest suche as be stubburne to obey: tread downe all the vngodly in theyr place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer theyr faces with darkenesse. Then wyl I confesse vnto the also, that thyne owne ryght hand shal save the.

Beholde the beaste Schemoth (whome I made with the) which eateth haye as an ore lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauill of his bodye. He spreadeth out his taylor lyke a Cedre tree, al his baynes are styffe. His thynges are lyke pyres of brasse, his rydye bones are lyke stauies of yron. styffe, when God made hym, he ordayned the wyldernesse for hym: that the mountaynes shuld geue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the mosses, the fennes hyde hym with theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the brooke couer hym rounde about. He withoute any labour myght he drynke out of the whole floude, and syp of Jordan without any trauaile. Who darre laye hand vpon hym openly, and undertake to catche hym? Or who darre put an hooke thow we his nose, and laye a snare for hym?

Darrest thou draw out * Lemetha with an angle, or bynde his tonge with a snare? Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hye, or bore his chawer thow we with a naule? Wil he make man nre saye wordes with the, (thynkest thou) or flatter the wyl he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou habile to compell hym to do the continual seruyce? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with him as a byrde, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companions maye make refection of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the marchant men? Canst thou syl the basket with his skynne, or the fysshpannet with his heed? Darrest thou laye hand vpon hym? It is better for the to consydre what harme myght happen there.

therethowwe, and not touche hym. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall begyle the.

The xli. Chapter.

Of the same Leupathen which is mentioned in the Chapters afore.

A man is so cruell that is hable to styre hym vp. * Who is hable to stande before me? Or who hath gyuen me any thyng afore hande, that I maye rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauē are myne. I feare him not whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyf- teth hym vp, or steppeth him out of his clothes or who taketh hym by the bytte of his byddle? Who openeth the dore of his face? For he hath horrible teeth rounde about. His body is con- creted with scales, as it were with wyldes lockt in kept and well compact togyther. One is so iop- ned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Pea, one hanger is so vpon an other, and stycketh so togyther, that they can not be sondred. His ne- syng is lyke a glysteepnge fyre, and his eyes lyke the moornyng myne. Out of his mouth go torches, and oute of his n. strelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of annote sethyng pot. His breath maketh the coles burne, and the flame goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remaineth strength, and nothyng is a laborious for hym. The membres of his body are iopned so strypte one to an other, and cleue so fast togyther, that he can not be moned.

Chis herte is as hyrde as a stone, and as fast as the stythe that the smyth impteth vpon.

When he goeth the myghete are astayed, and feare troubleth them. If anye man drawe out a swerde at hym, it shall not hurt hym: there may neyther speare, tanchyng nor brestplate abyde hym. He setteth as moche by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by brasse. He starteth not away for hym that bendeth þ bowe and as for spage stones, he carcth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the darters no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorne that waketh the speare: he treadeth the golde in the myre, lyke the harde pottherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth the see togyther lyke an opntment. He maketh a pathe to be seue after hym, the deepe is his walkyng place. vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto his: for his is so madethat he feareth not. If a mā wyll consydre all hys thynges, this is a kyng over all the chyldren of pryde.

The xlii. Chapter

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for his fren- des, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

When Job answered the Lorde, and sayde: * I knewe that thou hast po- wer over all thynges, and that there is no thought bydde vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsayl so secrete, but it shalbe knowen? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstand not, the thynges that are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: an- swere vnto the thyng that I wyll aske the. I haue gyuen diligent eare vnto the, and nowe I se the with myne eyes. Wherefore, I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in dust and ashes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these wo- des vnto Job, it fortuneth, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thing that is ryght: lyke as my seruant Job hath done.

Therefore, take pou now seven oxen and seue- rammes, and go to my seruant Job, and * offre- up for your selues a burnt offeryng and my ser- uant Job shall praye for you. hym wyll I ac- cept: and not deale with you after your foolish- nesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thing which is ryght, lyke as my seruant Job hath done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Beldad the Shubite, and Sopbar the Naamathite wēt theyr waye, and byd accordyng as the Lorde co- manded them. * The Lorde also accepted the personne of Job, and the Lorde turned the cap- tivitye of Job, when he prayd for his frendes: Pea the Lorde gaue Job * as wyll as moche as he had afore.

And then came there vnto hym all his bre- thren, all his systers, and all they that had bene of his aqua yntaunce afore, and byd cate breed with hym in his house, wondryng at hym, and comfortyng hym over all the trouble that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euerie man also gaue hym a certayne summe of moneye, and a iewel of golde.

And the Lorde made Job ryche: then he was before: for he had fourtene. *th. shepe, spre. *th. ca- mels. a. *th. yoke of ore, and a th. asses. he had seven sounes also, and thre daughters. The first daughter called he Jemina, the seconde Re- zia, and the thyrde Kerenhabuch. In al the land were no women founde so fayre as the dought- ers of Job: and the y father gaue them enhe- ritytaunce amonge theyr brethren. After this lyued Job a hundred and four- ty yeres, so that he sawe * his chyldren, and his chyldres chyldre into the fourth generation. And so Job dyed being olde and of a perfect age.

BEATUS VIR QUI NON ABIT.

Blessed is that man that hath not walked in the counsell of the vngodlye, nor stande in the waye of synners, and hath not spt in the seat of the scornfull. But his delyste is in the lawe of the Lorde: and in hys lawe wyl he exerce lym selfe daye and nyghte. And he shalbe lyke a tree planted by the water syde, that wyl bynge forth the hys frute in due season. Hys leafe also shal not wyther and loke what soeuer he doeth, it shal prosper. As for the vngodlye, it is not so wythe them: but they are lyke the chaffe whiche the wynde scattereth awayne from the face of the earth. Therefore the vngodlye shal not be able to stande in the iugement, neither the synners in the congregacion of the righteous. But the Lorde knoweth the waye of the ryghteous, and the waye of the vngodlye shal perishe.

Let vs breake theyr bondes a sunder, and cast awaye theyr cordes from vs. He that dwelleth in heauen shal laughe them to scorn: the Lorde shal haue them in derisyon. Then shal he speake vnto them in his wrath, and bere them in bysure. Yet haue I set my kynge in hyll of Syon. I wyl shew of the Lorde hathe Whyle myne enemyes are dyspnt backe, they shall fall, & perishe at thy presence. For thou hast maynteyned my ryght, & my cause: thou art set in the trone & iudgeth right. Thou hast rebuked the heathen & destroyed the vngodly, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever: O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetuall ende: even as the cyties which thou hast destroyed, their memorialis perisshed with the. But thou Lord shalt endure for ever, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgement. For he shall iudge & worlde in ryghtconnes, & mynistrer true iudgement vnto the people. The vngodlye is so proude that he careth not for God, neyther is God in all his thoughtes. Hys wayes are alwaye greuous, thy iudgements are fare aboue out of hys syght, and therfore despeth he all hys enemyes. For he hath sayd in hys herte: Tush I shall neuer be caste downe, there shall no harme happen vnto me. * Hys mouth is full of cursynge, and dysceate and fraude, vnder hys tounge is vngodlynes & vanytye. * He lytteth lurynges in the theuys corners of the stretes, & preyely in hys lurynges dens doeth he murder the innocent, hys eyes are set agaynst & poore. He hath sayd in his herte: Tush, God hath forgotten, he hydeth away his face, and he wyl neuer se it. Arise (O Lord God) & lyft vp thyne hande, forget not the poore. Therfore shuld the wycked blaspheme God, whyle he doth saye in his herte. tush, thou God carest not for it: Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngodlynes and wronge. That thou mayst take the matter into thy hande the poore comitteth hym selfe vnto the, for thou art & helper of the frendlesse. DILIGAM TE DOMINE.

To the chaunter of Dauid the seruaunte of the Lorde, which spake vnto þe Lorde the wordes of this songe (in the day þe Lorde deliuered him from the hande of all hys enemyes, & from the hande of Saule) and he sayde.

I will loue þe, O Lorde, my strength. The Lorde is my stony rock, & my defence, my sauiour, my God, and my might, in whom I will trust, my bucker, & hoine alio of my saluatiõ, & my refuge. *

psal. xlviii. a

I will call vpon þe Lorde which is worthy to be prayesed, so shall I be safe fro myne enemyes.

mat. xlviii. e

* The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerflowinges of vngodlynesse made me afraycd. The paynes of hell came about me, & snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble will I call vpon the Lorde, & complayne vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his (dore) temple & my complaint shall come before him, it shall entre euen into his eares. * The earth trebled & quaked, the very foundaciõs alio of the hilles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth.

There went a smoke out in his presence: & a consuming fyre oute of hys mouthe, so that cooles were kindled at it. He bowed the heauens alio, and came downe, & it was darke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon þe cherubyns, & dyd flye, he came flying vpon the winges of the wynde. He made darknesse hys secrete place his paurlton roud about him w dark water & thicke cloudes to couer him. At the brightnesse of his presence his cloudes remoued, haylestones, & cooles of fyre. The Lorde also thõdyed out of heauẽ, & the best gaue his thunder, haylestones & cooles of fire.

He sent out his arrowes and scattered them, he cast forth lightnings, & destroyed them. The springes of waters were sene, & the foundaciõs of the round world were discouered at thy chydug. O Lorde, at þe blasting of the breth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe fro the heigth to fetch me, and shall take me oute of many waters. He shall deliuer me fro my strongest enemy, & from the which hate me: for they are to mighty for me. They preuented me in þe dape of my trouble: but the Lorde was my vpholder. He brought me forth also into a place of lyberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a fauoure vnto me. The Lorde shall rewarde me after my ryghteous dealing: according to the cleynes of my handes shall he recõpence me. Because I haue kept the wayes of þe Lorde: & haue not forsaken my God as þe wycked doth. For I haue an eye vnto al his lawes & will not cast out his comãdementes from me. I was also vncorrupt before him: & eschued myne owne wyckednes.

Therefore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my ryghteous dealing: & accordynge vnto the cleynes of my handes in hys eye syghte. With the holy thou shalt be holy, & with a perfect man þe shalt be perfect. With þe cleane thou shalt be cleane: & with the froward thou shalt learne frowardnes: for thou shalt saue the people þe are in aduersite, & shalt bringe downe þe hye lokes of þe proude. Thou also shalt lyght my candel the Lorde my God shall make my darkenes to be light. For in the I shall dysconfyte an host of men: ad w the helpe of my God I shall lepe ouer þe wal. The way of God is an vndefyled way * the worde of the Lorde also is tryed in þe fyre: he is þe defender of al the that put their trust in him. For * who is God but the Lorde, or who hath any strength except our God? It is God that gyrdeth me w strength of warre & maketh my way perfect. * He maketh my fete lyke heres fete & setteth me vpon hys. * He teacheth myne handes to fyghte, and myne armes shall breake euen a bowe of stele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluatiõ: thy ryght hande also shall holde me vp, & thy louyng correciõ shall make me great. Thou shalt make rote me ynough vnder me for to go, & my fete shal not slippe. I will folowe vpon myne enemyes, & ouertake the, neyther will I turne agayne, tyll I haue destroyed the. I will synpte the, that they shal not be able to stande: but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast gyrded me w strength vnto the battayle, thou shalt throwe downe myne enemyes vnder me. For my lyfe is waten olde wythe heynesse, and myne peares wythe mournynge.

The. xxxiii. psalme.

IN VLTATE IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Reioyse in the Lord, O ye righteous, for it becommeth wel y lust to be thac full. * Prayse y Lord wth harpe, singinge psalmes vnto hym wth the lute and instrument of ten strynges. Synge vnto the Lord a newe songe, singe psalms in help: & (vnto hym) with a good corage. For the worde of the Lord is true, and all his workes are saythfull. He loueth righteousnesse & iudgemēt, the earth is full of y goodnes of y Lord. * By the worde of y Lord are the heauens made: & al the hostes of the by y breath of his mouth.

He gathereth the waters of the see togyther as it were vpon an hepe, & layeth vp the depe as in a treasure house. Let all y earth feare the Lord: stande in awe of him, all ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lord bringeth y a consayl of y heathē to nought, & maketh y deuises of the people, to be of none effect: & (and casteth out the counsailes of wynters.) The counsaile of the Lord shall endure for euer: and y thoughtes of his hert from generacyon to generacion. Blessed are the people, whose God is the Lord Jehonah, and blessed are the folke y haue cholen hym to be their inheritance. The Lord loked downe from heauē, and behelde al y chyliden of men: from the habytacyon of bys dwellynge, he consydreth all the that dwell in the earth. He fastyoneth all the vertes of the, and vnderstandeth all theyr workes. There is no kynge that can be laued by the multitude of an gell of the Lord persecute the. For they haue pruely layed their net to destroye me woute a cause, yea eue wythout a cause haue they made a pyt for my soule. Let a sodayne destruccyon come vpon hym vnawares, and hys net that he hath laied pruely, catch him selfe: that he may fall into his owne myschefe. And my soule be topfull in the Lord: it shall reioyce in his saluacivnto y: whych deliuereth the poore from hym that is to strong for him: yea, the poore and him that is in miserie from hym that spyleth him.

False witnesse didrse vp: they layed to my charge thynge that I knowe not. They rewarded me euyl for good, to the greate discomfort of my soule. Reuerthelesse, when they were sycke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule wyth fastynge and my prayer shall tourne into mine owne bolome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frende or my brother. I went heuyl, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in myne aduersyte they re-ioysed, & gathered the togyther: yea, the verpe abiectes came togyther agaynst me vnawares, makynge mooves at me, and ceased not. With the flatterers were busy mockers, which gnasseth vpon me with their teeth. Lorde, howe longe wylt thou loke vpon this? O deliuer my soule fro the calamities whych they brynge on me, and my deaerling from the lyons. So

The. xxxvi. psalme.

DIXIT IN IVSTVS.

To þe chaunter of Dauid the seruaunt of þe Lord.

My herte sheweth me the wyckednes of the vngodly, þat there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flattereth him self in his owne sight, tyl his abhominable synne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vncyghteous & full of dysceite: he hath lest of to behaue him self wylful & to do good. He ymagyneth myschefe vpon his bed, and hath set him selfe in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thing that is euyl. Thy mercy O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy saythfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the greates depe. Thou Lord shalt saue both man and best. How excellēt is thy mercy O God: & the chyldren of men shall put their trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satysfied with þe plenty of thy house, & thou shalt geue the dysnye of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For with the is þe well of lyfe, & in thy lyght, shall we see lyght. Continue forth thy louyng kindnesse vnto them that knowe the, & thy ryghteousnesse vnto the that are true of herte. Let not the foote of pryde come agaynst me and let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. There are they fallen & they worke wickednesse: they are cast downe and shall not be able to stande.

The. xxxvii. psalme.

NOLITE ENVLARE.

Let not thy selfe bycause of the vngodly: neyther be thou enuyous agaynst the euyl doers. For they shall be cut downe lyke the grasse, & be wylted as the grene herbe. Put þe thy trust in the Lord, and doo good: dwell in the land & verely thou shalt be led. Welte thou in the Lord, & he shall geue the thy bestes desire. Commit thy way vnto þe Lord, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall brynge it to passe. He shall make thy ryghteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, & thy iust dealynge as the none daye.

Hold the styl in þe Lord, and abyde patiently vpon him, but greue not thy selfe at him whose waye doth prospere agaynst the man þe doth after enell counsailes. Leue of from wrath, & let go displeasure fret not thy selfe, els shalt thou be moued to do euyl. Wycked doers shall be rooted out: & they that patiently abyde the Lord, those shall enherit the land. Yet a lytle while, and the vngodly shall be cleue gone: thou shalt loke after his place & he shall be away. But þe make spured shall possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly seeketh couasall agaynst the iust, & gnaseth vpon him wylth his teeth. The Lord shall laugh hym to scorn, for he hath seene, that his daye is comyng. The vngodly haue drawen out þe sweard, & haue bided their bowe, to cast downe the poore & nedye, & to slaye such as be of righte conuersacion. Their swerde shall go thorow their owne hert, and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng that the ryghteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and þe Lord vpholdeth the ryghteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly, and their enheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perillous tyme, & in the dayes of deth they shall haue ynough. As for þe vngodly, they shall perishe and the enemies of the Lord shall consume, as the fat of lābes, yea, euē as the smoke shall they consume awaye.

The vngodly borroweth ad payeth not againe, but the ryghteous is mercifull and liberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse þe land, & they that be cursed of him, shall be rooted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans goynge, and maketh his waye acceptable to hym selfe.

* Though he fall, he shall not be caste awaye, for the Lord vpholdeth hym with his hande. I haue bene yonge, & nowe am olde: and yet sawe I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor his seede beggynge theyr breade. * The ryghteous is euer mercifull, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Flye from euyl, and do the thyng that is good: and dwell for euer. For the Lord loueth the thinge that is ryght, he forsaketh not his þe godly, but they are preserved for euermore:

For the vngodly, it shall be rooted oute. The ryghteous shall enherit the lande, and dwell therein for euer. * The mouth of the ryghteous is exercised in wysdome, & his tonge shall be talking of iudgement. The lawe of his God is in his hert, and his goynge shall not slide. The vngodly seeth the ryghteous & seeketh occasyon to slaye hym. The Lord wyll not leaue him in his hande, nor condempne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his waye, & he shall promote þe, that thou shalt possesse the lande when the vngodly shall perishe, & shalt see it. I my selfe haue seene the vngodly in great power, & flozshynge lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by and loo, he was gone: I sought him, but he was not: he coulde no where be founde. Repente, and take lede vnto þe thyng that is ryght, for that shall brynge a man peace at the laste.

As for the transgressours they shall perishe together, and the ende of þe vngodly is, they shall be rooted out at the last. But the saluacion of the ryghteous cometh of the Lord, which is also their strength in the tyme of trouble. And þe Lord shall stand by the, & saue the: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, & shall saue the, bycause they put their trust in þe.

prelieth me sore. There is no health in my flesh, because of thy displeasure, neither is there any rest in my bones, by reason of my synne. For my wickednesses are gone ouer my heed, and are lyke a sore burthen, to heuie for my to beare.
My woundes stynte & are corrupt, thowoe my foolishnesse. I am brought into so great trouble and myserye, that I go mourninge al day longe. For my loynes are fylled with a sore di-scale, and there is no whole part in my bodie.

I am feble and sore smytte. I haue rored for þy very displeasure of my herte. Lord thou knowest mouth are no reproches. For in the, O Lord, O Lord my God. I haue requyred, that they for when my fote slpyte, they reioyled greatlye wyl confesse my wickednesse, & be sorowful for my synne. But myne enemyes lyue, & are myghare agaynst me, because I folowe the thynges þy

DIXI CUSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter Jeduthun.

a Psalme of Dauid.

Job. xlii. c I sayde: I wyl take hede to my way-es that I offende not in my tonge. I wyl kepe my mouth (as it were) with a bydle, while the vngodly is in my syght. I helde my tonge, and spake nothing.
I kept silence, yea, euen from good wordes, but it was payne & greife to me. My herte was hote wythin me, & whyle I was thus musynge, the fyrre kindled: & (at the laste) I spake wyth my tonge: * Lord, let me knowe myne ende, & the nomibre of my dayes: that I maye be certyfyed howe longe I haue to lyue. * Beholde, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and myne age is euen as nothing in respecte of the: & verily euery man lyuing is altogether va-nitye. Selah. For man walketh in a vayne, shadowe, and disquieteth him selfe in vayne, he heapeth vprychesse: & cannot tell who shall gather the. And nowe Lord, what is my hope? truly my hope is euen in the. Delyuer me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the folke. I became comme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plage away from me: I am eue consumed by the meanes of thy heuy hande. Whē thou with rebukes dost chastē man for synne, þy makest his hentye to consume a way, like as it were a moth fretting a garment. Euery mā therfore is but vanitie. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lord, and wth thyne eares cōspyre my calling: hold not thy peace at my teares. For * I am a straunger with the, & a sojourner, as all my fathers were. Oh spare me a lytle, & I may recouer my strength, before I go hēce, and be nomore sene.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI:

To the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

Job. xlii. d I waited paciētly for þy Lord, & he enclined vnto me, & hearde my calling. He brought me also oute of þy horrible pyn, out of the myre and claye, & set me fete vpon þy rock & ordred my goynges. And he hath put a newe songe in my mouth, eue a thankesgyuinge vnto our God. Many shall feare: & shall put their trust in the Lord. * Blessed is þy mā, that hath set his hope in þy Lord, & tourned not vnto the proude: & to suche as go aboute wlyes. O Lord my God, great are thy wonderous workes, which thou hast done: like as be al so thy thoughtes which are to vs ward: and yet there is nomā þy ordred the vnto þy. If I wold declare them, & speake of the, they shoulde be mo-offeryng thou woldest not haue, but myne ea-res hast thou openyd burnt offrynges and sacrifice for synne hast thou not requyred. The sayd I: Lo, I come. In the volume of þy booke it is writte of me, & I shuld fulfyll thy wyl. O my God I am content to do it: yea, thy lawe is wythin my herte. I haue declared thy ryghteousnesse in þy great cōgregacyō. Lo, I wyl not restraune my lippes O Lord, and that þy knowest. I haue not byd thy righteousness within my herte, my tal-kinge hath bene of thy truth & of thy saluacyō.

I haue not kept backe thy louinge mercye and truth fro the great cōgregacion. Withdawe not þy mercy from me O Lord: let thy louyng kindnesse & thy truth alway preserue me. For in numerable troubles are come about me, my sin-nes haue takē such holde vpon me, that I am not habile to lōke vp: yea, they are mo in nobye then the beeres of my heed, & my herte hath failed me.
O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to delyuer me, make haste (O Lord) to helpe me. Let them be ashamed & confounded togyther þy seke after my soule to destroye it: let the be dyspued back-warde & be put to rebuke that wylde me euyl.
Let the be desolat & rewarded wth shame þy save þy, be ioyfull & glad in the: & let such as loue thy saluacyō, saye alway: the Lord be praysed. As hast done in their tyme of olde. Howe thou hast dyspūe out þe heathen w thy hāde, & planted the in howe þe hast destroyed the nations, & cast the out. * For they gat not the lande in possession thowowe their owne swerd, neither was it their owne arme þe helped them.

But thy ryght hāde, & thyne arme, & the lighte

For I wyll not trust in my bowe, it is not my heades at vs. My cōfusyon is dayly before me, & the shame of my face hath covered me. For the voyce of the lauderer & blasphemur, for the enemy & auenger. And though al this be come vpo vs, yet do we not forgette the, nor bebaue oure selues frowardly in thy couenaunt. Our herte is not turned backe, neyther oure steppes

To the chaunter, an exhortacion of David, when Doeg the Edompte came to Saul ad shewed hym, sayinge: David is come to the house of Abimelech.

Why boastest thou thy selfe, & exaltest, & thou canst do myschefe. Where as thy goodnes of God endureth yet dayly. Thy tonge pynaggeth wyckednes, & with lyes & cutteth lyke a harpe asoure. Therefore shall God destrouye thee for euer, he shall take the & plucke & out of thy dwelling, & rote & out of the land of thy living. Sela. The righteous also shal se this, ad feare, & shal laugh at to scorn. Lo, this is the man that tok not God for his strenght, but trusted vnto the multitude of his riches, & strenghted himself in his wickednes. As for me I am like a grene olyue tre in the house of God, my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer & euer. To the chaunter vpon Mahalah, an instruction of David.

Why fool the body hath sayde in his hart, there is no God. Corrupte are they, & become abhomyable in their wyckednesse. There is none & doth good. God looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande & seke after God. But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become abhomyable: there is also none that doth good, no not one. Are not they without vnderstandinge & wycke wyckednes, eatinge vp my people as yf they wolde eate bread: they haue not called vpon God. They were afrayde, where no feare was: for God hath broken the boones of hyne that belieged the: thou hast put them to confusion bycause God hath despyled them. EXAUDI DEVS.

To the chaunter in melodies an instruction of David. Are my prayer (O God) & hyde not thy selfe from my petitiō. Take heede vnto me, & heare me, howe I mourne in my prayer, & am vexed. The enemye cryeth so, & the vngodly commeth on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some myschefe, so maliciously are they set agaynst me. My hart is broken with in me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulnesse & tremblinge are come vpon me, and an horrible drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I sayde: O that I had winges lyke a doue, for then wold I flye away, and be at reste. Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, and remayne in the wyldernesse. Sela. I wolde make hast to escape, because of the storme wynde and tempeste. Destroye their tonges (O Lorde) & deuyde the, for I haue spyed vnglaciousnes and strepse in the cytie. Daye and nyght go they about wth in the walles thereof: myschefe also, and sorowe are in the myddest of it. Wyckednesse is therein, bystrate, & gyle go not out of her strectes. For it is not an open enemye that hath done me thys dishonoure: for then I could haue bozne it: net her was it myne aduersary, that byd magnify himselfe agaynst me: for then on (peraduenture) I wold haue byd my selfe from hym. * But it was thou my companion, my guyde, & myne owne famlyer frende. his mouth were softer then butter, hauing war-them thou (O God) shalt bringe them into the pytt of destruction. The bloud that they & dyftheir mouthes synne & chaw bones of the neth a pace: and when they shote theyr arro-wes, let them be rote out. Let them consume awaye lyke a snayle and be lyke the vntunelye frute of a woman, and let the not se the sonne.

O euer your pots be made whote with thornes: so let indignacion verie hym, euen as a thyng is rawe. * The ryghteous shall reioyse when he seeth the vngodly: he shall walke vpon the steps in the bloude of the vngodly. So shall a man say: verely there is a reward for the ryghte-ous, doubtles there is a god that iudgeth in the earth.

ERIPERE ME DE INIMICIS.

To the chaunter, destroy not: The badge or arme of Dauid, when Saul sent & they dyd watch the house to kill hym.

Deliuer me from myne enemies (O God) defende me from them & ryse vpon the mighty men are gathered together agaynst me wythoute any offence or faute of me (O Lord.) They runne and prepare them sel-ues wythout my faute: Arise, thou therefore to Lord, * wait haue them in derpsid, & thou shalt laugh all heathen to scoꝛne. Thy strength wyl I ascribẽ vnto the, for thou art the God of my refuge. God sheweth me his goodnes plente-ouslye, and God shall lette me se my desyre vpon myne enemies. Slape them not, lest my people forget it, but scatter them abroade amonge thy people, and put them downe (O Lord) our defence. For the synne of theiꝝ mouthe, and for the wordes of theiꝝ lippes they shalbe take in theiꝝ pynde, & why theiꝝ preachynge is of cursynge and lyes. Consume them in thy wrath, consume them that they maye perishe, & knowe that it is God whych ruleth in Jacob and vnto the endes of the worlde. Sela. And in the euning they wyl retorne grene lyke a dogge ad thou hast bene my defence and refuge in tye day of my trouble. Vnto the, O my strength, wyl

DEVS DEVS MEVS.

A Psalm of Dauid when he was in the wyldeꝛnes of Iuda.

God, þat art my God, early wyl I seke þe. I My soule thirsteth for þe, my flesch also logeth after þe in a bare & drye lāde, where no water is. Thus haue I loked for þe in holy-nesse, & I might behold thy power & gloꝛy. For thy louing kyndnesse is better the þe lyfe it selfe, my lippes shall praise þe. As lōge as I lyue wil I magnify þe on this maner, & lyt vp my handes in thy name. My soule shalbe satisfied, euẽ as it were w maky & fatnesse, whẽ my mouth pray-seth the w ioyful lippes. Haue I not remembred

Let them fall vpon the edge of the swearde, þe they maye be a porcyon for fowes. But þe king shal reioyse in God: *all they also that sweare by hym shalbe commended for the mouth of the that speake lyes, shalbe stoppied.

They ymagine wyckednes, & practyse it that they kepe secrete amonge the selues, euery man in the depe of his hert. But God shal sodenly shote at the w a swift arrow, & they shalbe wounded. Yee, theyr owne tongues shal make the fal, in so moch þe who so seeth the shal laughe the to scoyne. And all men þe se it, shal say: this hath God done, for they shal perceauē that it is hys worke. The Lord gaue the word: great was the comhyll of Basan. Why hoppe ye so, ye hye hyll-hym to dwell: yea, the Lord dwyll abyde in it for euer. The charrettes of God are twentye thousande, eue thousandes of aungels: and the sayde I wyl bringe my people agayne as I did fro Basan: myne owne wyl I bringe agayne, as I dyd somtyme fro the depe of the see. That thy fote maye be dypped in the bloude of thyne enemyes, and that the tye of thy dogges may

SALVVM ME FAC DEVS

To the chaunter vpon Hosaniam of David. A

Salue me, O God: for þe waters are come in vnto my soule. I stycke fast in þe depe myre, where no ground is: I am come into depe waters, so þe floudes renne ouer me. I am wey of crying, my throte is drye: my sight fayleth me, for waytynge so longe vpon my God.

They that hate me without a cause, are more then the heeres of my heade, they that are myne enemyes, and wolde destroye me gyll-lesse are myghty: I payed them the thynges þe I neuer toke. God thou knowest my symplenesse, and my fautes are not hydd from the. Let not them that trust in the O Lord God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause, let not those that seke the be confounded thorow me, O Lord God of Israel. And why: for thy sake haue I suffered reproche: shame hath couered my face.
I am become a straunger vnto my brethren: eue an alcaunt vnto my mothers chyldren. For the zeale of thyne house hath euen eaten me, & the rebukes of them that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wepte and chastened my selfe with fastyng, and that was turned to my reproche.
I put on a sackcloth also, & they lestened vpon me.
They stode in the gate, spake agaynst me, & the drowardes make foges vpon me. But Lord, I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me, O God, in the multitude of thy mercy, euen in the truth of thy saluacio.
Take me out of the myre, that I synke not.

Let them fall from one wickednesse to another, & not come into thy ryghteousnesse. * Let them be wypped out of the booke of the lyving, & not to for me, when I am poore and in heuynesse, thyne helpe (O God) shal lyfte me vp. I wyll therin. For God shall saue Syon, ad buyde the cyties of Iuda, that men maye dwell there, and haue it in possessyon. The posteritye aland take hym, for there is none to delpue hym.

So not farre frome O God my God, haste þ that are agaynst my soule: let them be couered with shame and dishonoure, that seke to do me euill. As for me, I wyll patientlye abyde atwaye, and wyll prayse the more and more.

My mouth shal dayly speake of thy ryghteoufnesse and saluacion for I knowe no ende therof I wyll go forth in the strenght of the Lorde God, and wyll make mencyon of thy ryghteoufnesse thy wonderous workes. Forsake me not, O God, in myne olde age, whē I am gray heeded: vntyll I haue shewed thy * strenght vnto thy generacion, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come. Thy ryghteoufnesse (O God) is verye hye, and greute thynges arte they that thou hast done, O God, who is lyke vnto thes.

O what great troubles ad aduersitiese hast thou shewed me: and yet dyddest thou turne ad

QVAM BONVS ISRAEL.
A Psalm of Asaph.

Inlyp God is louynge vnto Israel: eue vnto such as are of a cleane hert.
Neuerthelesse, my fete were al-moost gone, my treadinges had welnye slpye. And why? * I was greued at ꝑ witked, I do se also the vngodly in such prosperitie for they are in no peryl of deth but are lustye & stronge. They come in no mysfortune lyke other folke, neither are they plaged lyke other men. And this is the cause that they be so holden wth pryde, & ouerwhelmed wth crueltie.
Their eyes swell for fatnesse: and they do eue what they lust. They corrupt other, & spake of wycked blasphem: their talking is against the moost hysst. For they stretch forth theyr mouth vnto ꝑ heauē, and their tonge goeth tho-rowe the world. Therefore sal the people vnto the, & therout luche they no small aduantage.
* Tush (saye they) howe shoulde God perceiue it: is there knowledge in the moost hysst? Lo, these are ꝑ vngodly: these prospere in ꝑ worlde, and these haue ryche in possesyon. And sayd)

Then haue I clenched my herte in bayne, & was-shed my handes in innocenye. All the daye longe haue I bene punysshed, and chastenedeue ry moynge. Yea, and I had almost said eue as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generacion of thy children. Then thought I to vnderstāde this but it was to hard for me.

Untyll I went into the Sanctuary of God, the vnderstode I the ende of these men. Namely, howe thou doest set them in the bypyre places & castest the downe and destroyedst the.
Howe sodaynly do they consume, peryshe, and come to a fearfull ende? * Yea, euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, so shalte thou make their ymage to vanysh out of the cytie.

Thus my hert was greued, and it wente eue thozowe my repnes. So foolysch was I and ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the.
Neuertheles, I am alway by the, for thou hast holden me by my ryght hande. Thou shalte gypde me with thy counsaile: and after that receyue me wth gloz. Whom haue I in heauē but the? And there is none vpon earth, that I despise in coparyson of the. My fleshe and my hert fayleth: but God is the strengthe of my herte, & my porciō for euer. For lo, they that forsaie the shal perysh thou hast destroyed all the that comyt fornicaciō agaynst the. But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God to put my trust in the Lord God & to speake of al thy wor-kes: (In the gates of the daughter Syon.)

what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had thewed for the. Maruapulous thin-ges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in the lāde of Egypt, euen in the felde of zoan. * He deuyded the see, and let the go thozowe: he made the waters to stande on an hepe. * In the daye tyme also he led them wyth a cloude, and all the nyght thozowe wyth light of fyre. He cloaue the herde * rockes in the wylde nesse, and gaue them drinke therof, as it had ben out of þe great depth. He brought waters out of the * stony rocke, so that it gushyd out lyke the ryuers.
Pet for all thys, they synned more against him, and prouoked the most hyest in the wylde nesse.

They tempted God in theþe desertes. and required meate for theþe lust. They spake agaynst God also, sayinge that God prepare a * table in the wylde nesse: He smote the stony rocke in dede, that the water gushyd out, and þe streames flowed wythall: but can he geue breed also, or prouyde flesh for hys people? Whē the Lord hearde this, he was wroth: so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and there came vpon heuþe dyspleasure agaynst Israel. Bpcause they blyued not in God, and put not theþe trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, & opened the doores of heaue. He rayned downe Mana also vpon the for to eat, and gaue the * foode from heauen. So man dydeate aungels foode, for he sent them meat ynough. He caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, & tho-rowe hys power he broughte in the southwester-wynde. * He rayned flesh vpon the as theycke as dust, and feathered foules lyke as the lande of the see. He let it fall amōge theþe tentes, euē rounde about theþe habytacyō. So they dyd eate, and were well fylled: for he gaue them theþe owne desyre. They were not dysapoynt-ed of theþe lust. * But whyle the meate was pet in theþe mouthes, the heuþe wyathe of God came vpon them, & que the welthpest of them: pea ad smote downe, the chosen men that were in Israel. * But for all thys, they synned yet more and blyued not hys wonderous workes.

Therefore, they dayes dyd he consume in vani-tye, and they yeres in trouble. * When he sue them, they sought hym. and turned the early, and enquired after God. And they remembered that God was theþe strenght, and that the hyghe God was theþe redemer. Auert hellesse, they dyd but flatter hym wyth theþe mouth, ad dyssembled wyth him in theþe tōge. For their heart was not whole wyth hym, neyther conty-nued they stedfast in hys couenaunt. But he was so mercyfull that he forgave theþe mylde-des, and destroyed the not. Yea, many a tyme turned he hys wrath awaye, and wolde not suffer hys whole dyspleasure to aryle. * For he consydered that they were but fleshe, and þe they were euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cometh not agayne. Many a tyme dyd they prouoke hym in the wylde nesse, and greued hym in the deserte. They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel. They thought not of hys hande, and of the day when he deliuered them from the hand of the enemye.
Howe he had wrought hys myracles in Egypt, and hys wondres in the felde of zoan. * He tour-ned theþe waters into bloud. so that they might not drynke of the ryuers. * He sent lycet among the, and deuoured them vp * and frogges to de-stroye them. He gaue theþe frutes vnto the * caterpyller, and theþe labour vnto the grehopper. * He destroyed theþe bynes with haille stones, and theþe mulberry trees with the frost.
* He smote theþe cattel also with haille stones, and their flockes wyth hote thondre bolts. He cast vpon them the furpousnesse of hys wrath, angre, dyspleasure, and trouble, & sent euyl angels amonge them. * He made a waye to hys indignacion, & spared not their soule fro death, but gaue theþe lyfe ouer to the pestilence. * And smote al the fyrst borne in Egypt, the most princypall and myghtyest in the dwellinges of hā.

But as for hys owne people, he led the for lyke shepe, and carped the in the wylde nesse lyke a flocke. He brought them out safelye, þe they shoulde not feare: and ouerwhelmed theþe enemyes wyth the see. And brought them in the borders of hys Sanctuary: euē to this moutaine which he purchaced with hys ryght hāde.

* He cast out the heathē also befoze the, caused theþe lande to be deuoyded amonge the for an herytage, and made the tribes of Israel to dwel in their tentes. So they tēpted and dyspleased the moost hye God, and kept not his testimonyes. But touned theþe backes: and fell awaye lyke theþe forefathers, starting asyde, lyke a broken bowe. For they greued hym wyth theþe hyll alters, and prouoked hym to dyspleasure wyth theþe ymages. When God hearde thys, he was wroth, and toke soze dyspleasure at Israel. So that he forsoke þe Tabernacle in Silo, euen the tē that he had pitched amōge men. He deliuered theþe power into captiui-tie, and theþe beauty into the enemyes hande.

He gaue hys people ouer also into the swerde and was wroth wyth the enherytance. The fyre consumed they: yonge men: and they: may-dens were not gyuen to marriage. Their prestes were slayne wth the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make lamentacyon.

So the Lord awaked as one out of slepe, & lyke a gyaunte refreshed wth wyne. * He smote his enemies in the hyndre partes, and put them to a perpetuall shame. He refused the Tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not y tribe of Ephraim. * But chose the trybe of Juda, euen y byll of Sion whych he loved. And there he buyl-ded hys temple on hye, and layed the foundacyon of it lyke the groude whych he hath made co-tinually. * He chose Dauid also hys seruaunt, and toke hym awaye from the shepfoldes. As he was folowynge the ewes great wth yongones he toke him, that he might fede Jacob his people, and Israel his enherytaunce. So he fed them wth a faythfull and true hert, and ruled them prudentely wth all hys power.

Eart O thou shepherde of Israel, & phraim, Ben Jamin, and Manas-Turne vs agayne, O God shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce, and we shal be whole. O Lorde God of hostes, howe longe wilt thou be angrie wth thy people that prayeth? * Thou fedest them with the breed of teares, and gyuest the plenteousnesse of teares to drinke: * Thou hast made vs a very strife vnto our neighbours: and our enemyes laugh vs to scoone. Turne vs agayne, thou God of hostes, shewe y lyght of thy countenaunce: and we shal be whole.

Thou hast brought a vyne out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen, & planted it. Thou madest rowme for it, and when it had take rote it fylled the lande. The bylles were couered with the shadowe of it, and the bowes thereof were lyke the goodly Cedre trees. She stretched out her bryanches vnto the see, and her bowes vnto the ryuer. Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge, that al they whiche go by, plucke of her grapes? The wyld beaste oute of the wood doth rote it vpon and the wyld beastes of the felde deuoureth it. Turne the agayne, thou God of hostes, loke downe from heauen: beholde, and vpsit thys vyne. And the place of the vinctarde that thy ryght hande hath plated: & the bryanche that thou madest so stronge downe, and they shall perishe at the rebuke of thy countenaunce. Let thy hande be vpon the ma-of thy ryghte hande, and vpon the sonne of man whome thou madest so stronge for thyne owne selfe. And so wyl not we go backe fro the: O let vs lyue, & we shal cal vpon thy name. Turne vs agayne, O Lord God of hostes, shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce, & we shal be whole.

Q. I. HABITAT IN.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

Lorde, thou hast bene oure refuge fro one generacion vnto another. Before the monntaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth & the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlastyng and worlde wythout ende. Thou turnest man to destruccyn. Agayne thou sayst come agayne chyliden of men. * For a thousande yeares in thy syght are but as yester daye, seynge that is past as a watche in the nyghte. As sone as þe scatrest them, they are cut as a sheape, and fade awaye sodenlye lyke the grasse. In the morninge it is grene and groweth vp, but in þe eveninge it is cutte downe.

For we consume awaye in thy dyspleasure, & are afrayde at thy wrathfull indignacion.

Thou hast set oure mysdoes before the, & our secret synnes in the lpght of thy countenance.

For when thou arte angry, all our dayes are gone we bring our yearess to an ende, as it were a tale þe is tolde. The dayes of our age are thre score yearess & ten, and though men be so stronge that they come to foure score yearess, yet is their strength the but labour & sorrowe so soone passeth it awaye, & we are gone. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath for euen therafter as a man fareth, so is thy dyspleasure.

Teach vs to nombre our dayes, that we maye applye our hertes vnto wysdome. Turne the agayne, O Lorde, at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. Satisfie vs wþ thy mercy and that soone, so shal we reioyse and be glad al the dayes of our lyfe. Comforte vs agayne, nowe after the time that þe hast plagued vs, and for the yearess wherein we haue suffered aduersyte. Shewe thy seruantes thy worke, and theyr chyliden thy glorye. And thy glorious maiestie of the Lorde our God be vps vs: prosper thou the worke of our handes vpon vs.

For he shall deliuer þe from the snare of the hunter and fro þe noysome pestilence. He shall defende the under his wynges, and thou shalt be safe under his fetters: his saythfulnesse & trouth shall be thy helde and buckler. Thou shalt not be afrayde for any terror by nyght, ne for the arrowe that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in darkness, ne for the sicknesse that destroyeth in the none daye. With longe lyfe wyll I satysfy hym, & thewe hym my saluacyon.

BOVVM EST CONFITERI.

A Psalme and songe for the Sabbath daye.

Is a good thyng to geue thākes vnto the Lord, and to synge praises vnto thy name, O moost hyest. To tell of thy louynge kyndnesse earlye in the mornynge, and of thy trouth in the nyghte season. For thou Lord haste made me glad thow thy wykes, & I wil reioyse in geuynge praise for þe operaciōs of þe handes (O lord) how glorious ar thy wykes: thy thoughtes are very depe. An vnwise mā doth well cōsydre this, & a foole doth not understād it. When the vngodly are grene as the grashe, & when al the wykes of wyckednes do flourish, then shall they be destroyed for euer. But thou Lord arte the moost hyest for euermore. For lo, thine enemyes, O Lord, lo thyne enemyes shall perishe, and all the workers of wickednes shall be destroyed. But my hoine shall be exalted, like the hoine of an Alynroine, for I am anoynted wyth freshe oyle. Myne eye also shall se his lust of myne enemyes, & myne eare shall heare þys despyre of the wycked þe ryle vp agaynst me. Remembre me, O Lord, accordyng to y<sup>e</sup> fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: O, vylet me wth thy saluacion. That I maye se y<sup>e</sup> fe licite of thy cholen, and reioyse in the gladnes of thy people. & geue thanks wth thyne enheri taunce. We haue synned wth our fathers, we haue done amysse, and dealte wyckedly. Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, & neither kepte they thy greate goodnesse in re membraunce: but were dysobedient at the see, euen at the redde see. Neuerthelesse, he helped thē for his names sake, that he might make his power to be knowē. * He rebuked y<sup>e</sup> red see al so, & it was dyped vp: so he ledde them thozowe the depe, as thozowe a wyldernes. And he sa ued thē fro the aduersaries hande, & deliuered thē from the hāde of the enemy. * As for those that troubled thē, y<sup>e</sup> waters ouerwhelmed thē, there was not one of them left. * Then beueled they hys wordes and sange prayse vnto hym.

But within a whyle they forgot his workes: and wolde not abyde hys counsaile. But lust came vpon thē in the wyldernes, and they tem pted God in the desert. And he gaue them their desyre and sent leanelesse wth hal into their soule.

They angered Moyses also in the tentes, & Aa ron the saynte of the Lorde. * So the earthe opened and swallowed vp Dathā, and couered the congregacyon of Abiram. And the fyre was kindled in they<sup>e</sup> company, the flame dyd by the vngodly. * They made a calfe in horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage. * Thus they turned their glozre into y<sup>e</sup> synplitude of a calfe, that eateth haye. And they forgot God they<sup>e</sup> Sanyour, whych had done so great thyng ges in Egypt. Wonderous workes in the lāde of Ham and fearfull thynges by the red see.

So he sayde: he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moyses hys cholen stonde befoze hym in that gappe: to turne a waye hys wrauth, full in dignacion, lest he shoulde destroye thē. * For they thought scozme of the pleasaunt lande: & gaue no credence vnto hys worde. But mur mured in they<sup>e</sup> tentes, & perkened not vnto the voyce of the Lord. Then lyste he vp his hāde agaynst them to ouerthrowe them in the wyl dernes. To caste out their serd amonge the nacyons, and to scattere them in the landes.

* They forned them selues vnto Baal Pe or: and ate the offrynges of the dead. Thus they prouoked hym vnto angre wth they<sup>e</sup> owne inuencions, and the plague was greate a monge them. * Then stode vp Phinehes and prayed: and so the plague ceased. And that was counted vnto hym for ryghteousnesse, & amonge all posterities for euermore. * They angered hym also at the waters of stryfe, so that he punished Moyses for they<sup>e</sup> sakes. * Be cause they prouoked hys spyrite, so that he spake vna duffely wth his lippes. * Neither destroyed they the heathen, * as the Lord com maunded them. But were myngled amonge the heathen, and learned they<sup>e</sup> workes.

In so much that they worshipped they<sup>e</sup>

* Yea they offered their sonnes & their daughters vnto deuils. * And shed innocent bloude, euē the bloud of their sonnes & of their daughters: who they offered vnto the ydols of Canaan, and the lāde was defyled with bloud. Thus were they stayned with their owne workes & went a whorunge wth theyr owne inuencions. Therefore was the wrath of ꝑ Lord kindled against hys people: in so moch, ꝑ he abhorred hys owne inheritaunce. And he gaue them ouer into ꝑ hand of the heathen, and they that hated them were lordes ouer them. Their enemies oppressed thē, & had thē in subiectiō. Many a tyme dyd he deliuer them, but they rebelled agaynst hym wth their owne inuencions, & were brought downe in their wyckednesse. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe their aduersityte, he herde theyr cōplaine. He thought vpon his couenaunt, & ꝑꝑ tied thē according vnto ꝑ multitude of his mercyes. Yea, he made al those that had led them away captiue, to ꝑꝑtye them. O* Geue thanks vnto the Lord, for heys gracyous: and hys mercy endureth for euer. Let them gyue thanks vnto whom the Lord hath redeemed and deliuered from the hāde of the enemye. And gathereth them out of the landes, fro the east, & from the west, from the north and from the south.

They went astraye in the wyldernes out of ꝑ way, & founde no cytie to dwell in. Hungry & thyrstye their soule saynted in thē. So they cryed vnto the Lord in their trouble, and he deliuered them from their distresse. He led them forth by the ryght way, that they myght go to the cytie, where they dwelt. O that men wolde therefore prayse the Lord, for his goodnes: & declare the wonders ꝑ he doth for the chyldren of men.

* For he hath satisfied the emptye soule, & fylled the hungry soule wth goodnesse. Such as syt in darknes & in the shadow of death, being fast bounde in misery & prison. Because they rebelled agaynst the wordes of the Lord, & lyghtly regarded the counsayll of ꝑ most myghty. He also brought downe their hert thorow heynous trespasse, & there was none to helpe them. So when they cryed vnto ꝑ Lord in their trouble, he deliuered thē out of their distresse.

For he brought thē out of darknesse, & out of the shadow of death, & brake theyr bondes in sondre. O ꝑ men wolde therefore prayse the Lord for his goodnesse: & declare ꝑ wonders ꝑ he doth for the chyldren of men. For he hath broke the gates of brasse, and smytten the barres of prison in sondre. For þy men are plagued for their offence, & because of their wyckednesse. Their soule abhorred all maner of meate: & they were euē harde at deathes doore. So when they cryed vnto the Lord in their trouble, he deliuered thē out of their distresse. * He sent his wordes, & healed thē and they were saued from their destruction. O that men wolde therefore prayse the Lord for his goodnesse: and declare the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

They rele to and fro, and stagger lyke a drunken man, and are at their wpttes ende. So when they crye vnto ꝑ Lord in theyr trouble, he deliuereth them out of their distresse. For he maketh the storme to cease, so that the waues thereof are styll. Thē are they glad, because they be at rest, and so he byngeth them vnto the heauē where they wolde be. O that men wolde therefore prayse the Lord for hys goodnesse, and declare the wonders ꝑ he doth for the chyldren of men.

And therewith setteth he the hungry that he may buyld thē a cytie to dwell in. That they may sowe theyr lande, & plant vyneyardes, to pelde them frutes of encrease. He blesseth thē, so ꝑ theyr multiplye exceedingly & suffreth not theyr cattell to decrease. And agayne, when they are mysfled and brought lowe thorow oppression, thorow any plage or trouble. Though he suffre thē to be euē entreated thorow straites & let thē wandre out of the way in ꝑ wyldernes. Yet helpeth he the poore out of mysferte, and maketh hym bouholders lyke a flocke of shepe. The ryghteous wyll conspyre thys, & reioyse and the mouth of all wyckednesse shall be stopp'd. Who so is wyse, wyll ponder these thynges: and they shall vnderstande the lounge kyndnesse of the Lord.

DEVS LAVDEM ME AM.

I Will not thy tonge (O God) of my prayse. For thy mouth of thy vngodlye: yea, & the mouth of thy disceptful is opened vpon me: & they haue spokē agaynst me wiche false toges. They compassed me about also wiche wordes of hatred, & sought agaynst me without a cause. For I loue that I had vnto them, lo, they take now my contrary part. but I geue my self vnto prayer. Thus haue they rewarded me euill for good: and hatred for my good will. * Set thou an vngodly man to be ruler ouer hym, & let Sathā stande at his ryght hande. Whē sentence is geuen vpon him, let him be cōdemned & let his prayer be turned into synne. * Let his dayes be fewe, and let an other take his office. Let his chyldre be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a wyddowe. Let his chyldre be vagaboundes, & begge theyr bread let the seke it also out of desolate places. Let the extortioner consume al that he hath & let thy straungers spoyl his labour. Let there be no man to pitye him, nor to haue compassion vpon his fatherlesse chyldren. Let his posterite be destroyed, and in the nexte generaciō let his name be cleane put out. Let the wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the syght of the Lord: and let not the synne of his mother be done away. Let them alway be before thy Lord: that he maye roote out the memoryall of them from the earth. And that because his mynde was not to do good: but persecuted thy poore helpelesse man, that he myght slaye hym that was vndered at the best. His delpte was in cursyng, and it shall happen vnto hym beloued not blesyng: therfore shall it be farre from hym. He clothed hym self with cursyng lyke as with a rayment: and it shall come into his bowels lyke water, & lyke oyle into his bones. Let it be vnto hym as the cloke that he hath vpon him & as the gyrdle that he is alway gyrded wiche.

Let it thus happen from the Lord, vnto myne enemyes, and to those that speake euill agaynst my soule. But deale thou wiche me (O Lord God) accordyng vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy. O delpue me, for I am helpelesse & poore, & my hert is wounded wiche me. I go hence lyke the shadowe that deparet, and am dryuen away as the gresshopper. My knees are weake thorow fastyng, my fleshy is dryed vpon wate of fatnesse. I became al- so a rebuke vnto them: * they that looked vpon me, shaked their heedes. Helpe me (O Lord my God) O save me accordyng to thy mercy.

And they shall knowe howe that thy is thy hand, & that thou Lord hast done it. Though they curse, yet blesse thou & let them be confounded that ryle vp agaynst me: but let thy seruaut reioyse. Let myne aduersaries be clothed with shame: & let them couer them selues with their owne confusyon, as wiche a cloke. As for me, I will geue great thanks vnto thy Lord wiche my mouth, and prayse hym amonge thy multitude * For he shall stande at the right hande of thy poore, to save his soule from vnyghteous iudges.

were made so directe, that I myght kepe thy statutes. So shal I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundemen-tes. I wyl thanke the, wyth an vnſapned herte, when I shall haue learned the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse. I wyl kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not utterly. Where wilt thou shall a ponge man cleanse his waye?

Euen by tulyng hym selfe after thy worde.
With my whole herte haue I sought the: O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundemen-tes. * Thy wordes haue I hyd wythin mine hert, that I should not synne agaynst the. Bleſsed art thou O Lorde, O teache me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I bene tellyng of all the iudgementes of thy mouth. I haue had as great delpte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of rycheſſe. I wyl talke of thy commaundementes, & haue respecte vnto thy wayes. My delpte shal be in thy statutes: and I wyl not forget thy worde. O do wel vnto thy seruaunt, that I may lye & kepe thy worde. Open thou myne eyes, that I may se the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a straunger vpon earth, & hyde not thy commaundementes frome. My soule breaketh out for the very feruente desyre that it hath alway vnto thy iudgementes. Thou hast rebuked the proude and cursed are they that do erre fro thy commaundementes. O turne from me shame & rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies. Princes also byd spt & speake agaynst me, but thy seruaunte is occupped in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my delpte and my counsaillers.
* My soule cleueth to the dust. O quicken thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue knowledged my wayes and thou herdeste me: O teache me thy statutes. Make me to under-stande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shal I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth away for very heuynesse, comforte thou me accordyng vnto thy worde.
Take frome the waye of lye, and cause thou me to make moche of thy lawe. I haue chosen the waye of truthe: and thy iudgementes haue I layed before me. I haue stycken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not. I wyl runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou shalt set my herte at liberty. Teach me, O Lorde, the waye of thy of thy statutes and I shall kepe it vnto the ende.

Give me vnderstandynge, and I shall kepe thy lawe: yea, I shall kepe it wth my whole herte.

Make me to goo in the path of thy commaundementes: for therein is my deelyte. Enclpne my hert vnto thy testimonies, & not to couetousnes.

Turne away myne eyes, lest they beholde vanity: and quicken thou me in thy way.

Stably thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I may feare the. Take away the rebuke that I am afraid of, for thy iudgementes are good. Beholde, my deelyte is in thy commaundementes.

Quickē me in thy ryghteousnesse. Let thy louyng mercy come also vnto me, O Lord: euē thy saluacyon accordyng vnto thy worde.

So shall I make answer vnto my blasphemers: for my trust is in thy worde. Take not the word of truth vnto my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall

I alway kepe thy lawe yea, for ever and ever. And I wyl walke at libertie, for I seke thy cōmaundementes. I wyl speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges: & wyl not be ashamed.

And my deelyte shal be in thy commaundementes whiche I haue loued. My handes also wyl I lyft vp vnto thy commaundementes whiche I haue loued and my study shal be in thy statutes. O thyne vpon thy seruaunt, as concernyng thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust. The same is my conforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me exceedingly in derisyon yet haue I not shynked from thy lawe. For I remēbred thyne everlasting iudgementes, O Lord and receyued conforte. I am horrible afraid for the vngodly, that for- sake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue bene my soges, in the house of my pylgrymage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lord in the nyght season: and haue kept thy lawe. Thy I had, because I kept thy commaundementes. * Thou art my portyon, O Lord: I haue promysed to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petitiō in thy presence with my whole hert, O be mercyfull vnto me accordyng vnto thy worde.

I call myne owne wayes to remēbrance, and turne my fete vnto thy testimonies. I made haste, and prōloged not to kepe thy commaundementes. The congregacyōs of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotten thy lawe. As my dygghte wyl I ryse, to geue thanks vnto the: because of thy ryghteous iudgementes. I am a companion of al them, that feare the:

and kepe thy commaundementes. * The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy: O teach me thy statutes. O Lord, thou hast dealt graciously wth thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy worde.

O learne me true vnderstandynge, & know ledge, for I haue beleued thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled I went w<sup>ronge</sup>: but now haue I kept thy worde. * Thou art good and gracious: O teach me thy statutes. The proude haue p<sup>mag</sup>nyed a lyē agaynst me, but I wyl kepe thy commaundementes wth my hole hert. Their herte is as fat as b<sup>z</sup>awne, but my delite hath ben in thy lawe. It is good for me & I haue ben in trouble, that I may learne thy statutes. The lawe of thy mouth is dea- ter vnto me the thousandes of golde and syluer.

* Thy handes haue made me and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstandynge, that I maye learne thy commaundementes. They y<sup>e</sup> feare the wyl be glad whē they se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O Lord, that thy iudgementes are ryght, and that thou of very saythfulnes hast caused me to be trou- bled. O let thy merciful kyndnesse be my con-fort, accordyng to thy worde vnto thy seruaunt. O let thy louyng mercyes come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy lawe is my deelyte. Let the proude be confounded, for they go wyckedly about to destroy me: but I wil be occupied in thy commaundementes. Let such as feare the, & haue knowen thy testimonies be turned vnto me. O let myne herte be founde in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacyon & I haue a good hope, because of thy worde. Myne eyes longe looke for thy word, sayyng. When wylt thou confort me? For I am become lyke a bottle in the smoke: yet do I not forget thy statutes. Howe many are the dayes of thy seruaunt: whē wylt thou be auenged of them that persecute me? The proude haue dygged pyttes for me, whiche are not after thy lawe. All thy commaundementes are true, they persecute me falsly: O be thou my helpe. They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: But I forsoke not thy commaundementes. O quicken me after thy louyng kin-dnesse, ad so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth. O Lord, thy worde endureth for ever in heauen. * Thy trueth also remaineth from one generacion to another: thou haste layde the foundacyon of the earth: and it abideth. They continue this daye, according to thyne ordinaces for al thynges serue the. If my deelyte had not ben in thy lawe, I shulde haue perished in my trouble. I wyl neuer forget thy commaundementes, for wth them thou hast quickened me.

I am thyne, O saue me: for I haue soughte thy commaundementes. The vngodly layde wayes for me to destroye me: but I wyl con- sider thy testimonies. I se that all thynges come to an ende: but thy commaundementes are exceedingly boade. * O Lord, what lone haue

I vnto thy lawe: all the daye longe is my study in it. Thou, thou wylt thy commaundementes hast made me wyser than myne enemyes, for they are euer wth me. I haue more vnderstandynge than my teachers for thy testimonies are my study. I am wyser than the aged because I kept thy commaundementes. I haue refrayned my fete from euery euyl way, that I maye kepe thy word. I haue not shynked fro thy iudgementes: for thou teachest me. O howe sweete are thy wordes vnto my throte? Yea, sweeter then honny vnto my mouth. Thou wylt thy commaundementes I get vnderstandynge, therefore I hate all wycked wayes. * Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete, and a lyght vnto

* My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodlye haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I fro thy commaundementes. Thy testymonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: ad why? they are the very top of myne hert. I haue applied myne herte to fulfyl thy statutes alwaye: euen vnto the ende. I hate them that ymagine euill thynges, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence and sheld, ad my trust is in thy worde. Awaye from me ye wycked, I wyl kepe the commaundementes of my God. O sta-blysh me accoꝝdyng vnto thy worde, þe I maye lyue, and lette me not be dysappointed of my hope. Holde thou me vp, & I shal be safe: pea my dellyte shal euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagine but dysceyte.

Thou puttest awaye all the vngodlye of the earth lyke drosse: therfore I loue thy testymoni-es. My fleche trembleth for feare of the: and I am atraped of thy iudgementes. I deale with the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: I gyue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Make thou thy seruaunte to dellyte in that whiche is good, that the proude do me no wronge. Mine eyes are waied awaye wyth loyng for thy health and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale wyth thy seruaunt accoꝝdyng vnto thy lounge merce: & teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunt, O graunte me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testymonies.

It is tyme for the Lord to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone. Therfore holde I steepryghte all thy commaundementes and al false wayes I utter ly abhorre. Thy testymonies are wondrous: therfore doth my soule kepe the. When thy worde goeth forth, it gentylyght & vnderstandyng, euē vnto þe simple. I opened my mouth and dreue in my breath, for my delite was in thy commaundementes. O loke thou vpon me, & be mercifull vnto me as thou vblest to doo vnto those that loue thy name. O dre my steppes in thy worde, & so shall no wyckednesse haue do-minyon ouer me. O dellyuer me from þe wro-gfull dealynges of men, & so shall I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the lyght of thy cou-tenaunce vpon thy seruaunt, and teach me thy statutes. Myne eyes gush oute wyth water, because men kepe not thy lawe. Ryghteous art thou, O Lord, and true is thy iudgemente.

Ps. lxxv. b
Job. ii. d

The testymonies that thou haste commaunded, are exceedyng ryghteous and true. * My zeale hath euen consumed me, bycause myne ene-myes haue forgottē thy wordes. * Thy word is tryed to the vttermooste: and thy seruaunte loueth it. I am small, and of no reputaciō yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy ryghteousnesse is an euerlastyng ryghteous-nesse: and thy lawe is the trouth. Trouble & heynesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my dellyte in thy commaundementes. The rygh-teousnesse of thy testymonies is euerlastyng:

O graunt me vnderstandyng, and I shal lyue.
I cal wyth myne holt hert, heare me, O Lord, I wyl kepe thy statutes. Pea, euen vpon the do I call, helpe me and I shal kepe thy testimonies. Early in the mornynge do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my trust. Myne eyes preuent the nyght watches, that I myghte be occupied in thy wordes. Heare my voyce, O Lord, accoꝝdyng vnto thy lounge kyndnesse: quicken me accoꝝdyng as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lord: for al thy commaundementes are true.

As concernyng thy testymonies, I haue knowen longe tyme, that thou hast groudēd the for euer. O conspyde myne aduersyte, and dellyuer me: for I do not forget thy lawe. Avenge thou my cause, and dellyuer me: quycken me accoꝝdyng vnto thy worde. Health is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Great is thy mercy, O Lord, quycken me as thou art wont. Many there are þat trouble me, and persecute me: yet do I not swarue from thy testymonies. It greueth me, when I se the transgressours because they kepe not thy lawe. Conspyde, O Lord, howe I loue thy commaundementes: O quycken me accoꝝ-dyng to thy lounge kyndnesse. Thy worde is true from euerlastyng: all the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse endure for euermore.

Princes haue persecuted me wythout cause: & but my harte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

* I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fin-deth grete spyles. As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe do I loue. Scūē tymes a daye, doo I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes. Great is the peace þe they haue whyche loue thy lawe, & they are not offended at it. Lord, I haue looked for thy sa-uyng health and done after thy commaundemētes. My soule hath kept thy testymonies ad loued them exceedyngly. I haue kept thy comaundementes and testymonies, for all my wayes are before the. Let my complaint come before the, O Lord, gyue me vnderstandyng, accoꝝdyng vnto thy worde. O let my supplicacyon come before the, dellyuer me accoꝝ-dyng to thy worde. My lippes shal speake of thy prayse, when thou hast taught me thy statutes. Pea, my tonge shal syng of thy word: for all thy commaundementes are ryghteous.

Ps. lxxv. a

Let thyne hand helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes. I haue longed for thy sayng health, O Lord, and in thy lawe is my dellyte. O let my soule lyue, and it shal praise the, and thy iudgementes shal helpe me.

I haue gone astraye lyke a shepe that is lost.
O seke thy seruaunte, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

The prynces of wisdom. We maye not beken vnto the voluptuous association & insynnes of synners. Wisdom complayneth her to be despised of all men, & propheseth destruction vnto her despisers.

A The Proverbs of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel to learne wysdome, & to perceiue the instructiō and to perceiue the wordes of vnderstanding: and thereby to receiue prudence, righteousnes iudgement and equitye. That the very simple myght haue wytte, and that the pōge mē myght haue knowledge and true vnderstandynge. By hearynge, the wyse man shall come by more wysdome: ad he that is endued wyth vnderstandynge, shall optayne wytte to perceiue a parable, and to interpretacyon therof, the wordes of the wyse, ad the darcke speeches of the same. * The feare of the Lord is the begynnynge of wysdome. But folles despise wysdome and instructiō. My sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne and forsake not the lawe of thy mother, for that shall bringe grace vnto thy heade, and shall be as a chayne about thy necke. My sonne, consent not vnto synners, yf they entpse the, and saye: come wyth vs, we wyl lape wapte for bloude, and luche pryuelpe for the innocent without a cause we shall * swallowe them vplyke the hell, and deuoure them quicke ad hole, as those that go downe into the pyt. So shall we finde al maner of costly riches, and fyll oure houses wyth spyles. Cast in thy lot amonge vs, & let vs haue al one purse. My sonne, walke not thou with them: refrayne thy fote from their waye. For * their fete runne to euell: & are hasty to shed bloude. But in wayne is the net layd forth before the byrdes eyes, yea they them selues lape wapte one for anothers bloude & one of them wolde slep another. These are the wayes of al such as be couetous, the one wolde rauyn anothers lpe. * Wisdom cryeth wythout, & putted forth her voice in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the opē gates, and she weth her wordes thowowe the cytie, saying: O ye chyldren, howe longe wyl ye loue chyldyshnes: howe lōge wyl the skorners delpte in scoynynge, and the vnwyse be cummyng vnto knowledge? Turne you vnto my correccion: lo I wyl expresse my mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes. * I haue called, ad ye refused it. I haue stretched out my hand, and no man regarded it. but all my counsels haue ye despyled: and set my correccion at naught. Therefore shall I also laughe in your destruction, and mocke you, when that thyng ye feare cometh vpon you euen when the thyng that ye be afrayde of, falleth in sodenlye lyke a storme, and your mysery lyke a tempeste: yea, when trouble and heynnes cometh vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shall seeke me early, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledge: and receyued not the feare of the Lord: but abhorred my counsell, & despyled all my correccion. Therefore shall they eate the frutes of theyr owne waye, & be fylled wyth their owne inuencionys, for the turnynge away of the vnwyse shall slepe them, & the prosperite of foolles shall be their owne destruction. * But who so hearkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, & be sure from anye feare of euell.

The. ii. Chapter.

Wysdome is to be embraced and set by. And aduice of a wroth woman is to be eschewed.

A Sonne, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes and kepe my commaundementes by the, that thou wylt enclype thyn eares vnto wysdome, applpe thyn eare hert the to vnderstandinge. For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowledge: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and diggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lord, and fynde the knowledge of God. * For it is the Lord that geueth wysdome, out of hys mouth cometh knowledge and vnderstanding. He byderth vpon helth for the righteous. He preferueth the wellfare of the righteous ad defendeth them that walke syncerely: he kepeth them in the right path, and preseruethe the waye of such as serue him with godlynes. The shalt thou vnderstande righteousnes, iudgement, & equitye: yea and euery good path. When wysdome entereth into thyn eare & thy soule delite in knowledge: the shall counsel preferue the, & vnderstandynge shall kepe the. That thou mayst be deliuered fro the euill waye, and from the mā that speaketh frowarde thynges. From such as leane the

E That thou mayst be deliuered also* from þe straunge woman, & fro her þe is not thyne owne: whych geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husband of her yowth, and forgetteth the covenante of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hell. All they that goo in vnto her come not agayne, neyther take they hold of the way of lyfe. Therefore, walke thou in the way of such as be vertuous, & kepe the pathes of the ryghteous. For the iust shall dwell in the laude, and they þe perfect shall remaine in it, but þe vngodly shall be roted out of þe lande, & the wicked doers shall be roted out of it.

The commaundementes of God must be diligently regarded and observed.

I Sonne, * forget not thou my lawe but se that thine heart kepe my commaundementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes and yeares of thy lyfe and bypunge the peace. Let mercy & faythfulness neuer go from the: bynde the aboute thy necke & wyte the in the tables of thyne hart. So shalt thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstandyng in the lyght of God and men. Put thy trust in God wth al thyne hart: & leane not vnto thine owne wyte. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto hym & he shall order thy goynges. * Be not wise in thyne owne conceyte: but feare the Lorde, and departe from euill so shall thy nauel be whole, & thy bones ströge. * Honour the Lord with thy substance: & with the fyrst lynges of al thyne increase, & (grue vnto the poore,) so shall thy barnes be fylled wth plētousnesse: and thy presses shall flowe ouer wth swete wyne. My sone despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neither fapne when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom þe Lord loueth, hym he chasteneth, & yet delpteth in hym, euen as a father in his owne sone. Well is hym that fyndeth wysdome, & opteyneth vnderstandyng, for the gettyng of it is better than any marchaundyse of syluer, & þe pryse of it is better then golde. * Wysdome is moore worthy then precyous stones: & all the thynges þe thou canst despyse are not to be compared vnto her.

Alpon her ryght hande is löge lyfe, & vpo her left hande is ryche & honoure. Her wayes are pleasur wapes, & all her pathes are peaccable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, & blessed is he that kepeth her faste. Wlth wysdom hath the Lord layde the foundacyon of the earth & thowowe vnderstandyng hath he stablyshed the heauens. Thowowe bys wysdome the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dewe. My sone, let not thise thynges departe from thyne eyes: but ake my lawe and my counsell, that thou mayste haue þe pleasure of löge lyfe and vnderstandyng. For they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye: & thy fote shall not stumbe. * If thou sleepste, thou shalt not be afayde, but shalt take thy rest, & slepe sweetly. Thou needest not to be afayde of any sodeyne feare, neyther for þe vyolent rushyng in of the vngodly, when it cometh. For the Lord shall städe by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not takē. With drawe no good thinge from the that haue nede, so löge as thyne hand is able to do it. Say not vnto thy neighbour: go thy way, & come agayne, to morowe wyl I geue the: where as thou hast now to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neighbour, seynge he doth dwel in rest by the. Serue not lyghtly wth any man wthout a cause, where as he hath done the no harme.

The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly, but he blesteth the dwellynge of þe ryghteous. As for the scornfull dothe not he laugh them to scorn: but he geneth grace vnto þe lowly. The wyse shall haue honoure in possesid, but shame is the promociō that fooles shall haue.

Wysdome an her frutes ought to be searched.

The chiefe paynt of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to obtayne wysdome: and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandyng. * Make moche of her and we shall promote the: Yea, if thou embrace her, we shall bypunge the vnto honoure. She shall make the a gracyus hede, and garnyshe the wth a crowne of glozpe. Heare my sone, & receaue my wordes: and the yeares of thy lyfe shall be many. I haue shewed the, the waye of wysdom, & led the into the ryght pathes. So that if þe goest therein, there shall no straitnes hinder þe, & whē thou runnest, þe shalt not fall.

Take faste holde of doctryne, and let her not goo. kepe her, for we is thy lyfe. * Come not in the pathe of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Abhorre it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they cannot slepe, excepte they haue fyrste done some myschefe: neyther take they any reste, excepte they haue first done some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and drynke the wyne of robbery. The pathe of the right wyse shyneth as the lyght that is euer byghter and byghter vnto the perfecte daye. But the way of the vngodly is as the darkenes, they knowe not where they falle.

I Sonne * kepe my wordes, & laye vp my commaundementes & my lawe, such as the apple of thyne eye & thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fyngers, & wyte them in the table of thyne harte. Saye vnto wysdome thou art my syluer: and cal vnder standynge thy kynswoman: * that they maye kepe the from the straunge woman, and from þe harlot whych gyueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I looked thowde the lattle, and behelde the simple people and amonge other simple folkes. I spied one pong foole, goynge ouer the stretes, by the corner in þe waye towarde the harlottes house, in the dys-lyght of the euenynge, when it began now to be nyght & darke. And beholde, there mete hym a woman * wyth opē tokens of an harlot, onelye her hert was hyde. She was ful of loude wodes, & readye to dallye: whose fete coude not a-byde in the house, nowe is she wythout, nowe in the stretes, & layeth a baite in euery corner, she caught þe ponge mā, kyssed him, & was not ashamed sayng: I had a bolle of spaccoffynge to paye, and this daye I perfourme it. Therefore calle I forth to mete the, that I might seke thy face, & so haue I founde the. I haue decked my bed wyth coueringes and clothes of Egipte.

My bed haue I made to smel of Myre, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come let vs lye togyther, and take our pleasure tyl it be day lyght: & we wyl enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good mā is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of money wyth him: and wyl returne home at the appoynted solempne feaste.

Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame him, and wyth her flatterynge lippes she enty-sed hym sodaynly to folowe her: as it were an oreled to the slaughter, and lyke as it were a foole that laugheth when he goth to the stocks to be punished so longe tyl she had wounded his leuer wyth her darte lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowynge that the peryll of hys lyfe lyeth ther vpon. Heare me nowe therefore, O my chyldren, and marke the wodes of my mouth. Let not thyne hart wādre in her wayes, & be not þe deceived in her pathes.
For many one hath she wounded, & cast downe.
Yea, many a troge mā hath ben slayne by þe mea-nes of her. Her houses are þe way vnto hell: and byynge men downe into the chambers of death.

For my throte shalbe talkynge of the trouth, vpon the earth was not yet made, no, nor the when he fastened the sprynge of the depe.

 The ryghte manys goodes are hym stronge holde, but theirowne pouertie feareth the poore. The ryghteous labouryth to do good, but the vngod-a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodlye

The .xi. Chapter.

2 false

* A false balauce is an abhominacion vnto the Lord: but a true weight pleasech him. Where pynde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowline, there is wisdom. The innocent dealing of the iust shall leade them, but the wyckednesse of such as dyssemble, shall be their owne destruccio. * Richesse helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but righteousnesse deliuereth from death. The righteousnesse of the innocent ordreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wyckednesse.

The righteousnesse of the iust shall deliuer them: but the wycked shall be taken in their owne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confidence of riches shall perishe. The righteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, & the vngodly shall come in his steede.

Thow the mouth of the dissembler is his neyghbour destroyed: but thow the knowledge shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goth well wyth the righteous, the cytie is merce: & when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but when the vngodly haue rule it decayeth. A foole byngeth vp a schalidre of his neyghbour: but a wise man wyll kepe it secreete. * A dyssemblinge person wyll dyscouer pryue thinges, but he that is of a faythfull herte wyll kepe counsaile. * Where no good counsaile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsaile, there is wealth.

* He that is surer for a straunger hurteth him selfe and he that medleth not wyth suretyshyppe is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honesty, as for the wycked, they maynteyne riches. * He that is mercifull, doth hym selfe a benefyte but who so hurteth his neyghbour, is a traitour. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soloweth righteousnesse shall receyue a sure rewarde. Like as righteousnesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto euill byngeth death. The Lord abhorreth them that be of a fapned herte, but he hath pleasure in them that are of an vnde-fyled conuersacyon. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the seed of the righteous shall be preserved. A fapne woman wyth out dyscrete maners is lyke a ringe of gold in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the righteous is acceptable, but the hope of the vngodly is in dysguacyon. * Some man geueth oute his goodes, and is the richer but the nygarde (hauynge ynough) wyll departe from nothyng, & yet is euer in pouertye. * He that is lyberall in geuyng, shall haue plenty: & he that watereth, shall be watered also hym selfe. * Whoso hoordeth vp his corne, shall be cursed amonge people: but blessing shall lyghte vpon his heed & geueth foode. He that laboureth for honesty, fyndeth his desyre: but whoso seeketh after myschance, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his riches, shall haue a fall: but the righteous shall flourish, as the greene leafe. Whoso maketh dyscreetnesse in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his heretage, & the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the righteous is a tree of life: & he that endeoureth hym selfe to wyne mens soules, is wyse. * The righteous be recompensed vpon earth, howe much more then the vngodly and the sinner. (The xii. Chapter.)

Whoso loueth wisdom wyll be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reformed is a foole. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Lord but the wycked ymagynar wyll be condemned. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the righteous shall not be moued. A huswylly woman is a crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueth her selfe vnwisely, is a corruption in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are righte but the ymaginacions of the vngodly are dysceitfull. The talkyng of the vngodly is howe they may laye waste for bloud, but the mouth of the righteous wyll deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked, and they stande not: but the house of the righteous shall stande fast. A man shall be commended for his wysdome, but a foole shall be despyed. * A simple man whych laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgyous and lacketh byerth. A righteous man regardeth the lyfe of his cattel, but the vngodly haue cruell hertes. * He that tyllith his lande, shall haue plenty of breede, but he that foloweth ydolensse, is a verie foole.

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after myschance: but the roote of the righteous byngeth forth frute. The wycked shalldeth into prison, thow the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape out of all peryll. Euerie man shall enioye good, accordyng to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded. Like what a foole taketh in hande, he thynketh it well done: but he that is wyse, wyll be counsayled. A foole uttereth his wrath in all the haste but a dyscrete man couereth wronge. A iust man wyll tell the truthe, and shewe the thyng that is right: but a false witness dysceiteth. A schalderous person pryketh lyke a sword, but a wise mannes tonge is wholesome. A true mouth is euer constant: but a dyssemblinge tonge is soone chaunged.

They that ymagyn euyl in their mynde, will dysceue, but the counsaylers of peace shall haue toye folowynge them. There shall no mysfortune happē vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled wyth mysery. * The Lord abhorreth lying lippes, but they shall labour for truthe please hym. He that hath vnderstandyng, doth hyde wisdom: but an vndiscrete hert telleth out his foolyshe. A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the pole shall be vnder tribute. * Heuynesse dyscouragech the hert of man but a good worde maketh a glad agayne. The righteous excelleth his neyghboure, but the waye of the vngodly wyll dysceue them selues. The dysceitfull man shall not rest, that he toke in hantynge, but but the riches of the just man is of great value. In the way of righteousness there is life: and in the same way there is no death.

The xiii. Chapter.

Wise sonne will hearken to his fathers warning, but he that is scornfull, will not heare when he is reproveth. A good man shall hope in the fruit of his mouth, but he that hath a froward munde, shall be reproved. He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life, but who so openeth his lips to euill, destroyeth him selfe. The flogarde wolde fayne haue, & cannot get his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shall hate both other and him selfe. Righteousnesse keepeth the innocent in the way: but vngodlynesse destroyeth ouerthrowe & synner. * Some men are rich, though they haue nothinge agayne, some men are poore, hauinge great riches. With goodes euer y man deliuereth his life, and the poore will not be reproveth. The light of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but * the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge & proude there is euill strife, but amonge those that do all thynges with aduysment, there is wylsome.

Wylsome gotten goodes are soone spent: but they that be gathered together with the hande, shall increase. Longe taryng for a thyng that is deferred, greueth the herte, but when the desyre cometh, it is a tree of life.

Who so despyseth anye thyng shall be hurte for the same: but he that feareth the commaundemente, shall haue the rewarde.

The lowe is a wel of life vnto the wise, that it may kepe him from the snares of death. Good vnderstandynge geneth fauour, but hard is the waye of the despyers. A wise man doth all thynges with discreetyn: but a foole will declare his folie. An vngodly messenger falleth into myschance, but a faythful ambassadour is wholesome. He that thynketh scoone to be reformed, cometh to pouertie & shame: but who so regardeth correctyn, shall come to honoure. When a desyre is brought to passe, it deliuereth the soule: but foolles counte it abhominacion to departe from euill. He that goeth in the company of wise men, shall be wise: but who so is a companion of foolles, shall be hurte.

Myschance foloweth vpon synners, but the righteous shall haue a good rewarde. He that is vertuous, leaueh an heritaunce vnto his children: and * the riches of the synner is layed by for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in the felde of the poore, but the feld not well ordred, is without frute. * He that spareth the rod hateth his sonne, but who so loueth him chasteneth him by tymes. * The righteous eateth, and is satisfied: but the belly of the vngodly hath neuer ynough.

Wise sonne will hearken to his fathers warning, but he that is scornfull, will not heare when he is reproveth. A good man shall hope in the fruit of his mouth, but he that hath a froward munde, shall be reproved. He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life, but who so openeth his lips to euill, destroyeth him selfe. The flogarde wolde fayne haue, & cannot get his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodly shall hate both other and him selfe. With goodes euer y man deliuereth his life, and the poore will not be reproveth. The light of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but * the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge & proude there is euill strife, but amonge those that do all thynges with aduysment, there is wylsome.

The xiiii. Chapter.

Wise woman shall holde together her house: but a fool she will plucke it downe.

He that walketh in the right path of the Lorde: feareth hym, but he that turneth hym selfe from his wayes, despyseth hym. In the mouth of the fool she is the rod of pryde, but the lippes of the wise will preserve them. Where no oxen are, there the crybbe is empty: but where the oxen labour, there is much frute. A faythfull witness will not dyssemble, but a false recorde will make a lye. A scornfull bodye seeketh wylsome, and fyndeth it not, but * knowledge is easye to come by, vnto him that will vnderstande.

He that thou medle not with a foole in whom thou perceuest to be no knowledge. The wisdom of hym that hath vnderstandynge, is to take hede vnto his waye: but the fool she of the vnto she dyscepueth. Foolles make but a sporte of sinne, but there is a fauourable loue amonge the righteous. The herte feleth his owne lyues bytternes, neyther shall the straunger be partaker of his ioye. The house of the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the righteous shall stand. * There is a way which some men thynke to be right: but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myght is heynesse. A backslidynge herte shall be fylled with his owne wayes, but a good man shall lyue of his frutes. An ignorant bodye vnderstandeth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstandynge loketh well to his goynges.

A wise man feareth, & departeth from euill, but a furious foole goeth on presumptuously.

An vnpatient man dealeth foolisshly: but he that is well aduysed, is hated of the fool. The ignorant haue folisshnesse in possession, but the wise are crowned with knowledge. The euill shall bowe them selues before the good: and the vngodly shall wayte at the doores of the righteous. The poore is hated out of his owne neighbours, but the rich hath many frendes. Who so despyseth his neyghbour doeth mysse, but * blessed is he that hath pytie of the poore.

Without doubte they erre that ymagyne wyckednesse, but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen merce and faythfulness. In euery labour there is some profit. But onely fayne wordes, bynge forth penury. Riches are as a crowne vnto the wise, but the ignorance of foolles is very foolisshnesse. A faythfull witness deliuereth soules, but a dyscreetfull witness bringeth forth lyes. The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, & his chyldren are vnder a sure defence. The feare of the Lorde is a wel of life, to a noide & smites of death. The increase & prosperite of the comens is the kinges honoure, but the decaye of the people, is the confusyon of the prince. He that is patient, hath much vnderstandynge, but he that is soone dyspleased, prouoketh foolpnesse. A merp hert is the lyfe of the body: but carroune consumeth awaye the bones. * He that doth a poore man wroge blasphemeth his maker but whoso hath pytie of þe poore, doth honoure vnto God. * The vngodly is cast awaye for his iniquitye, but the ryghteous hath a good hope even in death. * Wylsome resteth in the hert of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and it shal be knowne amonge them that are vnlerned. * Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people, but the sacrifice of the heathen is synfull. A dyscrete seruaunt is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest prouoketh hym vnto wrath.

Chapter.

A soft answer putteth downe displeasure: but froward wordes prouoke vnto angre. The tonge or such as be wyse, vseth knowledge a right: as for a foolish mouth it babbleth oute nothyng but foolpnesse. The eyes of the Lord loken on every place, beholding both the good & bad. A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broke minde. A foole despyseth his fathers correctyon, but he that taketh hede when he is reprovied, shall haue the moore vnderstandynge.

The house of þe righteous is full of rychesse but þe increase of the vngodly are nye destruction. A wise mouth powreth out knowledge, but þe hert of þe folp doth not so. * The Lord abhorreth þe sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of þe righteous is acceptable vnto hym. The way of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto the Lord, but whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse, hym he loueth.

He þe forsaketh the right way, shal be sore punished: & whoso hateth correction shal dye.

The bell wher payne is knowne vnto þe Lord: howe moche more then the heries of men. * A scornfull body loueth not one þe rebuketh hym: neyther wyl he come vnto þe wyse. * A merp hert maketh a chearfull countenance: but an heuy hert compelleth a man to syghe.

The last of hym that hath vnderstandynge doth seke after knowledge, but the mouth of folles is fed wyth foolpnesse. All þe dayes of the poore are miserable: but a quyet hert is a continual feast. * Better is a lytle wth the feare of the Lord, then greute treasure wyth sorowe.

Better is a measure of pottage wth loue, then a fat oxe wth euell wyl. * An angere mā styreth vp stryfe, but he that is patient stylyeth dyscorde.

The waye of a flouthfull mā is as it were hedged wth thornes: but the strete of þe ryghteous is well clenched. * A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete body shameh his mother. A foole reioyseth in foolpnesse, but a wyse man loyeth well to his owne goynges.

Unaduyfed thoughtes shall come to naught: but where as men are that can gyue good counsaile, there is stedfastnesse. A ioyful thyng it is to a man, whē his counsaile is folowed. & very pleasant is a worde spoken in due season.

The way of lyfe leadeh vnto heaue, that a mā shulde beware of hell beneth. The Lord wyl breake downe the house of þe proude, but he shal make fast the borders of the wyddowe. The Lord abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wicked, but pure wordes of innocētes are pleasaunt vnto hi. The courteous mā rooteth vp his owne house, but whoso hateth rewardes shal lyue.

The hert of þe righteous studyeth his answer afoze but the wicked mānes mouth spureth out myschefe. The Lord is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghteous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte, so doth a good name fede the bones. The care that berkeneth to the reformation of lyfe, shal dwell amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule but he that submytteth hym selfe to correccion is wyse. The feare of the Lord is the ryght sciēce of wysdome: & lowlynesse goeth befoze honoure.

Chapter.

A mā may well purpose a thyng in his herte, but the answer of þe tonge cometh of the Lord. * A mā thynketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lord that iudgeth the myndes. * Commyt thy workes vnto the Lord, & loke what thou desirest, it shal prosper. The Lord doth all thynges for his owne sake. yea, and when he keepeth the vngodly for the daye of wrath. The Lord abhorreth all such as be of a proude herte, his bande is agaynst thei bande, and they shal not escape as innocētes.

With louing mercy and faithfulness, synnes beforgeuen, and whoso feareth the Lord eschue euill. When a mans wayes please þe Lord, he maketh his very enemyes to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a lytle thyng wyth ryghteousnesse, then greute rentes wrongfully gotten. * A man deuyseth a waye in his hert, but it is the Lord that ordreth his goynges. Whē the prophete is in the lippes of the kynge, his mouth shal not go wronge in iudgemente. * A true measure & a true balace are þe Lordes iudgemēt, he maketh all weyghtes.

It is a greute abhominacion, whē kinges are wicked, for a kinges seate shulde be holden vp wth ryghteousnesse.

Ryghteous lyppes are pleasaunt vnto the kynge: & he that speaketh the trueth, shal be beloved. The kinges dyspleasure is a messenger of death, but a wyse mā wyl pacifie hym.

The chearfull countenance of þe kynge is lyfe: and his louyng fauour, is as þe enening dewe. * To haue wisdom in possesion, is better then to haue golde & to get vnderstandynge, is rather to be chosen than to haue syluer.

The path of the ryghteous is to eschue euill, & whoso loyeth well to his wayes keepeth his owne soule. Presumptuousnesse goeth befoze destruction, and after a proude shal make there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde wth þe lowlye, then to deuyde the warde: and wyth dyscrecyon oughte warres to be taken in hande. The crafty dysceatfull bewrayeth secreete counsel: and to hym that custo-meth flatterynge lyppes ioyne not thy selfe.

* Whoso curseth his father and mother, his light shall be put out in the myddest of darknes.
* He herytage that cometh to hastily at the first, shall not be praysed at the ende. * Say not thou I wyll recompence euell, but put thy truste in the Lord, & he shall defende the. * The Lord abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balance is an euell thyng. * The Lord orde-reth euery mans goynge, howe may a man the vnderstande his owne waye. It is a snare for a man to deuoure that whych is holy: and after þ vowe to turne to thyne owne vse, the thyng þ hast vowed. * A wyse kyng destroyeth þ vngod-ly, and bynggeth the whole ouer them. The lanterne of the Lord is the bryght of man, and goeth thorow all the inward partes of the bodye.

* Mercy and faythfulnes preserue the kyng: and wyth louyng kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strenght of poynt men is their worship, and a grape heade is an honoure vnto the aged.
Woundes dyne awaye euell, and so do stripes the inward partes of the bodye.

The xxi. Chapter.

Whe * kynges part is in the hande of the Lord, lyke as are the ryuers of water he maye turne it whither soeuer he wyll. Euerie man thyketh his owne waye to be ryght: but the Lord iudgeth the bettes. * To do righteousnes and iudgement is more acceptable to the Lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke: & the plowynge of the vngodlye, is synne. The deuices of one that is diligit bringe plenituousnesse: but he that is vnaduyced com-misch vnto pouertie. Whoso hoordeth vp ryches wyth the dysceatfulness of his tonge he is wayne and a foole, and lyke vnto the that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngod-lye shall be their owne destruction: for they wyl not do the thyng that is ryght. The wayes of the froward are straunge: but * the workes of hym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then w a bradlyng woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wyth euell: and hath no pytie vpon his neygghbour. * When þ scornefull is punished, the ignoraunt take þ better heade. & when he seith the wyse me prosper, e he wyl receaue the moore vnderstandynge.

The ryghteous man wyl selfe consydereth the house of the wicked: & for their wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso stoppeth his eares at the cryng of the poore: he shall crye him self & not be hard. A prync reward pacifieth dyspleasure: & a gyfte in the bosome, sylleth furyousnes. The Juste dellyteth in doyng þ thing that is ryght: but ouer the workers of wycked-nes dangereth destruction. The man that wan-dereth out of þ way of wysdome, shall remaine in the congregacyon of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in bankettes, shall be a poore man.

Whoso dellyteth in wyne & delicates, shall not be rygh. The vngodly shall be genē for the ryghteous and the wycked for the iust.

* It is better to dwell in the wylderne then wyth a chydynge and an angry woman. In a wyse mannes house, there is greate treasure & oyle, but a foolys body spendeth vp al. Whoso followeth ryghteousnes and mercy, fyndeth both lyfe, ryghteousnes, and honoure. A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the nychtyme: & as for þ strenght þ they trust in, he bringeth it downe.
* Whoso kepeth his mouth and his tonge, the same kepeth his soule from troubles. He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scornefull man, whych in wyth dare worke maliciously.
The voluptuousnes of the slouthfull is his owne death: for his handes wyl not labour.
He coueteth and despyeth al the daye longe, but the ryghteous is alwaye geuyng, and kepeth nothyng backe.

The sacrifice of the vngodlye is a whomyne. cpon, howe moche moze when they offre þ thing that is gotten wyth wyckednes. * A false witnes shall perishe: but he that is a true man boldely speaketh that he hath hearde. An vngodlye man goth forth rashly: but the iuste refozmeth his owne waye. * There is no wysdome, that is no vnderstandynge, there is no counsel agaynst the Lord. * The horse is prepared agaynst the day of battayle, but the Lord geueth victorie.

The xxii. Chapter.

Good name is moore worth then greate rychesse, and louing fauoure, is better then syluer & golde. The ryche & poore are together, the Lord is þ maker of them all. A wyse man seeth the plage and hydet hymself, but the foolyshe go on styll and are punished. The ende of lowlynesse: and the feare of God is ryches, honoure, prosperitye and healthe.

Thornes & snares are in the waye of the frowarde, but he that doth kepe his soule, wyl flee from suche. * Teach a chyld in his yowthe what way he shuld go: for he shall not leaue it, when he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore: & the borrower is seruaunt to the lender. He that soweth wyckednesse shall reape sorowe: & the rodde of his crueltye shall perishe. * He that hath a louyng eye shall be blessed: for he geueth for his breade vnto the poore.

(Whoso geueth rewardes, shall obtayne vpryce and honour: but he taketh away the soule of such as receaue them.) Caste out the scornefull man, & so shall strife go out wyth hym: yea, varpaunce & selander shall cease. Whoso dellyteth to be of a cleane herte & of gracypous lyppes, the kyng shall be his frende.
The eyes of the Lord preserue knowledge, but as for the wordes of þ dyspitefull, he bringeth them to naught. The slouthfull bodye sayeth: there is a Lyon wythout, I myght be slayne in the strete. * The mouth of an harlot is a depe pytte, wherin he falleth that the Lord is angry wythall. Foolyshe nesse sticketh in the herte of the ladde, and the rodde of correccion shall dyue it awaye.

It is ware. Whoso doth a poore man wronge to increas his owne riches, and geueth vnto ryche to please him, at the last cometh to pouer tye hym selfe. My sonne, howe downe thyne eare, & hearken vnto the wordes of wysdome, ap plye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for thou shalt be excellent if thou kepe it in thyne hert, & pra ctyse it in thy mouth, that thou mayst put thy trust in the Lord. I haue shewed the thys daye: the thyng that thou knowest. Haue not I war ned the very oft wyth counsel & learning, that I myght shewe the p<sup>r</sup> truth and that thou with the verye myghtest and were the that sende vn to the. Se that thou robbe not p<sup>r</sup> poore, because he is weak, and oppresse not the simple in iud gement: for p<sup>r</sup> Lord himselfe wyll defend theyr cause, and do violence vnto them that haue v sed violence. Make no frendshipp wyth an an gry wyllfull man, & kepe no company wyth the furpous: lest thou learne hys wayes, & receaue hurt in thy soule. * Se not thou one of the that hynde theyr cause vpon promyse, & are swete for wayghty earles. for if p<sup>r</sup> passe nothyng to paye, they shall take a waie thy bed from vnder the. * Thou shalt not remoue the lande marke, whyche thy foore elders haue set. Seeke thou not, that they whych be dyligent in theyr busi nes, stande before kynges, and not amonge the simple people.

The xxiii Chapter.

When thou sittest at the table to eate w a Lord, order thy lyfe manerly wyth the thynges that are set before the.
Measure thyne appetyte: & if thou wylt rule thyne owne selfe, be not ouer greedy of hys meate, for meat begyleth and disceaueth.
* Take not ouer great traualle & labour to be rych be ware of such a purpose. * Why wylte thou let thyne eye vpon the thyng, whych so dearly vnneth awaye? For riches make the selues wynges, and take theyr flyghte lyke an Agyle into the ayre. Eate thou not wyth pen urious, and desyre not hys meate. For he doth as a man that prescribeth a measure to the in hys herte. He sayth vnto the: eat and drynke, where as hys hert is not wyth the. Yea, p<sup>r</sup> mo selst that thou hast eaten shalt thou perbake & lese those swete wordes. Tell nothyng into p<sup>r</sup> eares of a foole, for he wyll despyse the wysdom of thy wordes. * Remoue not the olde lande marke, and come not wythin the felde of the fa therles. For he that deliuered them, is mygh ty, euen he shall defende theyr cause agaynst p<sup>r</sup>.
Applye thyne herte vnto correctyon, & thyne eare to the wordes of knowledge.
* Withholde not correctyon from the chyld, for if thou beatest him wyth the rod, he shal not dye therof. If thou smyte hym wyth the rod, thou shalt deliuer hys soule from hel. My sonne if thy herte receaue wysdome, my hert also shal reioyse yea, my repnes shal be very glad. If thy lippes speake the thyng that is ryght. * Let not thyne hert be gelous to folowe spynners, but kepe the styll in the feare of the Lord all the day longe: for the ende is not yet come, & thy patient abydng shal not be in bayne. My sonne, gene rate, and be wyse: and set strapte thyne herte in the waie of the Lord.

* Kepe not company wyth wyne bybbers & c ryotous eaters of fleshe: for such as be dyonchar des and ryotous shall come to pouertye, and he that is geuen to muche sleape, shall go wyth a ragged coate. Geue eare vnto thy father that begat the, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labour for to get the tructh: sel it not away and so do by wysdome, nourter, and vnderstandynge: for a ryghteous father is mar uelous glad of a wyse sonne, and he that beget teth a wyse chyld shall haue greate pleasure of hym. Do so that thy father and mother maye be glad of the, and that the that bare the may re ioyse. My sonne geue me thyne herte, and let thyne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. * For an whore is a depe graue, and an harlot is a na rowe pyt. She lurcheth lyke a thefe, and byn geth vnto her suche men as be full of vyce.

Who hath wo? who hath sorowe? who hath stryfe? who hath brawling? and who hath wou des wythoute cause? O who hath red eyes?
Euen they that be euer at the wyne, & seke ex cesse. Loke not thou vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a coloure it geueth in the glasse.
It goth downe softly, but at the laste it byteth lyke a serpent, and styngeth as an Adder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, & thyne hert shall muse vpon frowarde thynges: yea, p<sup>r</sup> shalt be as though thou layest in p<sup>r</sup> myd dest of the see, or slepest vpon the top of p<sup>r</sup> mast of a shyp. They wounded me, shalt thou saye, but it hath not hurte me: they haue all to broke me, but I felt it not. When I am well wake ned, I wyll go to the drynke agayne.

The xxiiii Chapter.

Be not thou gelous ouer wicked me and desyre not to be amonge them.
For their hert ymagineth to do hurt, and their lippes talke of myschefe.
Thow we wysdome is an house builded and is vnderstandng is it set vp. Thow we discrep on: shall the chambers be fylled wyth all costly & pleasaunt riches. A wyse man is euer ströge: yea, a mā of vnderstanding encreaseth of strögt For wyth dyscrepon must watres be taken in hande, and where as are many that can geue counsell, there is the vyctory. Wysdome is to hve a thyng for a foole, for he dare not ope hys mouth in p<sup>r</sup> gate. He that ymagyneth myschefe, maye well be called an vngacious personne.
The thought of p<sup>r</sup> foolysh is synne, and p<sup>r</sup> scoz nefull is an abhominacyon vnto men. If thou be ouersene and negligent in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but smal, deliuer them that go vnto death, & are led away to be slaine, & be not negliget therein: yf p<sup>r</sup> be able to do them good.
If thou wylt saye: I knewe not of it. Thin kest thou that he whych made the hertes, doeth not conspyre it? and that he whyche regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not he recompere euerp man accordyng to hys woikes? My sonne thou eatest honye & the swete honye combe, be cause

cause it is good and sweete in thy mouth. Euen so shal knowledge of wysdome be vnto thy soule, as sone as thou hast gotten it. And thou shalt haue longe dayes: yea, thy hope shall not be in vayne. Laye no preynt wayte (o wycked man) vpon the house of the ryghteous and dysquyet not his resting place. * For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, & riseth vp agayne. but the vngodly fall: into wyckednes. * Repoyse not thou at the fall of thine enemye, & let not thine herte be glad when he stumblith. Lest the Lord, when he seeth it, be angrie, and turne his wrath from hym vnto the.

* Let not thy wrath and gelousie moue the to folowe the wycked and vngodly. And why? the wycked shall haue no posteritie, and * the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. * Wylone, feare thou the Lord, and the kynge, & kepe no company wyth them that styde back from his feare: for they destruccyon shal come sodenly, and who knoweth the aduersite that may come from the both? These are all the sayynges of the wyse. * It is not good, to haue respect of anye personne in iudgement. He that sayth to his vngodly thou art ryghteous, him shal the people curse: yea, the ceminallte shall abhorre hym.

But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doeth God helyte, and a ryche blessing shall come vpon them. Euerie man shall kysse his lippes that geueth a good answer.

* First make by thy worke that is wythoute and loke well vnto that whych thou hast in the felde & then buyde thyne house. Be not a false wytnes agaynst thy neyghbour and speake no falshode wyth thy lippes. Sape not: I will handle hym: euen as he hath dealt to me, & will rewarde euery man accordyng to his dedes. I went by the felde of the slouthful, & by the vineparde of the foolyshe man. And lo, it was all couered wyth nettels, and stode ful of thynnes, and the stone wall was broken downe. * This I sawe, & considered it well: I looked vpon it, & tolke it for a warnyng. Yee, slepe on sylph (a saye) a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thy handes together yet a lytle: so shall pouerte come vnto the as one y traunpleth by the way, & necesse like a wepened man.

The xxv. Chapter.

These are also the parables of Salomon, whych the men of Ezechiah kynge of Iuda copped oute.

A is the honoure of God to kepe a thyng secrete, but the kynges honoure is to seache oute a thyng. The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges herte is vnsearchable. Take the dross fro the siluer, & ther shal be a cleane vessel therof. Take a waye vngodlynesse from the kynge, and his seate shal be stablyshed wyth ryghteousnes. Put not forth thy selfe in the ptesence of the kynge, and ptesent not into the place of great men. * Better is it, yf it be sayde vnto the: come vpp hyther, then thou to be put lower in y ptesence of the prynce whō thou seest wyth thyne eyes. * Be not hastye to go to the lawe, lest happy thou do some offence after the tryfe be ended, wherby thy neyghbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter with thy neyghbour hym selfe, & dyscouer not another mans secret, lest when his heare therof, it turne to thy dyshonoure, & leaste thine euell name do not cease. (Grace and frendshipp both dryuer, wherby we se that thou kepe for thy selfe, lest thou be reproued.)

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke appels of golde in a graued worke of syluer. The correccion of the wyse is to an obedyent care, a golde cheyne & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the wynter colde in the hartest, so is a fapthfull messaing to them that sende hym: for he refresyth h, & masters mynde. Whoso maketh great boastes: & geueth nothyng, is lyke cloudes and wynde wythout rayne. Wyth pacifce is a prynce pacified, and * wyth a soft tonge is rygheousnes broken. Yf thou fyndest hony, eate so much as is sufficient for the lest thou be ouerfull, & perbrake it out agayne. Withdrowe thy fote fro thy neyghbours house lest he be wery of the, & so abhorre the. Whoso beareth false wytnes agaynst his neyghbour, he is a verpe clubbe a sword, and a sharpe arrowe. The hope that is put in a false man in tyme of neede, is lyke a rotten toth and a slippyng fote. Whoso taketh a waye a mans garmente in the colde wether, is lyke byneger vpon chalke, or lyke hym that singeth songes to an heyre herte. (Like as y moth buereth a garmente: and a worme a tree: so doth the heynenes of a man hurte the herte.) * Yf thine enemy hunger, fede hym, yf he thyrst, geue hym dryncke for so shalt thou heape cooles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lord shall rewarde the. The North wynde dryueth awaye the rapue, euen so doeth an earnest sober countenaunce a backbityers tonge. * It is better to lye in a corner vnder y rose, then wyth a brawlyng woman in a wyde house. A good reperte oute of a farre countre is lyke colde water to a thyrstysoule. A ryghteous man fallinge downe before the vngodly, is lyke a troubled well, and a spring that is destroyed. Lyke as it is not good to eate to moch hony, & euen so he that wyl searcho out hye thynge, it shal be to deuyf for hym. He that cannot rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytie whiche is broken downe, and hath no walles.

The xxvi. Chapter.

Like as snowe is not mete in sommer nor rayne in hartest, euen so is word wyse vnsenely for a foole. Lyke as the byrde & the swalowe take theyr flyghte and fle here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyght vpon a man. * Vnto the horse beloggeth a whip, to the Asse a bydle, and a rodde to the foolys backe. Geue not the foole an answer after his foolysnes, leaste thou become lyke vnto hym, but make the foole an answer to his foliynes, leaste he be wyle in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea droncken is he in vanyte, yf he committeth any message to a foole. Like as in a lame mans legges are not equal, euen so is a parable in a foolys mouth. He that setteth a foole in hye byrgnate, that is euen as yf a man a man put a stone in a synge. A parable in a fooles mouth is lyke a thorne that pryketh a broken man in the hande. (Great is he that hath foined al. thynge, he rewardeth the foole and recompenseth the transgressours.) A man of experience discerneth all thynges well but he that putteth the foole to silence endeth the drye. * Lyke as þe dogge turneth agayne to hys owne vomite, euen so a foole begynneth his foolysnes agayne a frech.

¶ If thou seest a man that is wyle in hys owne conceite, there is more hope in a foole the in him

* The slouthfull sayth: there is a Lyon in the waye, and a Lyon in the myddel of the stretes.
Lyke as the doxe turneth aboute vpon the ben-gis, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in hys bed. * The slouthfull bodp thrusteth his hande into hys bosome, & it greueth hym to put it agayne to hys mouth. The slougarde thyn-keth hymselfe wylser then seven men that syt & teach. Whoso goeth by and medleth w other mens dryf: he is lyke one that take a dog by the eares. Lyke as a mad man þ casteth fyre brandes, & shoteh dradely arowes and darteres, euen so doth a dyssembler wyth his neyghbour.

¶ And then sayth he. (The man that taketh a dog by the eares, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.) I dyd it but in spote. Where no woode is, there þ fyre goeth out. Euen so where the tale betrayer is taken awaye, there to. drye ceaseth. * Coles kynde heate, and a good fyre euen so doth a bawdyngge felowe sterc vp vayne.

A talebearers wordes are lyke mē that strike with hāmers, but they pearse the inward par-tes of the body. Clemous lyppes and a wicked herte, are lyke a portarde couered wyth siluer drosse. An enemy shalbe knowne by his tal-kyng & in the meane season he ymagineth mys-chere, but when he speaketh sayre, belue hym not: for there are seven abhomyngs in hys harte. Whoso kepeth euil wyl secretly to do harm, his malice shalbe shewed before þ whole congregation. * Whoso dyggeth vpa pyt, shal fall therin: and he that wettereth a stone, shal stumbe vpon it hym selfe. A dissembling tonge hateth one that rebuketh hym, & a flatteryng mouth worketh myschere.

The xxvii. Chapter.
¶ Take not thy boast of to morowe: for thou knowest not what maye happē to daye. Let another man prayse þ, & not thine owne mouth: pea, other þ lyes lyppes and not thine. The stone is heuy, and the sande weyghie: but a foolers wyath is heuyer then them both.

¶ Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furyousnesse is a very tēpest. but who is able to abyde eny?
An open rebuke is better then a secret loue.
¶ Raythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kysles of an enemye are cruell. He that is full abhoreth an hony combe, but vnto him that is hongry, euerye sowre thynge is swete.

¶ He that ofspues flattereth, is like a byrde that forsaketh her nest. Salme & swete incense make they hert mery: so is the swete counsell of a mā frende þ agreeth to hys purpose. Thine owne frende and thy fathers frende thou forsake not:

but goo not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of. ¶ My sonne, bewyle: & thou shalt make me a glad herte, so that I shall make an answer vnto my rebukers. A wyle man seynge the plage, wyl hyde hym selfe, as for foolers they go on styll, and suffre harme.

* Take hys garment that is suerty for a straū ger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknewē mans sake. He that is to haste to prayse hys neyghbour aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth hym an euell reposte.

* A bawdyngge woman and the rooffe of the house droppynge in a raynye daye, may well be compared together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the winde, and holdeth the oyle fast in hys hāde. Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another. Whoso kepeth hys fygge tree, shal enioye the frutes ther of: euen so, he that wayteth vpon hys master, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appere dyuerse faces, euen so dyuerse mē haue dyuerse hertes. Lyke as hell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so * the eyes of men ca-neuer be satisfyed. Siluer is tryed in þ moulde & golde in the forname, & so is a man, when he is opely praysed to his face. (The bere of a wicked mā seeth after myschere, but a true herte seeth for knowledge.)

¶ Though thou shuldeste haue a foole wyth a pestel in a morter lyke fymenty cozne, yet wyl not hys foolysnes go from hym. He that þ knowe the nombze of thy catell thy selfe, & loke well to thy flockes. For ryches abydeh not alwaye and the crowne endureth not for euer.

The hye groweth, the grasse cometh vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lambes shal clothe the and for the goates thou shalt haue monye to thy husbandye. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough to fede the, to vphold thy houshold, & to susteine thy maydes. stroyeth the frute. They that forsake þ lawe, prayse the vngodly: but such as kepe the lawe, abhore them. * Wicked men dyscerne not þ thynge that is ryghte, but they that seke after the Lord dysculle all thynges. * A poore man owne snare, but the ryghteous doeth synge and reioyse. The ryghteous consydereth y cause of the poore: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wycked people bynge a cytie in decaye, but wyse men set it vp agayne. Yf a wyse man go to laue wth a foole (whet. er he deale wth hym frendly or roughly) he getteth norest. The bloudthyrst hateth the righteous, but the iuste seke his soule. A foole powreth out his sperte altogether, but a wise mā kepeth it in tyll afterwarde. Yf a pryncce deliue in ly-es, all his seruauntes are vngodly. The poore and the lender mete together, and the Lorde high tenech bothe they eyes. * The seate of the kynge that saythfully Iudgeth the poore, shall recpon minister wysdome, but yf a childe be not leked vnto, he byngeth his mother to shame.

When y vngodly come vp, wickednes increaseth: but the ryghteous shall se their fall. Fur-toure thy sonne wth correccion, and thou shalt be at rest yea, he shall do the good at thine hert.

When the worde of God is not preached, the people perishe: but well is hym, that kepeth the lawe. A seruaunte wyll not be the better for wordes, for th. ough he vnderstande: yet wil wely sperte byngeth greete worthynesse. Whoso kepeth company wth a thefe, hateth his owne soule he beareth blasphemies, and telleth it not whoso putteth his truste in the Lorde is wthout daunger. Many there be y seke the prynces faueur, but every māns iudgement cometh fro the Lorde. The righteous abhorreth y vngodly but as for those that be in the ryghte waye the wycked hate them. (A childe that kepeth the wordes, shall be wypout destruction.)

These are the wordes of the precher the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Ierusalem. * All is but moost vayne vanyte (sayeth the precher) and all is mooste vayne (I saye) and but playne vanyte. For what els hath a man of all the labour that he taketh vnder the sonne? One generaciō passeth a way, another cometh, but the earth abydethe styll. The sunne aryseth, the sunne goth downe, & returneth to hys place, that he may there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goth toward the south, and turneth vnto the north, fetcheth his course, whirleth about, & goeth forth, and hys circuyte returneth agayne to hym selfe. * All floudes runne into the see, & yet is the see it selfe not fylled for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen that noman can expresse them. * The eye is not sayd to sight, the eare is not fylled wyth hearinge. * The thing that hath ben, cometh to passe agayne and the thyng that hath ben done, shalbe done agayne: there is no newe thyng vnder the sunne. Is there any thyng wherof it may be sayd, lo this is newe? for it was longe agoe in the tymes þat haue ben before vs. The thyng that is past is out of remembraunce. But so the thynges that are for to come, shall nomaie be thought vpon among them that come after. I my self þat precher was kynge of Israel at Ierusalem, and by supply my mynde to seke out & search for knowledge of all thynges that are done vnder heauen. Such trauayle & labour hath God geue vnto þat chyldre of men, to exercise them selues therein.

Thus haue I considered all these thynges þat come to passe vnder the sunne, and lo, they are al but vanyte & veracion of mynde. The crooked can not be made streyght, nor the thyng that is vnperfect, cannot be accepted wyth thynges that are perfect. I communed wyth myne owne hert, sayinge lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotten moze wysdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my herte had great experyence of wysdome & knowledge, for ther vnto I applyed my mynde, that I myghte knowe what were wisdom and vnderstanding, what were errour & foolyshe nesse: and I perceaued, that thys was also but a veraciō of mynde: for where moche wysdom is, there is also great trauayle and dysquietnesse and the moze knowledge a man hath, the moze is hys care.

The ii. Chapter.

Aboundaunce of rychesse, and pleasure, and of buylagys are vayne thynges.

When sayd I thus in my hert: No more go to, I wyl take myne ease, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanyte also: in so moche, that I sayde vnto þ man gyue to laughter þat I made, & to mirth: what doest thou? So I thought in my hert, to geue my flesh vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdom, & to comprehend fo lyfnesse vntill the tyme that (amonge all the thynges whiche are vnder the sunne) I myghte se what were beste for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgeous sayre workes. I bulded my houses, and planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure & planted trees in them of all maner frutes. * I made pooles of water, to water the grene & frutefull trees whal. I bought seruauntes and maydens: and had a great housholde, & for catell and shepe, I had more substance of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem, I gathered syluer and golde together euen a treasure of kyndes & lades. I prouided me syngers and womē, whiche coulde playe on instrumētes, to make me mirth & pastyme. I gat me psalteries & songes of musycke. And I was greater, & in moze workes then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wisdom remayned wyth me: and loke whatsoeuer myne eyes despyed, I let them haue it, & wher in soeuer my herte deliyted or had anye pleasure, I withelde it not from it. Thus my hert reioyced in all that I dyd: & this was my porciō of al my trauayll. But when I considered all the workes that my handes had wroughte, and all the labour that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanyte and veraciō of mynde, & nothyng of anye value vnder the sunne.

Then turned I me to consider wysdome, errour & foolyshe nesse, for what is he amonge me, þat myghte be compared to me the kynge in such workes? & I sawe that wysdome excelleth foolyshe nesse, as farre as lyght doeth darkenesse. For a wyse man hath hys eyes in hys heed, but þat fool goeth in the darkenesse. I perceued also þat þey both had one end. Then thought I in my mind. If it happē vnto the fool as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour anye moze for wysdome? So I confessed wythin my hert, that thys also was but vanyte. For þat wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolish, for the dayes shall come when all shalbe forgotten yea the wyse man dyeth as well as the fool.

Thus beganne I to be wepye of my lyfe, in so moche that I coulde away wyth nothyng that is done vnder the sunne, for all was but vanyte and veraciō of mynde: yea I was wepye of my labour, which I had takē vnder the sunne, because I shoulde be sayne to leaue them vnto another mā that cometh after me: And who knoweth whether he shalbe a wyse man or a fool? And yet shal he be Lord of all my labours, whiche I wyth suche wysdome haue taken vnder the sunne. Thys is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to refraine my mynde from all such trauayle, as I toke vnder the sunne: for somoche as a mā shoulde wepe hym selfe of wysdome, wyth vnderstandinge & oportunitie, & yet be sayne to leaue hys labours vnto another, that neuer shal be for them. Thys is also a vayne a vayne thyng & great myserie. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heauynesse, sorowe, and dysquietnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? Insomuch, that his herte can not reste in the nyght: this is also a vayne thyng. * Is it not better then for a man to cate & drynke, & his soule to be merie in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God.

For who wyll eate or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God gyueth to þe mā that is good before hym, wysdome, vnderstandinge and gladnesse. but vnto the synner he geueth weepnesse. (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thyng that afterwarde shalbe gyuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thyng: yea a very dysquietnesse and vexacion of mynde.

All thynges come in their tyme, and passe away in their tyme.

Every thyng hath a tyme: yea, al that is vnder þe heauē hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, & a tyme to dye. There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng þe is planted. A tyme to slape, & a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracing. A tyme to wyne, & a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sowe together. * A tyme to kepe silence, & a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

Eccl. ix. b

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els, that doth any thyng, but weepnesse and labour? For as touchyng the trauayle and carefulnesse, whiche God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruelous goodlye, to euery thyng bys due tyme. He hath planted ignorauce also in the hertes of men, that they shulde not comprehend the grounde of his workes whiche he doth from the begynnyng to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothyng better for a man, then to be merie and to do well as longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynke: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I cōsydered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that mē shoulde feare hym. * The thing that hath bene, is now: and the thyng that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thyng that was past. Moreover, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in þe sede of iudgement, and iniquity in sede of righteously. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall separte the ryghteous fro the vngodly, & then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of al countreys and workes. I commaned wyth myne owne herte also, concernyng the chylde of mē: howe God hath chosen the, and yet letteth the appeare, as though they were beastes for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes: & as þe one dyeth, so dyeth þe other yea, they haue both one maner of breth so that (in this) a mā hath no preeminence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanytie.

They go all vnto one place, for as they be al of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne.

* Who knoweth the spirite of man that goth vnto ward, & the breath of the beast þe goth downe to the earth? Wherefore I perceyue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour: for that is his porcyon. But who wyll byngne hym to se the thyng that shal come after hym?

The mistreyes of the innocent, & the superfluous laboure of men. The iij. be that is poore and wrye. &c.

I turned me, and cōsydered all the vyolente wronge that is doone vnder the sunne: and behold, the teares of suche as were oppressed: and there was no man to confort them, or that wolde deliuer and defende the from the violence of their oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then those that be alpye: yea, hym þe is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they bothe, because he seeth not þe miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and dyspygence of labour that euery man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst his neyghboure. This is also a vayne thyng, an a vexacyon of mynde. The sole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne fleshe.

One handefull (sayeth he) is better wyth reste, then both the handes full wyth labour & trauayle of mynde. Moreover, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanytie vnder þe sunne.

There is one man, no moo but hym selfe alone, haupnge neyther chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of his careful trauayle: his eyes cannot be satysfied wyth rychesse, (yet doth he not remember hym selfe, and saye: ) For whom do I take such trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thyng. Therefore two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour. For yf one of them fall, his companion helpeth hym vp agayne: But woe is hym that is alone. for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resystaunce.

An admonition to beware of rash communication. We ought not to maruayle at the oppression of the poore. The co-uetous is not satisfied wth his riches:

Not hastye wth thy mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake anye thyng rashly before God. For God is in heauē, and thou vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. For were moch carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: & where many wordes are, there men may heare foles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foolys vowes he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse any thyng, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, the that thou shouldest promyse, & not pay. Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy selfe for to spurne, neyther say thou before the Angel, that it is thy ignorance. For then God wyl be angry at thy voyce, & destroye al the workes of thyne hādes. And wher as are many dreames & many wordes, there are also dyners vanities but loke that thou feare God. * If thou see-the poore to be oppressed, and wrongfully dealt withall, so that equyte and righte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruayll not thou at such a thyng, for one great man kepeth touche wth another, and the myghtye men are in autoritie ouer the poore. The increase of þe earth vpholdeth all thyng, & the kyng him selfe is mayntayned by husbandrye. He þe pouerth money wyl neuer be satisfied wth moneye, and whoso delpteth in riches shall haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thyng. When as moch richesse is, there are many also that spe-de the awaye. And what pleasure more hath he þe posselleth them, sayng that he maye loke vpon them wth his eyes? A labouryng man slepeth sweetly, whether it be lytle or moch þe eateth, but the aboundaunce of the ryche, wyl not suffice him to slepe. Yet is there a sore plage, wherby I haue sene vnder the sūne, (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession.
For oft tymes they perishe wth his greate myserye & trouble: and if he haue a chylde, it getteth nothyng. * As he as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goth he thither agayne: & caryeth nothyng awaye wth hym of all his go awaye euē as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynde? All þe

The. vi. Chapter.

The mystrye of the ryche and courtous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

Here is yet a plage vnder þe sūne, & it is a general thyng amonge men: when God geueth a mā richesse, goo-des & honoure so þe wanteth no-thinge of all that his harte can desire, and yet God geueth hym not leue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth he them.
This is a vayne thyng & a miserable plage. If a man beget hundred chylde, & lyue many yea-res, so that his dayes are many in nombyre, & yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buried, as for him I saye that vntymelye byrth is better then he. For he cometh to naught, & spendeth his tyme in darknesse, & his name is forgotte. And erouer, he seeth not the sunne, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more rest then the other. Yea, though he liued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour þe a mā taketh is for him selfe, & yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more the þe foole. What hel-peth it þe poore, þe knoweth, to walk wth foles he fore the lyuynge? The cleare sight of the eyes is better then þe soule should walke after desy-res of the luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thyng, & a disquietnesse of minde. The thyng þe hath be is named already, & knowe þe is euen man him selfe, neyther may he go to lawe wth hym þe is myghtier then he. Many thynges there be þe create vanytie: & what hath a man els? For who knoweth what is good for a lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whych is but a shadow? O, who wyl tell a man what shal happen after hym vnder the sunne.

Good name is more worth, then prey-ous ornament, and þe day of death is better the þe day of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banquettyng house. For there is the ende of all men: & he that is lyuynge, taketh it to herte: geauytie is better then to laughe: for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is refourmed. The hert of þe wyse is in þe mourning house, but þe hert of the foolys is in the house of myght. * It is better to gyue care to þe chastyng of a wyse man, then to heare the souge of foolcs. For the laughing of foolcs is like þe cracking of thornes vn-

W The wyse man hateth wronge dealing: & abhorreth the hert that coueteth rewardes. Better is it to cosidre þe ende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The pacient of spyrte is better then the hye mynde. We not hastelye angry in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of foolles. Saye not thou What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they þe nowe: for that were no wyse questyon. Alldome with inheritaunce is good: yet better is it wth them that wythoute care maye beholde the Sunne. For wisdō defendeth as wel as money, & the excellent knowledge & wysdome geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Cosidre the worke of God, howe þe no man can make þe thyngs streyght whych he maketh croked.

C Alse wel the tyme of prosperite, & remembre the tyme of mysfortune: for God maketh þe one by the other, so þe a man can fynde nothyng els. All thynges haue I consydred in þe tyme of my vanite: that the luste man persweth for hys righteousnesse sake, & the vngodly lyueth in his wyckednesse. Therefore, & be thou netter to righteous nor ouer wyse that thou perissh not, be netter to vnrpyghteous also nor to foolysch, lest þe dpe before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he þe feareth God, cometh forth wth them al.

Wisdō geueth more courage vnto the wyse, then ten myghty men of the cytie: * for there is not one iust vpon earth þe doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto cury worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruante curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft tymes spokē euell by other men. All these thynges haue I proued in wysdome for I thought to be wyse * but he wente farther from me then he was before: yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, & to seke & searche out science, wysdom & vnderstanding: to knowe þe foolishnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of dotinge foolles. And I founde, that * a womā is bytter then death, for she hath cast abroad her berre as a net that men fynde wyth: & her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shall escape fro her but the synner wyll be taken wyth her.

Behold, sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thyng must be cosydred with another, that a mā may come by knowledge: whych as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge al. Lo, this only haue I founde, þe * God made mā iust & ryght, but they sought many inuencions.

Who is wyse? Who hath knowlege to make an answer? A mā wylldō * maketh his face to shyne: but vnchamefastnesse putteth hit out of fauour. I must kepe the knynges commaundement, & the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his syght, and se thou continue in no euell thyng, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him that doth þe. I pke as when a knyng geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghtie. Euen so, * whoso maye saye vnto hym what doest thou? * Whoso kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme, but a wyse mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thyng wyll haue oportunitie & iudgement, & thys is the thyng that maketh men ful of carefulnesse, and sorowe. And why? a mā knoweth not what is for to come. for who wyll tell him? Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spyrte, to kepe it all the spyrte nor to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: is it not be also that can make an ende of the bat-tayle: neyther maye vngodlynesse delpue the that medle wythall.

All these thynges haue I consydred, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worke þe is vnder the sunne: howe one man hath lordshyp vpo another to hys owne harme. For * I haue sene often the vngodly brought to their graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of hely men, which in þe cytie were groden out of memozy, as were those also þe lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thyng: because now that euell workes are not hastylye punyshed, the hert of man gyueth hym self ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though he an euell personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuynge him longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go wel wyth the that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well wyth him, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadowe: so shall he be that feareth not God.

Agayne, there be vngodlye, wyth whom it goeth as though they had þe workes of the righteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commende gladnesse, because a mā hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to cate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shall he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, whiche God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my mynde to learne wisdome, and to knowe the trauayl that is in the world (and that of suche a fassyon, that I suffred nor myne eyes to slepe, neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes þe are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe hys labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yea, though a wyse man wolde undertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thinges are before the. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goth with the ryghteous as with the vngodly: * with the good and cleane, as with the vncleane: with hym that offereb, as with hym that offereth not, lyke as it goethe with the verteous, so goeth it also with the synner. As it happeneth vnto the peruered, so happeneth it also, to hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge al thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne this is a miserie that it happeneth vnto all alpe. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madde foolysnesse is in theyr hertes, as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

B And whyr as longe as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge, saue they is better then a deed Lyon: for they þ be lyuynge, knowe that they shal dye but they that be deed, knowe nothyng: neyther deserue they any more. For their memorie is forgottē, so that they be neyther loued, hated nor enuyed neyther haue they any more parte in the woelbe in all that is done vnder the sunne. So thou thy wape then, cate thy bread with ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy woikes please God. Let thy garments be alway wythe, * and let thy herde lacke no opntemente.

* Use thy self to lyue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, al þ dayes of thy lyfe which is but dayne, that God graunt the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy porcion in thys lyfe, of all thy labour & trauayle that thou takest vnder þ sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is neyther woike, counsaile, knowledge, nor wysdome.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder þ sunne. & I sawe, þ in running it helpeth not to be swyfte: in battayle it helpeth not to be stronge: to feding, it helpeth not to be wysle: to cycheise, it helpeth not to be subtyll to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be chynge but that all lyeth in tyme & fortune. For * a mā knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysh are taken with the angle & as þ byrdes are caught with the snare. Euen so are men taken in the peryllous tyme, when it cometh sodapnly vpon them.

D Thys wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, & me thought it a greate thynge. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men with in it: so there came a great kynge & besyged it, & made great bulwoikes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was found a poore mā (but he was wysle) which with hys wysdome deliuered the cytie: yet was there no body that had anye respect to such a symple man. Then sayd I wysdom is better then strenght. Neuerthelesse, a symple mans wysdome is despyled, and hys woordes are not heard. A wysle mans counsaile that is folowed in scyence, is farre aboue the crynge of a cap- tayne amonge foolges, * for wysdome is better then barnele. but one vntylyt alone destro- peth moche good.

The wylderde betwixt a foile and a wysle man. For to nate & happy is that realm: which hath a wysle pape.

Euen so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdom & honour, is abhoyred because of a lytle foolysnesse. A wysle mans hert is vpon the ryght hande, but a foolers hert vpon þ left. A foole wyll wedde hym self when he goeth by the wape: yet thynketh he that euerye man doth as foolysly as hym selfe. If a principall spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, * be not neg- lgent then in thynne offyce: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

Another plage is there, whyche I haue sene vnder the sunne. namely, the ignorance that is commenly amonge princes. in that a foole sp- tereth in great dignite, & the ryche are set doone beneth. I haue sene seruautes ryde vpo horses, & princes goinge vpon their fete as it were ser- uantes. * But he that diggeth vp a pytt shal fall therein himself: and whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal bite hym. Whoso re- moueth the stones, shal haue trauayle withal: & he þ be weth wood, shal be hurte therewith.

A babler of hys tonge is no better then a serpent that syn- geth without byssynge. The woordes out of a wysle mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyll destroye hym self. The beginning of his talking is foolysnesse, & the last worde of hys mouth is sturken madnesse. A foole is full of woordes, & a mā can not tell what shal come to passe, who wyll then warne hym of it that shal folowe after hym: The labour of the foolys is greuous vnto the, whyle they knowe not howe to go into þ cytie. If a man lyue many yeaeres, and be glad in the all, let hym remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whych shall be many, and that foloweth al thynges shall be but vanitie. Or the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the chetterne. Then shall the duste be turned agayne vnto earth, from whence it came: & the spere shall retourne vnto God, whych gaue it. * All is but vanitie, (sayth the preacher) al is but playne vanitie.

The preacher was yet more wysse, & taughte þ people knowledge he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde, and set forth many parables: his diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of truthe. Opē to me, O my lyfte loue, my doue, my deelynge, for my heade is full of dewe, & the loc-kes of my heare are full of the nyght droppes.
I haue put of my coote, howe can I doo it on againe? I haue washed my fete, howe shal I file the agayne? My loue put in hys hāde at the hole, & my hert was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, & my hādes dropped wyth myre, & the myre rāne downe my fingers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my be-loued, but he was departed and gone hys way.
Howe when he spake, my herte was gone: I sought hym, but I coude not fynde hym: I cry-ed vpo hym, neuertheless, he gaue me no answer.
So y watchmen that went about i cytie, foude me: smote me, & wounded me: Yea, they kepte the walles, toke away my kercheafe from me.

C I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Je-

As for my loue, he is wyhte & redde coloured, a goodly perle namōge ten thousand his head is as the most fyne gold, the lockes of his heare Hys face is as Libanus, and as the betwyte of y

The Prophecye

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe. What is she thyng, that cometh vp from the wyldernesse: and leaneeth vpon her loue? I wake the vp amonge the appell trees, where thy mother couceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) broughte the into the worlde. O set me as a scale vpon thyne hert, & as a scale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her colles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quench her loue, neyther may the streames drowne it.

Pre, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde couste it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes. What shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buyde a silver bulworke there vpon: yf she be an open doore, we shall fasten her wth boordes of Cedre tree. I am a wal, & my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

Salomo hath a vyneparde at Baal hamon, & this vyneparde deliuered he vnto the keepers: yf every one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peeces of syluer.

My vyneparde is in my syght: thou O Salomon, must haue a thousande, and the keepers two hundred wth the rate. Thou that dwellest in the gardenes, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companys maye hearken to the same.

O get the a waye, my loue, and be as a Roo. or a ponge herre vpon the wete smellinge mountaynes.

Heare the word of the Lorde: ye Lordes of Sodoma: and hearken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offere ye so many sacrifices vnto me? The seconde Chapter.

Of the commynge and death of Chyrist, and of the callinge of the heathen.

In this is the worde þat was opened vnto Eday the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It will be also in the laste daye, that the hyl wher the house of the Lorde is buyled, shalbe the chiefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hylles. And all nacions shal preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another vp, let vs go to the hyl of the Lord and to the house of the God of Jacob that he maye shewe vs his way, and that we may walke in his pathes. For þat lawe shal come out of Sion, & the worde of þe Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heathen, & shal reforme the multitude of people: they shal breake theyr swerdes also in to mattocks, & theyr speares to make sythes. And one people shal not lyfte vp a weapon agaynste another, neyther shal they learne to fyghte from thence forth.

B Come ye house of Jacob let vs walke in the lycht of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they goo farre beyonde theyr fathers in sorceres, wher they haue as the Philistines had, & in straunge coulde they thinke they selues to haue ynough. Theyr lande is full of syluer and golde, neyther is there any ende of their treasure: Theyr lande is also full of horses, and no ende is ther of their charrettes. Theyr lande also is full of wayne goddes, & before the worke of theyr owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before þe thyng that theyr owne synners haue made.

There kneleth the man, there falleth the man before them, so that thou canst not bring hym awaye from thence.

E And therefore get the into some rocke, & hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lord, and for þe glory of his mayestie. Which casteth downe the hygh lokes of presumptuous personnes, & bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde onely shalbe exalted in þe daye. For the daye of the Lord of hostes shal go ouer all pryde & presumption vpon all them that exalte they selues, & shal bringe them all downe vpon all hygh and stoute Cedretrees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costlye towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunte to loke vpon.

And it shal bringe downe the pryde of man, and lape mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, & the Lorde shal onely haue the victorie in that daye. But the ydols shal vtterly be rote out. When shal crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lord, & for þe glory of his mayestie: what tyme as he shal wake him vp to condempne the earth. Then shal man cast awaye his goddes of syluer, and his goddes of golde (which he neuerthelesse had made to honoure them) vnto Moles & Batters. And they shal crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his mayestie, when he ysseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anye man, whose brethe is in his nostrils. For what is he of reputacon?

He propheseth that at the commynge of Chyrist all strength & power shalbe put to rest of Iherusalem.

In so, þe Lord God of hostes doth take awaye fro Iherusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate & dryncke, the captayne & the souldyar, the iudge & the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of fytte yeare olde, & the honorable: the Senators and men of vnderstandynge: the maysters of craftes and oratours. And I shal geue them chyldren to be their princes, & babes shal haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pylled & polled, and one shal euer be doyng violence & wronge to another. The boye shal presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle personne agaynste the honorable. Yee, one shal take a frende of his owne kynned by the bosome, & saye: thou hast clothinge: thou shalte be oure heade, for thou mayst kepe vs from this fall and parell.

Then shal he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of þe people. For Jerusalem and Juda must decaye, because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lord, to prouoke the presence of his mayestie vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewrayeth the, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shal emoye the frutes of theyr studies. But wo be to the vngodlye & vnyghteous for they shalbe rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, & women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceaue the, & depraue the waye of thy fote stepes. The Lorde is here to commen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of the people: The Lord shal come forth to reason with the Senators & Princes of his people. It is I & I haue burnte by my vynegarde, the poore is in your houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, & marce þe faces of the poore, sayth þe Lord God of hostes?

wyth equitye, and they shal turne agayne vnto her in ryghteousnes. For the transgressours & vngodlye, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lorde must al together be vtterly destroyed. And excepte ye be ashamed of the oke trees wher in ye haue so dellyted, & of the gardes that ye haue chosen, ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen away: & as a garde that hath no moystnes. And as for the glory of these thynges it shalbe turned to drye strawe & be made the to a spark. And they shal both burne together, so þat no man shalbe able to quenche them.

In this is the worde þat was opened vnto Eday the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It will be also in the laste daye, that the byll wher the house of the Lorde is buyled, shalbe the chiefe amonge hylls, and exalted aboue all lytle hylls. And all nacions shal preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another vp, let vs go to the byll of the Lorde and to the house of the God of Iacob that he make the waye vs bys way, and that we may walke in bys pathes. For þat lawe shal come out of Sion, & the worde of þe Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the heathen, & shal reforme the multitude of people: they shal breake theyr swerdes also in to mattocks, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shal not lyfte vp a weapon agaynste another, neyther shal they learne to fyghte from thence forth.

Come ye O house of Iacob let vs walke in the lycht of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Iacob, because they goo farre beyonde theyr fathers in sorceres, wher they haue as the Philistines had, & in straunge coulde they thinke the selues to haue ynough. Theyr lande is full of syluer and golde, neyther is there any ende of their treasure: Theyr lande is also full of horses, and no ende is ther of their charrettes. Theyr lande also is full of wayne goddes, & before the worke of theyr owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before þe thynges that theyr owne synners haue made.

And therefore get the into some rocke, & hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for þe glory of bys mayestye. Which casteth downe the hygh lokes of presumptuous personnes, & byngeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde onely shalbe exalted in þe daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shal go ouer all pryde & presumption vpon all them that exalte the selues, & shal bringe them all downe vpon all hygh and stoute Cedretrees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hygh hylls, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all costlye towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shippes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is

And it shal bringe downe the pryde of man, and lape mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, & the Lorde shal onely haue the victorie in that daye. But the ydols shal vtterly be rote out. When shal crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, & for þe glory of bys mayestye: what tyme as he shal wake him vp to condempne the earth. Then shal man cast awaye bys goddes of syluer, and bys goddes of golde (which he neuerthelesse had made to honoure them) vnto Moles & Batters. And they shal crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of bys mayestye, when he ys seth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then anye man, whose brethe is in his nostrils. For what is he of reputacon?

¶ The iii. Chapter.

O Lord God of hostes both take awaye fro Iherusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate & dryncke, the captayne & the souldyar, the iudge & the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of fyllye yere olde, & the honorable: the Senators and men of vnderstandynge: the maysters of craftes and oratours. And I shal geue them chyldren to be their princes, & babes shal haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pylled & polled, and one shal euer be doyng violence & wronge to another. The boye shal presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle personne agaynste the honorable. Yee, one shal take a frende of bys owne kyned by the bosome, & saye: thou hast clothinge: thou shalte be oure heade, for thou mayste kepe vs from thys fall and parell.

Then shal he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of þe people. For Iherusalem and Juda must decaye, because that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his mayestye vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewrayeth the, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto theyr soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shal emoye the frutes of theyr studyes. But wo be to the vngodlye & vnyghteous for they shalbe rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, & women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceaue the, & depaue the waye of thy fote stepes. The Lorde is here to commen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of the people: The Lorde shal come forth to reason with the Senators & Princes of bys people. It is I & I haue burnte by my vynegarde, the poore is in your houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, & marce þe faces of the poore, sayth þe Lorde God of hostes?

The Prophecie

daughters of Sion are become so proud, & come in with stretched out neckes, & with bayne wa-ton eyes seynge they come in trippynge soncely wpyth their fete. Therfore shall the Lord haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shall discouer theyr shame. In that day shall the Lord take away the gorgousnesse of their apparell, and spanges cheynes, paterlets, & colars, brace-lettes, & hoores, the goodlye floured, wyde and bryddred rayment, bryoches, and headebādes, rpynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes & vales, kercheffes and pynnes, glasses & cypresses, bonets, and taches.

And in stede of good smell, theyr shall be stinke amonge them. And for their gyddles theyr shall be lcole bandes. And for wel set heare theyr shall be baldnes. In stede of a stomacher, a sacke clothe, and for theyr bewtye wytherdnes, and sunne burnynge. Pourr husbandes & myghtye men shall perpyth wpyth the sworde in batayle.

At that tyme shall theyr gates mourne and complayne, and theyr shall syt as desolate folke vpon the earthe.

The iiii. Chapter.

¶ For waite of men, seven women desyre to haue one man.

When shall seven wyues take holde of one man and sape, we wyll lape all oure meate and clothynge together in common: only that we may be called thy wyues and that thyng shamefull reproche maye be taken from vs. After that tyme shall the bryaunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghtye, & the frute of the earth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall sprynge therof. Then shall the remnaunte in Sion, and the remnaunt at Jerusa-le be called holy: Namely al suche as are wit-ten amonge the liuinge at Jerusale: what tyme as the Lorde shall waite a waye the fylthyne-of the daughters of Sion, & purge the bloud out from Jerusalem wpyth the wynde of hys iudge-ment, and wpyth fyre. Moreover, vpon all the dwellynges of the hylle of Sion & vpon theyr whole congregacyon shall the Lorde prouide a cloude & smoke by daye, & the shynynge of a flā myng fyre by nyghte for all theyr glorie shall be preserved. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from weither and rayne.

The v. Chapter.

¶ Of Chyrd and hys byneparde, wpyth an extractyon of corruptioun and bynkenne.

We wyll I syng my beloued frende a songe of my fecndes, because of hys byneparde. My beloued frende hath a byneparde in a very frutefull plenteous groude.
Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde aboute, and planted it wpyth goodly grapes. In the myddest of it builded he a towre, and made a bynepelle therein: And after ward whē he looked that it shoulde byng hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Howe therfore? O ye citizens of Jerusalem & whole Juda: Judge

I praye you betwixt me, & my byneparde.

What more could haue ben done, for it is I haue not done. Therfore then hath it geuen thorn-es: where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I wyl doo wpyth my bynepard. I wyl take the hedge fro it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wal, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyl lape it waste, that it shal neyther be dygged nor cut, but beare thornes and bryeres. I wyl also for-bydde the cloude that theyr shall not rayne vpon it. As for the byneparde of the Lorde of hoosters: it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda is fayre plantynge. Of these he looked for equytie, but se there is wronge: for righteousnes, lo: it is but myserye.

Who vnto them that soyne one house to another, and byng one lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde & that ye maye dwell vpon the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hostes: shall not many greater & more gorgous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in the?
And ten akers of bynes shal geue but a quarte, & thyrty bushels of sede shal geue but an Ephā

Who be vnto them, that ryse vpearlye to fo-lowe bynkenne, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyll they be sette on fyre w wyne. In those companyes are harpys & lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they re-garde not the worke of the Lorde & cōsydre not the operacion of hys handes. Therfore cometh my folke also into captiuyte, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glorie is la-myshed wpyth hūger, and theyr pryde is marred for cryste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth in auelous wyde: that their pryde, boostynge, and welth, wpyth such as reioyse ther in, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe and he byghleke of the proud shal be laid downe

But the Lorde of hostes shal be exalted in iud-gemente, and God that is holpe, is praysed in ryghteousnesse: Then shall the shepate in order, & the ryche mens landes that were layd wast, shall straungers deuoure. Who be vnto them, that drawe wychednes vnto the wpyth cordes of va-nitye & synne, as it were with a carter rope.

Whych vnto speake on thys maner let him make hast nowe, and go forth wpyth his worke, that we maye se it. Let the counsel of the holpe one of Israel come, & drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. Who be vnto them that cal euell good, and good euell, whych made darkenesse lyght, & lyght darkenesse, & make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Who be vnto them that are wyse in theyr owne lyghte, and thynke the selues to haue vnderstandynge. Who be vnto them that are strōge to suppe out wyne, & expert men to set vpon bynkenne. These geue sentence wpyth the vngod-ly for rewarde, but cōdempe the iust cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vpon the strawe and as the flāme consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shal be as corruptiō: and theyr bloosome shal vanyshe awaye lyke dust:

dull: for they haue cast away the law of þe Lord of hostes, & blasphemed the worde of the holpe maker of Israel.

¶ Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst his people, & he shaketh his hande at them: yee, he hath smytten, so that the billes byd tremble, And their karcaises byd lye in the ope stretes, lyke myer. And in all thys þe wrath of God hath not ceased, but his hande is stretched out still. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastely wth speede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor sleper per sonne. There shall not one of them put of the gyddle from his shoules, nor losse the latchet of his shoo. His arrows are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke flynt, & his carte wheles lyke a stormy wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke a Lyon whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vpon the praye, and no man shall recouer it, or gette it fro them. In that daye they shall be so feare vpon them, as the see. And if we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shall be al darknesse & sorowe. If we loke towarde heauē behold, it shall be darcke.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ At the same yere that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord sittynge vpon an hygher and gloriouse seate, & his trayne fylleth the temple: And about hym stode Seraphims, wherof euery one had syre wynges. Wpeth twayne each couered his face, with twayne his fete, & wpth twayne byd he flye. They cryed also ech one to another on thys maner: holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hostes. The whole world is full of his gloze. Yee, the geastes and docteches moued at his cryng and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayd, O woe is me for I am lost inas moche as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwel amonge people that hath vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue sene þe King & Lord of hostes.

¶ Then flew one of the Seraphims vnto me dauyng a hote cole in his hande, wherby he had taken from the altier wth the tonges and touched my mouth: and sayd, lo: thys hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vncyghtrousnesse is taken awaye, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I heard the voyce of the Lord sayng on thys maner: Whom shall I sende, and who wyll be our messenger? Then I sayde: here am I: sende me.

¶ And he sayde, go, and tell thys people: & ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande. ye shall playnly se and not perceaue. Harden the hert of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut theyr eyes: þe they se not wth theyr eyes, heare not wth their eares, and vnderstand not wth their hertes, & couerte: and be healed.

¶ Then spake I. Lord, howe longe? he answered, vntyl the cyties be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses wthout men, tyll þe lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord shall take the men farre awape, so þe lande shall lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynnes, and the lande shall retourne and be layd waste. And as the Cerebint tree and oke in wynter cast their leaues, and yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shall the holpe seds continue in their substance.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz: þe sonne of Iorham, wherby was þe sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda. that Rasin the kynge of Siria, and Bechab sonne of Romelpah, kynge of Israel, wēt vnto Ierusalem to beseege it, but Rasin was not able to wyne it. Howe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde worde therof, that Siria & Ephraim were confederate together his herte quaked (ye & the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued wth the wynde.

¶ Then sayde God vnto Elay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Heaz Jasub) at the head of þe ouerpole, in the fote path by þe fullers groude, and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy self: and be syl. but feare not, neyther be faynte herted, for these two fatles: that is for these two smokynge fyrebrandes the wrath and furpousnes of Rasin the Syrian, and Romelpes sonne: because that the kynge of Siria Ephraim, & Romelpes sonne haue wychedly conspyred agaynst the sayng: We wyll go vnto agaynst Iuda, bere them, and bynne them vnder vs, & set a kynge ther, euen the sonne of Tabeel.

¶ For thus sayth the Lord God thereto: It shall not so go forth neyther so come to passe, for the heade cytie of the Syrians is Damascus, but þe heade of Damascus is Razyh. And after fyue & thre score yere, shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelpes sonne. If ye beleue not, it cometh of thys, that ye are vnfaythful to God. Howeouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz sayng, requyre a token of the Lord thy God, wherether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heyghte aboue.

¶ The Lord answered: Then here to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lord shall geue you a token: Scholde a vyrgyne shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (thou his mother) shalt call his name Emmanuel. Butter and hony shall he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, & chole the good. For ouer the chylde come to knowledg: to eschue the euell, and chole þe good, the lande (that thou so abhorreste) shall be desolate of bothe her kynnes. The Lord also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house: such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda towarde the kynge of the Assyrians. For at þe same tyme tyne shall the Lorde whysle for the flyes that are about the water of Egypte, & for the Bees in the Assyrians lande. These shall come & shall lyght all in the desolate valeyes, in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme shall the Lorde haue the heare of the head & the fete and the beard cleane of, wpyth the rasure that he shall hyer beynd the water namely, wpyth the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue wpyth a cowe, and two shepe. The because of the aboundance of milke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that every one whych remaineth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes though there be a thousande vynges in one and were tolde for a thousande syluer pynges, shall be turned to briers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arrows and bowes, so shall all the lande become briers and thornes. And as for all bylles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpon the any feare of briers & thornes. But the cattell shall be dyue thyther, & the shepe shall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the lande by Emanuel. The done of offence, at whych many shall stumble,

I Creoner, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leafe, & wryte in it, as men do wpyth a penne, make hasty spede to robbe, & haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faith full wytnesse to recorde. Eliab the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that I wente vnto the prophete, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue him this name a speedy robber. an hasty spoiler. For why, oz euer the chyld shall haue know ledge to crye father, and mother shall the riches of Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken a waye by the spoiler, before the kynge of the Assyrians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as this people refuseth the syl renning water of Shilo, and put their delpte in Razin & Remelies sonne. Beholde, the Lorde shall bring myghty and great floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assyrians wpyth his power: whych shall clyme vp vpon all hys floudes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowynge and encreasing in power, tpyll he gette hym by the necke. he shall fylle also the wydenes of the lade wpyth his brode wynges, Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Assur) and ye shall be broke downe, hearken to all ye of farre countrees.

C Truste you, and ye shall be broke downe. prepare you to battell & you shall be tome in peces: take your counsell together, yet must your counsell come to naught, go in hade withal, yet shall it not prospere: for God is wpyth vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the powre of his hade & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shoulde not walke in the waye of thys people.

he sayde moreouer, rounde wpyth none of the whoso euer saye, yonder people are bounde together. feare the not, neyther be afraide of the, but sanctifye the Lorde of hostes, let him be your feare and dread. For he shall be the holy place to stepe to, and stone to stumple at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabytours of Ierusalem. And many shall stumple, fall: and be broken vpon hym: yee, they shall be snared and taken.

Nowe laye the wytnesses together and seale wpyth my disciples. Thus wpyll I waite vpon the Lorde that hath turned hys face from the house of Jacob, and I wpyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me and the chyldren whych the Lorde hath geuen me. we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they saye vnto you aske counsell at the soothsayers, Wytyches, charmers, and conu- rers, then make them thys answer. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at hys God? Shulde men cunne vnto the deade for the lpyng? If any man wante lpyght, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testymonye, whether they speake not after thys meaning. If he do not thys, he stumbleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger he out of pacien- ce, and blasphemeth hys kynge and hys God. Then loketh he vpywarde, and downe warde to the earth, & beholde: there is trouble & darknes, vexacion is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of erroure. And out of suche aduersyte shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past: it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thorow the see way goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrste in lpytle trouble: but after- warde soe vexed.

The ix. Chapter.

The prophete of aduersite natiuite and dominyon.

I he people that walke in darkenes haue sene a great lpyght. As for the that dwel in the lande of the shadow of death, vpon them hath the lpyght shyned. Thou hast multiplied the people and not increased theyr tope. They re- ioyce before the, euen as men make mery in har- uest, and as men that haue gotten the vyctorye, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthe. the staffe of hys shoulder and the rodde of hys opprelloure, as in the dayes of Adan.

B And truly every battayll that the warriour accomplissheth, is done wpyth confused noyse, and delpyng theyr garmentes wpyth bloude. But thys batayle shall be wpyth burnynge & consuming of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. vpon hys shoul- der both the kyngdome lye, & he is called wpyth hys owne name wonderfull. The geuer of coun- sell, the myghtie God, the euerylastyng father, the prince of peace, he shall make no ende to increase the kyngdome and peace, and shall spt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, and to stablysh it wpyth equitye and ryghte- ousnes, from henceforth for euermore. Thys shall Shall the gelowſp of the Lord of hoſtes bynge to paſſe. The Lord ſente a worde into Jacob, the ſame is come into Iſrael. And all the people of Ephraim ſhall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that ſape wyth pryde and hys ſtomackes, on thys maner. The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it wyth ſquared ſtones. The molbery tymber is broken, but we ſhall ſet it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lord ſhall prepare Razyn ſenemy againſt them, and ſo oꝛdie theyꝝ aduerſaries, that the Syrians ſhall laye holde vpon them before, & the Philiftines behinde, and ſo deuoure Iſrael wyth open mouth.

After all thys is not the wraſhe of the Lord cealled, but yet is hys hāde ſtretched out ſtyll. For the people turneth not vnto him that chaſtyſeth them, neether doo they ſeke the Lord of hoſtes. Therefore hath the Lord rote out of Iſrael both head and taylor, braynche and twygge in one daye. By the head is vnderſtande the Senatoure and honourable man, an by ſtaylor the prophet that preached lyes: For all they whiche enſourme the people: that they be in a ryght caſe, ſuch be dyſceauers. Suche as men thyncke alſo to be perfecte amonge theſe, are but caſteawayes.

Therefore ſhall the Lord haue no pleaſure in theyꝝ ponge men, neether fauour theyꝝ fatherleſſe and wyddowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wycked, and all their mouthes ſpake folye. After all thys, is not the Lordes wraſhe cealled but yet hys hāde is ſtretched out ſtyll. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bypers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: oꝛ a rede buſhe, ſo aſcendeth the ſmoke of theyꝝ pryde. For by cauſe of the wraſhe of the Lord of hoſtes, is the lande full of darkeneſſe, & the people be conſumed, as it were with fyre no man doeth ſpare his brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hande and doeth ſamylke, he cateth on ſleft hāde, & he ſhall not haue ynough Euery man ſhall eate the fleſhe of hys owne arme. Manalles ſhall eat Ephraim, and Ephraim Manalles, and they both ſhall eate Iuda.

After all this, is not the Lordes wraſhe cealled, but yet is hys hande ſtretched out ſtyll.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Behold I haue ſent the oppreſſours of the poore, and prophetes to ſpeak agaynſt Sennacherib.

I will be vnto them that make vnyghteous lawes, and deuyſe thyngeſ: whiche be to harde for to kepe: wher thowowe the poore are oppreſſed on euery ſyde, & the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemente: that wyddowes maye be theyꝝ praye, and that they maye robbe the fatherleſſe. What wyll ye do in tyme of the vſurpacion, & when deſtruction ſhall come from farre? To whom wyll ye runne for helpe: and to whom wyll ye geue poure honoure, that he may kepe it: that when I wythdrawe my hāde, ye come not amonge the pylſonners, oꝛ lye amonge the dead? After all this doth not the wraſhe of ſ Lord ceaſe, but yet is his hāde ſtretched out ſtyll.

my wraſhe in whoſe hande is the rod of my puniſhmente. I ſhall ſende hym amonge thoſe hypocrytyſh people, amonge the people that haue deſerued my dyſſauoure ſhal I ſende hym, that he may vetyerly robbe them, ſpoyle they, & treade them downe, lyke the myre in the ſtreete. Howebeit, hys meanyng is not ſo, neyther thynketh he hert on thys falſſon. But he ymagyneth on lye, howe he maye rote out and deſtroye moche people, for he ſapeth are not my pyꝛuces al kyn ges? Is not Calno as eaſy to wyne as Chat-chamis? Is it harder to conquer Hamath then Arphad? Is it lyghter to overcome Damascus, then Samaria? Is who ſape. I were hable to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and theyꝝ goddes but not Ieruſalem, and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Ieruſalem & theyꝝ ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & theyꝝ ydols?

¶ Wherfore the Lord ſapeth. Aſſone as I haue perſourmed my hole worke vpo the hill of Syon & Ieruſalem, then wyll I vſet the noble & ſtout hert of the king of Aſſyria with his prouo lokes. For he ſtādeth thus in his owne concept: Thys doo I thowowe the power of myne owne hande, and thowowe my wyſdome: For I am wyle: I am he that remoue the landes of ſ people, I robbe theyꝝ treasures: and (lyke one of ſ wort byes) I dyꝛue them from theyꝝ hys ſeates. My hande hath founde oute the ſtrength of the people, as it were a neſt. And like as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered togyther. So do I gather all countreyes. And there is no man that darre be ſo bold, as to touche a fetter, that darre open hys mouth, oꝛ ones whyſper.

¶ Shall the are boold it ſelfe agaynſt him that he weth ther wyth: oꝛ doth the ſawe make anye braggyng agaynſt hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf he rod dyd exalte it ſelfe agaynſt hym that beareth it. oꝛ as though he the ſtaffe ſhulde magnifie it ſelfe, as wo ſay: it were no wood. Therefore ſhall the Lord of hoſtes ſend hym amonge his ſatlynges, leaneſſe, and burne vꝝ his gloꝛy, as it were w a ſ. re. But the lyght of Iſrael ſhall be that fyre, and his Sanctuay ſhall be the flame, and it ſhall kyndle and burne vꝝ hys thornes and briers in one daye: yea, all the gloꝛy of hys woodes and felde ſhall be conſumed w bodye and ſoule: And they ſhall be as an hooſte of men, whoſe ſtāderd bearer ſapleth. The trees: alſo of the felde which remaine, ſhall be of ſuch a nombre, that a chyld maye tell they.

¶ After that day ſhall the remnaunt of Iſrael and ſuch as are eſcaped out of ſ houſe of Jacob, ſeke nomore comfort at hym that ſmote them, but wyth faythfulneſſe & trueth ſhall they truſte vnto the Lord, the holy one of Iſrael. The remnaunt, euen the poſterytie of Jacob ſhall couerte vnto God ſ myghtie one. For though thy people (O Iſrael) be as the ſande of the ſee, yet ſhall the remnaunt of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that ſloweth in ryghte ouſneſſe, and therfore the Lord of hoſtes ſhall perfectly fulfyll the thynge that he hath determined in the mynde of the hole worlde. Therefore, thus ſapeth the Lord God of hoſtes. Thou my people

In my people, that dwelleth in Syon, be not afraid, for the kynge of the Assyrians he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe at þe, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme: But soone after shall my wyth and myne indignacion be fulfilled in the destruction of them.

Moreover, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Adan upon the rock of Oreb. And he shall lyft up his rod over the see, as he dyd somtyme over the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yoke fro thy necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Arab, and goo thowward to Mygdon: at Michinas shall he lay up his barne, and go over the foorde.

Gibeon shall be the resting place: Ramath shall be a prayd Gibeon. Dan shall fly away. The voyce of the noise of thy horses (O daughter Gallin) shall be heard unto Laps and to Inotboth, which also shall be in trouble. Wadmona shall tremble for feare, but the crying of Sabin are many, yet shall he remain at Rob þ dape. After that shall he lyft up his hande agaynst the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyl of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord God of hostes shall take away the proude from thence wyth feare. He shall hewe downe the proude, and fell þe mynede. The bushes also of the wood shall be coote oute wyth yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

The .xi. Chapter.

The prophecye of the natyng of Christe, and of his people of the remnant of Israel, and of the sayth of the Beate then of Synops.

And there shall come a rod forth of þe kyned of Isat, and a blossom shall flozth out of his rote. The spryte of the Lord shall lyght upon hym: the spryte of wysdom and vnderstandinge, the spryte of counsaile and strenght, the spryte of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lord: and shall make him feruent in þe feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thing that shall be brought before his eyes, neyther reprove a matter at the fyrst hearing, but w righteousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and wyth boldnesse shall he reforme the simple of þe world.

Whe shall smyte the world wyth the rodde of his mouth, and wyth the breath of his mouth shall he shape the vngodly, Rychteousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes, truthe and fapthfulnesse, the gyding up of his reynes. The wolfe shall dwell wyth the lambe: and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, Lyons, and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them.

The kowe & the beare shall fede together & there shal be ones that lye together. The lyon shall cate strawe lyke the ore or the kowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and whē he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cockatrice denne. A man shall do euil vnto another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the hyl of my holynesse. For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of þe Lord, even as the see floweth ouer wyth water.

And in that day shall the Synops enqurze after the roote of Jesse whych shall be set up for a token vnto the people, & his dwellinge shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquer the remnant of his people (whych shall be left alpye) from þe Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Mozyans, Elampres, Caldees, Antiochians: and from the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set up a token amonge the Synops, and gather together the disperfed of Israel: yea, and the outcastes of Iuda from the four corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also & enemyes of Iuda shall be cleane rote out. Ephraim shall beare none euill wyll to Iuda, & Iuda shall not hate Ephraim, but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines toward þe west, and spoyle them together that dwell toward þe East. The Ioumpres and the Moabytes shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonites shall be obedyent vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of the Egyptians see, and wyth a myghty wynd shall he lyfte up his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smite his seven streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waye for his people that remaineth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

The .xii. Chapter.

The songe of the church for the adreynge of the hystory and our comfortinge of the worlde.

What the thou shalt say: O Lord I wyll thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wyth, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacyon in whō I wyll trust, & not be afrayed. For þe Lord God is my strenght and my souge, he also is become my saluacyon.

Therfore with hope shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the sauoure, and then shall ye saye gude thanks vnto the Lord, call vpon his name, declare his counsailes amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O synge psalmes vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Cepe out, and singe thou þe dwell in Syon: for great is the holp one of Israel in the myddell of the.

The .xiii. Chapter.

The prophecye of the destruction of Babylon: the captiue ty and the comfortinge agayne of the people.

Babylon is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which I say þe sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyfte up the baner vpon þe hyl, call vnto them, holde up your hande, that the princes may go in at the dore. I haue sent for my deputies & my gyautes (sayth the Lord) whych shall execute my wyth I wyll call for such as tryumphe in my gloze. There is a people of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a rushing as though the kyngdomes of the nations came together. (And the Lord of hostes mustered) munstreth bys armye to battayle. ) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord hym selfe wyth the mynisters of bys wrath, to destroye þe helle lande. Bourne, for the day of the Lord is at hande and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghty. Therefore shall all handes be letten downe & all mens hertes shall melt away, they shall stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman þe traunpleth wyth chylde. One shall be abashed of another, & they faces shall burne lyke the flame of fyre. Behold, the daye of the Lord shall come terribly, and full of indignacion, furoure, and wrath to make the lande wast, and to roote out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shall not geue theyr lyghte, the sunne shall be darkened in the tynge, and the moone shall not shyne wyth his lyghte. And I wyll punyssh the wyckednesse of the worlde, and þe synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord.

E The hye stomaches of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boostynge of tyrantes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedge of Ophyr. Therefore I wyll wake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the day of his fearefull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Every mā shall turne to bys owne people, and syle ech one into bys owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shall be shot thorowe. And whoso gather together shall be destroyed with the swerde.

E * Theyr chyldren shall be slayne before theyr eyes, theyr houses spoyled, & theyr wyues rauyned. For so, I shall brynge vp the Medes agaynst them, whych shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of gold. With bowes shall they destroye the yonge chyldren, & haue no ppyty vpon women wyth chylde, & theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon, that glory of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honoure shall be destroyed euen as God destroyed Sodom & Gomor. It shall not endure for euer, neyther shall there be any more dwelling there, from generacion to generacion.

The Arabians shall ppyche no tentes there neyther shall the shepherdes make theyr foldes there any more: but fearfull wyll be bestes that lye ther, & the houses shall be full of great owles. Estriches shall dwell there, & apes shall dounce there, wyld cattes shall crye in the palaces and dragons shall be in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hande, & her dayes shall not be prolonged.

The xliiij. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The prosperite of the people of God, & affliction of theyr enemies. The praye of Babylon.

In the Lord wyll be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wyll yett chole Israel agayne, and set them in their owne lande. Strangers shall cleane vnto the, & get the to þe house of Jacob

The people shall take the and carpe the home to theyr owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israel in the lande of the Lord, that they may be seruauntes & handemaides of the Lord. They shall take those prysouners whose captiues they had ben afore and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord nowe shall brynge the to rest fro the trauayle, feare, & hard bondage, that thou wast ladde wythal: the shalt thou vse thy mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye. How happeneth it that þe oppressour leauest off? Is the golden trybute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken the sceptre of þe vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whē he is wyth smyteth the people wyth contynual strokes, & tyranouly prapnerthouer þe hea: then, whom he persecuted wythout compassyō. And therefore the whole worlde is now at rest, and quyetnesse: and men synge for ioie.

Yea, euen the Assyree trees & Cedres of Lybanus, reioyse at thy fall, saying. Howe that thou art laped downe, there come no mo vnto the downe vs. Well also beneth trembleth to mite the at thy commynge, and for thy sake hath rapted bys deede, & all myghtye men and prynces of the earth. All kynges of the earth stande vnto the seates, & they may al answere, and speake vnto the. Arte thou become wenke also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is laped downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Moynes be laped vnder the, & wormes be thy couerynge.

Howe art thou fallen from heauen? Lucifer thou sayest moynnge chylde: howe hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & arte become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thine hert: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, and exalt my throne aboue, besyde the starres of God. I wyll syt also vpon the holy mounte toward þe North, I wyll clyme vp about the cloude, and wyll be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seeke the shall narrowly loke vpo the, & thynke in the selues, saying. Is this the mā that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes a frayd? Is this he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whych let not bys prysouners go out?

The kynges of the nacyns lye euery one in bys owne house wyth worshyppe, and thou art cast out of the graue lyke a fylthyre abhominable braunche: lyke as deede mens raymente that are shot thorowe wyth the swerd and go downe to the stones of the depe: as a deede coorse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed wth them. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generacion of the wycked shall be without honoure for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroy theyr chyldren, that be in their fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, & fylle the worlde full of enemies.

I wyll stande vpagaynst them (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and roote out the name and remaunt, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayeth

The Prophecye

(sayth the Lorde) and wylle geue it to the Scythians & wylle make water puddles of it. And I wylle swepe them out with the besome of destruction, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth, saying: It shal come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuyded. So that Assyria shall I destroy in my lade, and vpon my mountaynes wylle I treade hym vnder fote. Wherewith shal we hys yoke shall come fro them and hys burthen shall take fro their shulders. Thys deuise hath God taken thowhe the hole world and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For if the Lorde of hostes determine a thyng: who is able to withstande it? And yf he stretcheth forth hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

G The same yere that kynge Ahas dyed, God threatened on thys maner: Keioyle not thou whole Palestina, because the rod of hym that beareth the is broken: for oute of the serpentess rote there shal come an adder, & the frute shalbe a fyre flyinge worme. But the fyrsteborne of the poore shalbe fed, and yf simple shall dwell in safetye. Thy roote also wylle I destroye wth hysre, & it shall laye thy remnant. Mourne thou poore, wepe thou cyprie, for the whole lande of Palestina thou art layed waste, for there shall come from the north a smoke that not one alone maye abyde in hys place. Who shall then auerthe the messengers of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablyshed Syon, and the poore of his people that be therein, do put theyr trust in hym.

The .xv. Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst Moab.

Mhis is the heuy burthen vpon Moab: For of Moab was destroyed & ouerthrowen in nyght season. Also in Moab was destroyed, & persshed in nyght. They were vnto the ydols house euen to Dibon to the hye places to wepe for Bebo, & Moab did mourne for Medaba: Al theire heddes were balde, and all theire herbes shauen.

In theire stretes are they gyded aboute wth sackcloth. In all the toppes of theire houses and stretes shalbe nothyng but mournynge & wepyng. Helbon and Eleale shall cry, that theire voyce shalbe herde vnto Jahaz. The worthies also of Moab shal bleate oute, and crye for very sorowe of theire myndes. Who shal myghte be for Moabs sake? They shal lye vnto the cyprie of Zoar which is lyke a fayre younge bullock of thye yere olde, for they shal al go vnto Luth wepyng. Euen so by the waye toward Horonaim they shal make lamentacion for their vnter destruction. For the waters of Rimmun shal be dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are loze. As for their substance, the enemyes

D they haue carryed them to the brooke of yf wyllewes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab vnto Eglaim & vnto Ber, Eglaim was ther nothyng but mournynge, because yf waters of Dimon were ful of blood for yf Lorde shal fede more bloude vpon Dimon, & Lyons vpon yf renasite of the lande, & on them yf are escaped fro Moab.

The .xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Ende the Lorde of the worlde a labe from the rocke that lyeth toward yf deserte, vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblynge byde that is put out of harrest, for they shal carpe them vnto Arnon: gather your counsel, come together in iudgement, couer vs wth your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doeth hyde yf chaced, and bewrape not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou theire refuge agaynst the destroyer. For the aduersarye is brought to nought, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande. And in mercy shal the seate be prepared, and he shal lye vpon it in the truth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge passe vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of yf byde of Moab, he is very proud, presumptuous, arrogant, and ful of indignacyon and vayne are hys lyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentacion because of the Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yea, they shal wepe all together. Because of the foundations of yf cyprie yf is made of byrche, shall ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

For the vynes of Helbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of yf heathen haue broken downe her principall branches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wente on wandyrng vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodlye branches were thowen downe as they wente ouer the see. Therefore wylle I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibna. I wylle poure my teares vpon the, O Helbon and Eleale, for yf crye of thye enemyes is fallen vpon thy sommer fettes, and vpon thy heruest. The mirth and chere is taken away out of the plentyful felde, and in the vyneyardes, there shalbe no roye nor gladnesse. The treader shal treade out no wyne in the press, the lode of theire mercy there haue I layed downe. Wherefore, my bowels shal rebble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne in warder partes, for the cypries sake that is made of byrche. And it shal come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shalbe made werpe of hys hyl chapre, he shal come to hys temple to praye, but he shal not be able. So then, thys is the sayinge that the Lorde hath spokē concernynge Moab, sayng that tyme. But now the Lorde hath spoken, sayinge In thye yeres, which shal be as the yeres of an byred seruaunte, shal the glory of Moab be turned vnto confusyon, thow oute all hys myltitude, wthche is verpe great. And that whiche remaineth, shalbe very small and feble.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Dhis is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus: beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be nomore a cyprie, but shalbe a heape of broken stones. The waste cypries cytyes of Aſſyria ſhalbe folden for catell, whiche ſhall lye there, and there ſhalbe none to ſtaye the awaye: Ephraim alſo ſhall nomore be ſtronger, and Daniaſcus ſhall nomore be a kyngedome, and the remnaunt of Siria ſhalbe as the gloze of ſ children of Iſrael, ſayth the Lord of hoſtes And in that daye it ſhall come to paſſe, that Iacob ſhalbe made verpe pooze, and the fatnes of hys ſhepe ſhal ware leane. And he ſhalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in herueſt, euē lyke him whole harueſt reapeſh the eares of corne.

He ſhalbe alſo lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Raphaim. Some gatheringe in dede ſhall there be leſte in it, euē as in ſ hakyng of an olyue tree, there remayne two or thre berries in the toppe of the uttermoſt bow and ſoure or ſyue in the bryde fructefull braunches thereof ſayth the Lord God of Iſrael.

Then ſhall man turne agayne to hys maker and hys eyes ſhal haue reſpect to the holy one of Iſrael. As for the altars whiche arches owne hand worke, he ſhal not regarde them, and the thyngeſ that hys ſyngers haue made (as groves and ymages) thoſe ſhall he not caſt hys eye vnto. In that daye ſhall they ſtronge cytyes be as the forſaken ſhrubbes and braunches, which they leſt, becauſe of the chyldren of Iſrael: and the lande ſhalbe deſolate. Becauſe thou haſt for gotten God thy ſaluacion, a haſt not bene mynd full of thy ſtrong rock: therefore ſhalt thou ſet pleaſant plantes, and ſhalt graſte the braunche of an other mannes vyne. In that daye ſhalt thou make thy plant to growe, and early in the morninge ſhalt thou make thy ſeede to ſprout. The harueſt ſhalbe gone in the daye of enherytaunce and there ſhalbe ſorrowe without hope of comfort:

Alſo ſhalbe to the multitude of much people, whiche ſhall make a ſounde lyke the noyſe of the ſee. And the vyolence of the nations, which ſhal rage lyke the ruſhyng in of many waters. Euē lyke many waters ſhall ſ people rage. God ſhal rebuke hys, and he ſhal ſpeake farre of. He ſhal be chaſed away lyke as drye ſtrawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde: and lyke a thynge that turneth before the ſtozme at euen, beholde, ther is trouble: and oꝛ euer it be morninge: loo, he is gone. Thys is the porcyon of them that oppreſſe vs, and the lot of them that robbe vs.

Of the prophecie agaynſt Egypt.

That lande that truſteth vnder the ſhadowe of wynges, ſ lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Eſthepia ſendynge meſſaungers by the ſee, euē veſſelles of reedes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye ſpedye meſſaungers) to a nacyon that is ſcatered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, a fearfull people from they be gynnynge hither to. a nacyon troden downe by litle and lytle, whole landes the flodes haue ſpoiled. All ye inhabytours of the worlde and indwellers of the earth, looke vp when he ſetteth a token in the mountaynes, and herken when he bloweth wpth the trompe. For ſo the Lord ſayde vnto me: as for me, I wil take my reſt, and loke vpon the matter in my habitacyon, lyke a fayer beate after the rapne, and lyke a cloude of dewe in the beate of harueſt.

For afore the harueſt when the braunche is grown, there ſhall come rype fructe oute of the floure: and he ſhall cut downe the increaſe with ſythes, and the braunches ſhall be take awaye wpth hookes. Thus ſhall they be leſte together vnto the ſoules of the mountaynes & to the beaſtes of the earth: for in ſommer the byrdes ſhall remayne vpon it, & euery beaſt of the lande ſhall be vpon it in the wynter. In that tyme ſhal there a preſente be brought vnto the Lord of hoſtes euen a people that is ſcattered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, that ſame people whiche haue bene ſcarfull from they be gynnynge hither to, a nacyon troden downe by litle and lytle whole lande the flodes haue ſpoiled, to ſ place of the name of the Lord of hoſtes, euen to the mount Syon.

He beuſe burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a ſwift cloude, and ſhall come into Egypte and the Idols of Egypte ſhall tremble at the preſence of hys, and the herſe of Egypte ſhall quake in the mydd eſte of her. And I wil ſet the Egypcyans one agaynſt another, ſo that one brother ſhal fygth agaynſt another, and one neyghboare agaynſt another, Etype agaynſt Etype, and Realme agaynſt Realme. The mynde alſo of Egypte ſhalbe cleane wpthout counsell wythin it ſelfe and the druyce that they take wil I deſtroye, ſo ſ they ſhall ſeke counsell at Idols, and at ſorcercers, at workes wpth ſpytes and at ſothſayers. And the Egypcyans wil I geue ouer into the hande of a marvelous cruell lord, and a myghty kyng ſhall haue domynyon ouer them, ſayth the Lord God of hoſtes the waters of the ſee ſhal layle and ſ ruer ſhal decreaſe, and be dryed vp. The waters ſhalbe drawen out the ryues of Egypt ſhalbe emptyed and dryed vp, the reedes and flagges ſhalbe cut downe.

The greſſe in the ryuer & by the ryuers banck and all that groweth by the ryuer ſhall wyther away, and be broughte to naught. The ſpywers alſo ſhall mourne, and all they that caſt angle in to the water, ſhal make lamentaſion and they ſhalpe forth they net beſyde the waters ſhalbe roted out. Moreover, they that work: in flax and make ſyne workes ſhalbe confounded: & ſo ſhal they that were open workes. For thys open workes ſhalbe euen deſtroyed, & al they make ponders and ſtues for they ſhal come to naught.

But ye fooliſhe prynces of ioan, ye wyſe counſylers of Pharao, whole wyſe it is turned to fooliſhnes, howe ſay ye vnto Pharao. I am come of wyſe men, and of auncyente kynges: Where are nowe the wyſe men? Let they tell the (yf they can) what the Lord of hoſtes hath deuyſed vpon pou Egypte.

The prynces of ioan are become folles, ſ prynces of Noph are dyſceaured, they haue dyſceaured Aſſ Egypte

The Prophecy

Egypte, euen they that were taken for the chiefe kyngdome thereof. In the myddes of it hath the Lord poured the spere of wyckednesse, and they haue dysceined Egypt in euery worke thereof. euens as a dyonchen ma stakereth in his vomyte. Neither shall the heade of caple, the braunch of rebe be able to do any worke in Egypt. In that day shall Egypte be lyke vnto women, It shall be afrayed and stande in feare at the moeyon of the hand of the Lord of hostes, whych he shaketh ouer it. And Egypte shall be afrayed of the lande of Iuda so that euery one whych maketh mencion of it, shall be afrayed thereat because of the counsell of the Lord of hostes whych he deuyled for it.

In that daye shall true cytyes in the lande of Egypte speake the language of Canaan, & sweare by the Lord of hostes, the cytye of desolacion, shall be called one of them. In that daye shall the salue of the Lord be in the myddes of the land of Egypte, & this tyle besyde it: VNTO THE LORD. And it shall be a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto the Lord, because of such as trouble them, and he shall send them a sauyour and a greates man to deliuer them.

And the Lord shall be known in Egypt, and the Egyptians shall knowe the Lord in that daye and do sacrifice & oblation. yee, they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The Lord also shall smyte Egypte soore, & heale them agayne, and they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye oute of Egypte into Assyria, and Assyria shall come into Egypte, and Egypte into Assyria. so that the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall see the Lord together. In that daye shall the nacyon of Israel be the chyldre wyth Egypt and Assyria, and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the lande whych the Lord of hostes hath blessed sayinge: blessed is my people of Egypte: For also is the worke of myne handes: and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

The xx. Chapter

Agaynst Egypte and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Tharthan came vnto Alood (when Sargon the kyng of Assyria had sent him) & had fought agaynst Alood, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hand of Elape the sonne of Amos, sayinge: Goo, and take of the sackcloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shoe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkinge naked and barefoote.

And the Lord sayde. lyke as my seruante Elape hath walked naked and barefoote for a sygne and wonder thre yeres vpon Egypte. And Ethiopia. Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take awaye oute of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, childe and olde men, naked and barefoote, & they shall loynes & shouers, to the great shame of Egypte.

They shall be broughte in feare also, and ashamyd one of another: Ethiopia of Egypte and Egypte of Ethiopia, consyderynge what glorie they were in afore. And they shall dwell in the same yle, shall saye in that daye: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whycher shall we flye for helpe, that we maye be deliuered from the kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

The xxi. Chapter

Agaynst Babilon, Dumea, and Arabya.

Burthen of the waste see, Euen as the stormie wyther that passeth thowre at the none daye, to come from the wyldernes, from that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one dysceitful offender come agaynst another, and one destroyer agaynst another. Alas Elam, lape serge thou of Media, all they greynge haue I layde downe. Therefore are my loynes fylled wyth sorrowe. heynnes hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a woman that is trauplynge: It made me stoupe when I hearde it, and it veried me when I sawe it. My hert panted, fearfulness came vpon me. The nyght of voluptuousnesse, hath be turned agaynst me into feare. While they garnished the table, the watchman looked: And while he was eatynge and drynckynge (it was sayde) vnto the Captaynes take you to poure mylde. For thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me, Go, and set a watchman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a chariot whych two horsen sat vpon, with the carpage of an asse, and the carpage of a camel: So he looked and toke very dilygent hede. And he cryed, Lord, I stande watching al the hole day, & am appointed to kepe my watch euery nyght. And beholde, here cometh a chariot of men, wyth two horsen. And he answered & sayde: Babilon is fallen, it is fallen, and the ymages of her goddesses hath he smyten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thers, and thou belogest to my come hore. Thus that I hearde of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Syria: Watchman what haste thou espyed by nyght? Watchman what haste thou espyed by nyght? The watchman sayde: The bynornynge cometh, and so doth the nyght. If ye wyl aske any question, then aske it: retuene & come agayne.

The burthen concernynge Arabya: In the plaunt grounde of Arabya shall ye tary all nyght euen in the streets of Medanim. The inhabytours of the lande of Thema broughte forth the water to him that wast thyrst, they preuented hym with theyr breade that was fled awaye. For because of sweardes are they become fugtyue, euen for the drawen sweard, and for the bent bowe and because of the greuousnes of warre. For thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me:

There is yet a yere accordynge to the yeres of an byrded seruant and all the glorie of Cedar shall lape. And the nombre of them that shall escape frome the bowes: shall be punished by the myghtye chyldren of Cedar, for so the Lord god of Israel hath spoken.

* A prophete agaynſt Tyre, and a promyſe that it ſhall be reſtoored agayne.

He burthen of * Tyre: Mourn ye ſhypes of Tyre, for there cometh ſuch deſtruction, that ye ſhall not haue an houſe to entre into. Oute of the lande of Citem haue they knowlege of this plage.
Ye ſtill ye that dwell in the Ile, the marchaun-tes of Tydon, and ſuch as paſſe ouer the ſee, haue made the pleneous. The cometh that groweth by the greete waters of Euphrates, and the frutes of þ ryuer were her vitayles, ſo that it became a commen marke of the nacjons. Be a ſhamed thou Tydon, for the ſee, (euen the ſtrength of the ſee,)

When Tydonnes cometh to the Egepyans, they ſhall be ſorpe for the rumoure that goeth of Tyre. Get you to Tyris mourn ye that dwell in the Ile. Is not this that glorious Tyre of pours, whiche hath bene of olde antyquyte. Her olde ſette ſhall cry her forth to be a ſourne into a ſarre countrey. Who hath deuyſed this agaynſt Tyre, that geueth garlandes vnto other cypres, whole marchautes are prynces & whole captaynes are honourable in the worlde. Euen the Lorde of hoſtes hath deuyſed this, to put to mynne all them that be proude vpon earthe.

Get the oute of the lande vnto the daughter of go aboute the cytye: thou hast thou hast bene forgotten, make swete melody, singe no songes that thou mayest be had in remembrance. And after the ende of the seuentye peeres that the Lord vsset Egre and we shall conuerthe vnto her rewarde, and shall comyt forpacion wth all the kyngdomes of the earth that are in this world.

They occupyng also and they reward shall be holpe vnto the Lord: They gapes shall not be laich by nor kepte in store, but it shall be theirs that dwell before the Lord that they may rate enough and haue clothyng sufficient.

The xxiii. Chapter.

A prophete of irritacion to come vpon this world because of synne

Behold, the Lord maketh the earth wast and emptye: he turneth it vpsyde downe, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof, And the preste shall be as the people, and the master as the seruant, the maistresse lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the buyer: he that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke hym that boroweth vpon vsury: the credytoure as better. The world shall be cleane wasted and utterly spoyled, for so the Lord hath spoken. The earth is sorpe, and consumeth away: the world is feble and perissheth, the proude people of the earth are come to naughte. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitants thereof, which haue transgressed the lawes, chaunged the ordynance, broken the euertlasting couenaunt.

Therefore hath the curse consumed the earth: they that dwell therein, are fallen into trespass. Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are perished wth brought, a few men are left behynde. The wyne faileth, the wyne hath no myght, all they that haue bene merry of hert are come to mourning. The myght of tabernacles is layd downe, the noyse of such as haue made mery, is ceased, the rope at the hyrcer is at an ende. They shall dryncke no more wyne wth myght, streng drinkes shall be bytter to them that dryncke it. The cytye of vanpoyse is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, that no man maye come in. In the stretes is there a crying because of wyne, all chere is vanisshed away, the myght of the world is gone: in the cytye is lyste desolacion, and the gate is smytten wth destruction.

For in the myddes of the world, even among the people, it shall come to passe, as at the wakinge of olives: and as the grapes are when the vine heruct is done: They shall lyke vnto the wyne, and make a mery noyse, and in magnifyinge of the Lord, shall they crye oute of the west. Therefore prayse ye the Lord in the valleys, euen the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the fleg of the see. From the uttermost parte of the earth haue we hearde prayse and myght, because of the ryghteous. And I sayde: I knowe a thyng in secrete: wo is me, the transgressours haue offended: fearfulness, the pyt, and the snare are vpon the, O thou that dwellest on the earth: It wyl come to passe that whosoener escapeth this fearful noyse shall fall into the pyt. And he that cometh vp:

out of the pyt, shall be taken wth the snare, for the wyndowes from on hygh are open, and the foundacions of the earth are moued.

The earth is utterly broken downe, the earth hath a sore rupne, the earth quaketh exceedingly. The earth shall relecth to and fro, lyke a dragon: karde, and shall be remoued lyke a tecton. of one of the) and the inquite therof shall be deaupe vpon it. It shall fall and not rise by agayne. And in that daye shall the Lord vsset the hoost aboute that is on hye, and the kynges of the world that are vpon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as they that be in prison, and they shall be shut vp in ward, and after many dayes shall they be visited. The more shall be abashed, and the sunne ashamed when the Lord of hostes shall rayne in mount Syon and in Jerusalem wth wynd and wyppre, and in the syghte of such as shall be of his counsell.

The xxv. Chapter.

A chauncel geuyn to God for his wyckes.

Thou arte the Lord my God, I wyl magnifye the, I wyl geue thanks vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wonderfull thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne owne counsels truly and fapthfully. Thou hast made of a cytye an heape of stones, and brought a strong towne into decay. The habytacion of straungers hast thou made to be no cite, neither shall it be builded any more. Therefore shall the myghty people geue glorie vnto the, the cytye of the vaucaunt heathen shall feare the. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, and a succour for the needy in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euell wether, a shadowe agaynst the heate. For the blast of ragynge men is lyke a storme that casteth downe the wall.

Lyke as thou bringest heate downe out of a hye place, so shalt thou suppress the noyse of alpauces. The heate is the shadowe of the cloude, the braunch of the myghty shall be brought lowe. And in this mountayne shall the Lord of hostes make vnto al people a feast of plenteous and delicate thynges, euen of most pleasant and delectable dishes. And in this mountayne shall the Lord destroy this couerynge, and al the people are wrapped in, and the hanginge is spread vpon all nacions. As for death he hath destroyed it for euer: And the Lord God shall wyppre awaye traites frome all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take awaye out of al the earth. For so the Lord hath sayde.

And in that daye it shall be sayde: Lo, thyng is our God, we haue waited for hym, and he shall saue vs. This is the Lord in whome we haue hoped, we wyl be mery and reioyce in the saluacion that cometh of hym. For in this mountayne shall the hande of the Lord cease, and as he shall be threshed vnder him, euen as strawe is threshed vpon the ground. And he shall stretch oute his hand in the myddes of them (as he that swymmeth, casteth oute his handes to swimme) and the strength of his handes shall be bring downe they: pryde. The stronge holde also and defence of the walles shall be ouerthrowen and cast downe and brought them to the ground, euen vnto dust.

The xxvi. Chapter.

A songe

A songe of the deservance of the people.

That daye shall this songe besonge in the land of Iuda. * We haue a stronge cytie. Saluacion shall God appoynte in strete of walles and bulwarke, * Openye the gates that ryghteous people whych kepe the truste maye entre in. There mynde is set vpon the because thou persecueste them * in peace yee, euen in peace. because they put thei truste in the. Put ye your trust alway in the Lord. for in the Lord God ther is strenght for euer more. * For he hath brought downe the hye mynded cytyens. As for the proude cytie he hath brought it low, euen vnto the grounde shall he cast it downe & bringe it vnto duste. The fote euen the fote of the poore, and the steps of suche as be in necessitye shall treade it downe.

The path of equyte wylt thou graunt vnto þe, o thou moost ryghteous, * thou shalt ordeyne þe path of him that is ryghteous. Yee in þe waye of thy iugementes, O Lord. haue we put our trust in the. Thy name also & the remembraunce of the is the thinge that our soule longeth for.

* My soule hath longed for the al the nyght and both my sprete (whych is within me) wyl I like the early in the mornynge. For when thy iugementes are in þe earth, þe inhabytours of þe world shall learne ryghteousnes. Shall the vngodlye man be fauoured, whych hath not learned ryghteousnes but doth wyckedly in the earth, where nothyng oughte to be done, but that whiche is ryghteous. He shall not see the glorie of the Lord when thy hande is lyfte vp to stryke they se it not: but they shall see it, and be confounded with the reule of the people, & the spere that consumeth thine enemyes shall deuoure them.

Lord vnto vs thou shalt proude peace. * for thou also hast wrought all oure workes in vs, O Lord our God, other lordes besyde the haue subdued vs, but we wyl be myndful onely of the and thy name. The dead wyl not lyue: and they that be out of lyfe wyl not ryl agayne, thefore haste thou vlyted and rooted the out & destroyed all þe memory of the. Thou haste increased the people (O Lord, þe haste increased þe people, and thou art praysed thou hast sent thy kenne of, vnto all the coastes of the earth. * For in trouble haue they vlyted the: they powred out they prayer when thy chastenynge was vpon them.

* I like as a woman wch. de that draweth the nype toward her traupil, is soye & cryeth in her paynes, euen so haue we bene in thy syghte. O Lord. * We haue bene wchilde & suffered paine, as though we had broughte forth the wynde. For ther is no saluacion in þe earth neyther doeth in habytours of the world submyt them selues.

* Thy deade men shal lyue, euen wch my body shall they ryl agayne. Awake and syng ye & dwell in dust. For the dewe is euen as the dewe of herbes, & the earth shall caste out them that be vnder her. Come my people, * entre thou into thy chambers, and shutte thy doores about the: * hyde thy selfe for a lytle whyle, vntil the indignacion be ouer past. * For lo þe Lord is commynge out of hys place, to vlyte the wyckednesse of such as dwell vpon earthe. The earthe also shall dysclose her owne bloude, and shall nomore hyde the that are slayne in her.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Agaynst the synners of the commynge of Egipt, and destruccyon of Iherosolym.

That daye, the Lord wch. soze great & myghty swerde shall vlyste. * Leathan & fugitive serpent, euen Leathan that croked serpente, and he shall slay the dragon þe is in the see. In that daye, se þe synge of the congregacion which is the vineparde, & byngeth forth the best wyne. Euen I the Lord do kepe it. In due seasons shall I water it, and least the enemy do it any harme I wyl both nyghte and daye preserue it. There is no dyspleasure in me els when the vineparde byngeth me forth breezes and thornes. I wolde go thorow it by warre, and buine it vp together. Let it take holde of my strenght, and it shall be at one wyth me, euen at one shall it be wyth me.

The dayes are commynge þe Jacob shall take roote. Israel shall be grene and floure, and the world shall be fylled with frute. Hathe he smytten hym as soze as he dyd the other that smote hym. * Is he slayne with soze a slaughter as they had þe slawe hym. In measure dothe he smyt hym, whyle he sendeth vnto hym such thynge, wherby he cometh to hys mynde agayne. For in the daye that the east wynde bloweth soze, it taketh awaye the frutes. Thus therfore shall þe iniquyte of Jacob be reconyled, and here is all the frute of the takynge awaye of hys synne, if he make all the bones of the altare of Idoles, as chalke stones that are beaten in lunder, that they growe and Images ryl not by agayne.

Els shall the stronge cytye be desolate and þe habytacyon forsaken and lefte lyke a wilderness. There shall the calfe fede, and there shall he lye, and cate by the grasses therof. Whent he braunches of it are drye, they are broken of, and the women come, and set them on fyre. * For it is a people of no vnderstandynge, and therfore he þe made the shall not fauoure them, & he that created the shall geue them no grace. And in that daye shall the Lord make a threshing from the myddes of the ruer Euphrates vnto the ruer of Egipte & ye chyldren of Israel shall be gathered together one to another. In that daye shall þe great trompe be bloune, so that they which were lost in the lande of Assyria, and they that were banished in to the lande of Egipte, shall come and worship the Lord in the holpe mounte at Iherusalem.

Agaynst the synners of Egipt, and agaynst the synners of Iherosolym.

Be vnto the crowne of pride enen to the broken people of Egipt whose great pompe is a floure that fadeth awaye vpon the heade of the valley of suche as be in welthe, and are ouerlade with wyne. * Scholde, * there cometh a vehement and a soze daye from the Lord like an vnmesurable hable & perillous tempest euen lyke þe force of myghty & horryble waters.

The xxix. Chapter.

Be vnto the crowne of pride enen to the broken people of Egipt whose great pompe is a floure that fadeth awaye vpon the heade of the valley of suche as be in welthe, and are ouerlade with wyne. * Scholde, * there cometh a vehement and a soze daye from the Lord like an vnmesurable hable & perillous tempest euen lyke þe force of myghty & horryble waters.

The xxx. Chapter.

Be vnto the crowne of pride enen to the broken people of Egipt whose great pompe is a floure that fadeth awaye vpon the heade of the valley of suche as be in welthe, and are ouerlade with wyne. * Scholde, * there cometh a vehement and a soze daye from the Lord like an vnmesurable hable & perillous tempest euen lyke þe force of myghty & horryble waters.

The Prophecy

22 that violently beareth doone all thynges. The crowne of the pryde of the drunken Ephraim shall be troden under fote. * So that the flour of hys sayrenesse and bewtye, whiche is in the brade of the valley of fatnes, shall fade awaye, as doth an vntymelpe rype spgge afore herueste. Whiche when a man spyeth, he loketh vpon it, & whyle it is yet in hys hande, he eateth it vp.

23 In that day shall the Lorde of hostes be the crowne of glory, & by a mounde of bewtye vnto þe respyde of hys people, he wyll be also a spyrite of perfecte knowlege to hym that spytteth in iudgement and strength vnto them that turne aboate the battell to the gate of the enemyes. But they are out of the waye by reason of wyne yee, farre out of þe waye are they thowowe stronge dyyncke. * The prest also and þe prophet are gone astray by the meanes of stronge dyyncke, they are drunken wth wyne, they go amysse thowowe strong dyyncke, they faple in prophesyinge & somle in iudgement. For tables are so ful of vompote and fylthynesse that no place is cleane. Whome then shall such one teach knowlege? And whom shall he make to vnderstande the thynges that he heareth? For they are as ignorant as yonge chyl- dren, y are taken frome the mylke, & they weyned.

24 For they that be suche, muste haue after one lesson, another lesson. * after one comaundement another comaundement, after one rule another rule: after one instruccyon another instruccyon there a lytle & there a lytle. For ye that speake vnto thys people, is euen as one that useth rude- nes of speche, and a straunge language. If auye man laye vnto them lo, thys is the rest wherew y maye ease hym that is to wepe, thys is the rest wherew they wyll not heken. * Therefore, the worde of the Lorde: lesson vpon lesson, commaundement vpon comaundement, rule vpon rule, instruccyon vpon instruccyon, there a lytle & there a lytle. Shall be vnto them an occasyon of som- byrag that they maye go on, and fall backward be brused, tangled and snared.

25 Wherefore, heare the worde of the Lorde ye, mockers, ye that haue rule of thys people, which is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue sayd, we haue made a couenaunt wth death, and wth hel are we at agrement. And thoughte there go forth a soze plage, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made salthode oure refuge, and vnder vompote are we hyd. Therefore sayth the Lord. God. He holde, I laye in syon for a foundacyon a stone, euen a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundacyon. Whoso beleueth, let hym not be to hastye. Iudgemente also wyll I laye to the rule and ryghteousnesse to the balaunce, so that the hable shall take awaye poure vayne confydence as a broume, and the prey place of poure refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

shall it go thowowe: and when the nopsle therof is perceaued, it shall gendre verayson. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the couerynge soe small that a man cannot wynde hym selfe vnder it. * For the Lorde shall stande as in mount: þe rasym, & shall be wrythlyke as in þe valley. * Sp- beon that he may do hys straunge worcke, and bynge to passe his acte, hys straunge acte.

Howe therfore se that ye be no mockers, lest þe poure punishment increase, for I haue heard of þe Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a shorte ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, & he- ken vnto my voyce, consydre & ponde my spech. Both not the husbandman plowe all the daye, & openeth and breaketh the clottes of hys ground that he maye sow: when he hath made it plaine wyll he not spede abroad the fetches, and sowe comyn, and cast in wheate, by measure, and the appoynted barley and rye in thery place? God wyll instructe hym to haue dyscrecyon, euen bys God wyll teach hym. For fetches shall not be threshed wth an harowe, neyther shall a carte whele be broughte thowowe the comyn but the fetches are beaten oute wth a staffe, and comyn wth a rod. But the sede that breake is made of is threshed, though it be not alwaye a thrething. And the cart whele must be brought ouer it, lest he grynde it wth hys teeth. This also cometh of the Lorde of hostes, whych worketh w wonder- ful wysdome, & byngeth excellent workes to passe.

The xxix Chapter:

1 Unto the, O Arpell thou cryste þe David dwelt in. So on from peate to pear, and let the lambs be slayn. I wyll laye sege vnto Arpel, so that there shall be heynnes & sorowe in it and it shall be vnto me euen as an alter of slaugh- ter. I wyll be sege the rounde about, and fyght a gayng the thowowe a bulworcke, and wyll reare vp dytches agaynst the. Thou shalt be brought downe, & shalt speake oute of the grounde, & thy spech shall go lowe out of the dust. Thy voyce al so shall come out of the ground lyke the voyce of a wyth and thy talkynge shall whysper out of the dust. Moreover, the nopsle of thy straying ene- mires shall be lyke thynne dust, and the multitude of thy aunes shall be as dry strawe that cannot tary euen sodenly & in hast shall they blaske go. Thou shalt be vylited of the Lorde of hostes wth thoudie earthquake, and wth a grete nopsle wth storme & tempest & wth the flame of consu- mynge fyre. And the multitude of al nacyns þe fyght agaynst Arpel, shall be as a dreame scene by nyght: euen so shall al they be, y make war aga- inst it, & strong holdes to overcome it, & that lay any sege vnto it. In conclusiun, it shall be euen as when an hongry man dreameth y he is eatynge, & when he awaketh, hys soule is empty. Or as when a thyrstye man dreameth that he is dryn- kyng: and when he awaketh he is yet saynter & hys soule hath the apetyte. Euen so shall the mul- titude of al nacyns that fyghte agaynst Syon. C Wondze these thynges once in your myndes, math. 23. b. & wondze. * Blynded are they them selues and the blynde gyddes of ocher. They are drunken: but not wth wyne, they are vnstable but not tho-rowe stronge drynke. For the Lorde hath coue-red you wth a slomberynge sprete, and hath closed your eyes. Your prophetes also & rulers esay. 28. b. & shuldse, them hath he covered. * And the visio of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a booke that is sealed vp, whych men delyuer to one that is learned, sayng: Reade & in it. And he sayth. I canot, for it is sealed. And the booke is geuen vnto him that is not learned, sayng: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therefore thus hath the Lorde sayde:

math. 23. b. * For so moch as thys people when they be in trouble, do honour me wth their mouth and wth their lippes but their herte is far frome, & the fearre whych they haue vnto me, procedeth of a esay. 28. b. comaundement & is taughte of men. Therefore wyl I domatrapis amonge thys people, euen maruelous thynges (I say) and a wonder. * For the wysdome of their wysleme shal perishe, & the vnderstanding of theyr witt my shal hide it self esay. 28. b. vnto them & kepey secret theyr though tes, to hyde theyr counsel from the Lord and do theyr woikes in darknesse, sayng: * Who seyth vs? & wokuoweth vs? Doubtes, your destruction is, in my bandes in reputation as the pot ters clape. And both the woike say of hym that made it, he made not me: And both an earthe vessel saye of him that fashioned it, he had no vnderstanding: Is it not harde at hande, that I pbanus shal be turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shal be taken as the wood? And in that daye shal draffe men heare the woibes of the booke, and the eyes of the blynde shal be euen out of the cloude & out of darknes.

E The meke spreted also shalbe mery in & Lord, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shal reioyse in the holpe one of Israel. For he & dyd vpolence, is brought to naught, and & scozeful man is consumed, and they rote out that were hasty so sone to vneyghteousnes, making a ma-to synne in the worde, and that toke hym in a snare: whych reioued them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therefore thus sayth & Lord vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayeth he & redemed Abrahams: * Jacob shal not now be confounded, nor his face pale. But whē he seeth hys chyldren the woike of my bandes in & myd-des of him, they shal sanctifie my name, & prayse the holp Lorde of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an errouse spete shal come to vnderstandinge, & they that haue bene scozefull, shal learne doctryne.

The xxx Chapter.

esay. 28. b. & Agaynst them that to take the counsell of God & clyue to the counsell of men. The prophet also sheweth the reasmaune of the people, that after the destruction of Iherusalem went into Egypt.

A Las, for those dyfobedpente chyldren, esay. 28. b. sayth the Lord) * that they wil take cousell wthout me. Alas, & they wyl take a secrete aduyce, and not oute of my sprete, and therefore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypt, and haue asked no questio at my mouth but seke strenght in the myght of Pharaon, & trust in the shadowe of Egypte. Therefore shal the strenght of Pharaon be your confusio, & the trust in the shadowe of Egypt your shame. For his captaynes were at zoan, & his ambassadours came vnto Hanes * They were all ashamed of the people & coulde do them no good, and that might not helpe the, nor shewe them any profyte, but were theyr cofusyon and rebuke.

The heuy burthen of the beastes of the south in a lande of trouble and angurthe, fro whence shall come the ponge and olde Lyon, the wyper and fyp serpent that flyeth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare theyr ryches, & vpo Camels their treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vayne & nothyng worth shal & helpe of the Egyptians be. Therefore haue I cryed vnto Iherusalem. They shal haue strenght ynough, yf they wyl sette theyr myndes in quyetnes.

esay. 28. b. * Howe therefore, go thy waye, and wyte thys before them in a table, & note it in a booke that it maye fynally remayne & be kepte still for euer.

esay. 28. b. For thys is an obstynate people: * and dyssembleng chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

esay. 28. b. For they saye vnto the seers: We not, and to them & be cleare of iudgement loke not out right thynges for vs, but speake sayre wordes vnto vs loke out errours, get you out of thys waye, departe out of thys path, & turne the holpe one of Israel from vs. Therefore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: Because youre hertes ryle a-gaynst thys worde, & because ye trust in wydge dealyng & peruerse iudgement, & put your con-fydence therein. Therefore shal ye haue thys myschefe for youre destruction and fall, lyke an an hys wall that falleth, because of some ryle or blaste, whose breakynge cometh sodenlye.

esay. 28. b. * And the hurte therof is lyke an erthen vessel, whych breaketh wthout helpe. so & in the burstyng of it, ther is not founde one shewer to fetch fyre in, or to take water wththal out of the pyt.

esay. 28. b. For thus sayth the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel: In repentance & in * rest shal ye be safe: in quyetnes and sure confydence shal be your strenghte. But ye haue had no lust ther-to, for ye haue sayd No, but we wyl escape throrowe doctres. (Therefore shal ye slye) and we wyl get vs vp vpon swyfte beastes And ther-foze shal youre persecutours be swyfter. * & thousande shal slye at the rebuke of one, and at & rebuke of fyue shal ye all slye, tyll ye be lefte as a wyppye mast vpon the top of a mountaine, and as a beaken vpon an hylle. * Therefore doth the Lord cause you to wayte that he maye haue mercy vpon you to thintente, that he may haue the preeminence, when he is gracious vnto you.
For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Wicked are all they that hope in hym.

salem, thou shalt not be in heyness but at the

The Prophecy.

And when he heareth it he shall geue the answer. And though the Lord geue you the bread of trouble & the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be nomore so skant but thyne eyes shall se thy rayne. Pee, and thyne eare shall heare & talkynge of hym that doth speake behinde the.

bru. lill. n. * This is the wape, walke pe in it. Turne not aspyde, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the lyfte.
Pe shall destroye also the couerynge of your syluer pynages, and the deckynge of your golden pynages. Eue as sylkynnes shall ye put the away.
And thou shalt sape vnto it. Set the bece. The shall God geue rayne vnto thy seed, that shall sowe the grounde wythal, and breade of the increase of the earth, whych shall be fat & very pleteous. In that daye also, shall thy cattell be fed in large pastures. The oxen lyke wyse and the pouinge asses, that eate the grounde shall eate cleane prouender, whych is pouged wyth the wynde and the fanne.

ti. pet. ill. b Finally, vpon euerye hye mountayne & hyll shall there be ryuers & streames of waters, in the day of the great slaughter, whē the towers fall. & ozouer, the lyght of the mone shall be as the lyght of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shall be seuen folde, and haue as much thyne as in seuen dayes besyde, when the Lord vndereth vpon sore of his people, and healeth the stroke of their wounde. Behold, the fame of the Lord cometh from farre, & his presence is so hote, that no mā is able to abyde. His lippes are full of indignacyon, and his tonge is as a consuming fyre.
His breth is as a vehement floude of water & reacheth vnto the necke. That he may sift away the heathen in the syue of vanity. And his breth is as a byrdle of errour in the shadowes of the people.

es. l. a. And ye shall synge, lyke as in the nyght, whē the holpe solemnitye begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of hert, lyke as when one cometh wyth a pyper vnto the dyl of the Lord, and to the moote myghty out of Israel. And the Lord shall cause his glorious voyce to be heard, & shall declare his stretched out arme wyth a terrible countenance & wyth the flame of a consuming fyre, wyth noysome lyghtenynge, wyth a shower, & wyth hable stones. For thorow the voyce of the Lord shall * Allur be destroyed, whych smote other men wyth the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whither soeuer he goeth, the rodde shall cleaue vnto hym, whych the Lord shall laye vpon him wyth tabrettes and harpes.
& wyth great warre shall he fyght agaynst his hoost. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the begynnyng pe, euen for kynge is it prepared. This hath the Lord set in the depe: and made it wyde the burnynge wherof is fyre and much wood. The breth of the Lord, whych is a ryuer of hye mistone doth kyndle it.

The xxxi. Chapter.

mat. xlv. b He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

3 Obey vnto them that go downe into Egypte for helpe, & trust in horses, and put their confydence in charrettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lusty & stronge. But they regarde not the holpe one of Israel, & they aske no questyon at the Lorde.

(Where as he neuerthelesse beynge wysest of al) plageth the wicked, and yett goeth not from his worde, when he steppeth forth and taketh the victoary agaynst the household of the frowarde, & agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Howe the Egi-pcians are men, & not God, & they horses fleshy and not spert. And as sone as the Lord stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, & he that shulde haue bene helpe, and they shall al together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the Lyon oz * Lyons whelpes roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayde though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym neither abashed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mounte Syon, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes floure about thepyr nestes, * so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, saue, defende, & deliuer Jerusalem.

Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne a-gayne, from that infidelite, wherin you haue ned your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out his ydols of syluer & his ydols of golde, whych he haue made wyth his owne hades vnto your synne. * Allur also shall be slayne wyth the sword, not wyth a mans sword, nether shall the sword of any man denoure him: And he shall fle from the slaughter, & his seruantes shall be dyscomfyted in their hertes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, & his pry-nces shall flee from his badge. The hath the Lord spoken, whose lyghte burneth in Syon, & his fyre in Jerusalem.

The xxxii. Chapter.

3 The condicions of good rulers and offycers.

Behold, a kynge shall gouerne after the rule of ryghteousnes, & the princes shall rule, accordynge to the balance of equytte. And that mā shall be vnto me as a defence for the wynde, & as a refuge for the tempest lyke as a ryuer of water in a drye place, & shadowe of a great rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, & the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede.

The hert of the vndowse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnyprofyte toge shall speake playnely and dyspynctly. Then shall the foolys nygarde be nomore called geyle, nor the churle lyberall. But the nygarde shall be nygardly mynded, and his herte shall worke euell, and playe the hypocrite, and ymagyne abhominacions a-gaynst God, to make the holyr leane, & to withholde dysyncke from the churche. These are the per-lous weapons of the churche, these be his ma-nifull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore wyth dysceatfull wordes: yee, euen there as he shulde geue sentence wyth the poore. * But the liberall personne ymagineth honest thynges, & commeth vpon liberalyte vnto promocyon.

Up (ye ryche and ydell women) herken vnto my voyce. Pe careles cyties, marke my wodes,

des. After peares and dayes shal ye be brought in fear, & ye careless cyties. For harvest shal be out, and the grapegatherynge shal not come.
Ye cytyes ydell cyties ye that feare no parell.
Be abashed, you that lyue in aboundaunce: treble, you that lyue careless: cast of youre rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke clothe aboute you. For as the infantcs wepe when theyr mothers teates are dried so shal you wepe for your fayre felde & frutefull vyneyardes. & y<sup>e</sup> proples felde shal bynne thornes & thistles and so shal it be euen in euerye house of voluptuousnesse, and in euerye cite that reioysed. The places also shal be broken, and the greatly occup-ed cyties desolate. The towres & bulwarkes shal become denues for euermore, the pleasur of mules shal be turned to pasture for shepe: unto the tyme that the spere be poldred vpon vs from above. Then shal the wyldernes be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shal be re-hened for a wood. Then shal egyptie dwell in y<sup>e</sup> desert, and eyghteousnes in a frutefull lande.

And the rewarde of eyghteousnesse shal be peace, and her frute rest and quyetnes for euer.

And my people shal dwell in the pynes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of conforte. And when the bayle falleth, it shal fall in the woode, and the cytie shal be set lowe in the valley. & howe happy shal ye be, when ye shal safely sowe your seed besyde all waters, & dyue thither the fete of your oxen and asses.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The threatenynge agaynst the Assyrians. A dysty-pion of them that shal be the Lozde.

Wo to the that destroyest, whē thou wast not destroyed, thou breakest the leage, where as none hath broken it wyth y<sup>e</sup>: for when thou shalt leane destroyinge, * thou thy selfe shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceasest from breakeynge the leage, then shal they breake it to the. O Lozde, haue mercy vpon vs we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to such early: * our belth, in tyme of trouble. At that confuse noyse, the people fled, & at thynne exaltynge, the heathē were scattered. And the spoules shal be gathered (whych shal be y<sup>e</sup> pources) as are the gatherynge of Buehus. And the multitude going to it shal be as locustes runnyng to and fro.

The Lozde is exalted, for it is he that dwelleth an hye. he hath spilled syon wyth iudge-ment & eyghteousnes. And a sure stablyshynge of thy tymes shal be strenght, healethe, wysdom and knowledge: and the very feare of the Lozde shal be the treasure of it. Beholde, the messengers shal crye wythout: & the ambassadours of peace shal wepe bytterlye. The stretes are waist ther walketh no mā therein. God hath broken y<sup>e</sup> appoyntment, the cyties are caste away, and me are nothyng regarded, y<sup>e</sup> desolate earth is in heynesse. Libanus is shamed: & he dwē down Saron is lyke a wyldernes: Basan and Char-mel are spoyled of their frutes: & therfore saith the Lozde, I wyl by nowe: nowe wyl I be a-uaunced: nowe wyl I be exalted as a nygh-tye God. * Ye shall conceaue stubble, & beate stewe, and poure spere shal be the spere, that it may consume you and the people shal be burnt lyke lyme, and as thornes burne that are bedde of, and cast in the spere. Nowe herken to ye that are farre of, howe I haue done, and consyde my power, ye that be at hande.

The synners at Sidon are afrayd, a soden fear fulnes is come vpon the ppoctes, what is he amonge vs, saye they, that shal dwell by the consumynge spere: whych of vs maye abyde that no counsell agaynst y<sup>e</sup> innocent bloude. whych holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euil. He it is that shal dwell on hye: whose sauegarde shal be in a bulwarke of rockes, to hym shal be geue meat, & his waters shal not fayle. Thynne eyes shal se the kynge in bys glozpe: euen the kynge of the farre countreys shal they se: thine

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is besieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kyng Hezekias.

In the xxi. pere of kyng Hezekias came Sennacherib kyng of the Assyriars downe, to laye seage vnto all the stronge cyties of Iuda, to conquere the. And the kyng of the Assyriars sent Rabshakeh from Lachis toward Jerusalem agaynst kyng Hezekias, wpth an excreadyng hoste which let hym by the condyte of the ouerpole in the waye þe goeth thowowe the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakin helias sonne þe president, & Sobna the scribe, & Joab & saphs sonne the secretozpe.

And Rabshakeh sayd vnto them: Tell Hezekias, that the grete kyng of Assyria saith thus vnto hym: what presumption is thys, þe thou trustest vnto: I sayd: Surely thou trustest in bayne wordes, when counsell & strengthe are necessary to batteyle, or els wherto trustest þe, that thou castest thy selfe of from: * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reede (I meane Egypt) whych be that leane vpon, it goeth in to bys hande and shutech hym thowowe.

Euen so is wharao þe kyng of Egypte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But yf thou woldest saye to me: We trust in the Lord our God. A goodly God in dede whose bye places and aultares Hezekia toke downe and commaunded Iuda & Jerusalem to worshyppe onely before the aulter. Howe therfore delyuer hostages that thou rebelle nomore agaynst my Lord þe kyng of Assyriars. And I wyl geue þe two thousand horses yf thou be able to set men vpo the. Howe darest thou resist the power of þe smalest pynce, that my Lord hath: howe darest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egypt: * or to uer, thynkest thou that I am come vphither to destroye thys lande without the Lordes wyl: The Lord sayde vnto me: go vpon into the lande, that thou maye destroye it. Then sayde Eliakin, Sobna & Joab vnto Rabshakeh: Speake to vs thy seruantes (we praye the) in the Assyriars language, for we vnderstande it well.

And speake not to vs in the Iewes toge, lest the folke heare whych lyeth vpo the wal. Then answered Rabshakeh: thynke ye, þe thoking sent me to speake thys onely vnto the Lord & the hath he not sent me vnto them also that Ipe vnto the wall & they may be copelled to eate thep owne donge, & drinke thep ownne stale wpon?

And Rablaketh stode styf, & cryed with a loude voice in the Jewes tonge, and sayd: nowe take hede, howe the great kyng of the Assyrians, ge ueth you warnynge. Thus sayeth the kyng: Let not hezekias dysceane you for he shal not be able to delpue you. Moreover, let not heze kias comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayeth the Lorde withoute doubt, shal defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cite into the handes of the king of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the kyng of Assyria optayne my fa uoure, enclyne to me, so maye euery man enioye his vyneparde and figg trees, and dypncke the water of his cesterne, vnto the tyme I come my selfe and dypnge you into a lake þis lyke your owne, wherin is whete & wyne, whiche is both sowen with seed, & planted with vynepardes.
Let not hezekias dysceane you when he sayeth vnto you the Lorde shal delpue vs. * Wight the Gods of the Setples kepe euery mans land, from the power of the kyng of the Assyrians.
Where is þ god of hemath & Arphad? Where is þ god of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my handes? Or whiche of all the Gods of these landes hath delpued thep countre out of my power: is the Lorde in dede able to delpue Jerusalem from my had vnto this hezekias messaungers helde thep tuges, & answered not one word, for þ king had charged the þ they shuld gyue hym no answer.
So came Eliakim hezekias sonne the president Sobna the scribe, and Ioab Asphas sonne the recetorpe, vnto hezekias with rente clothes, and tolde hym the wordes of Rablaketh hezekias humbled hym selfe before the Lorde. The sermo

When hezekias herde that he rente his clothes, & put on a sackclothe and went into the temple of þ Lorde but he sent Eliakim the president, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest priestes clothed in sacke vnto the prophet E saie the sonne of Amos, and they laide vnto him: Thus sayeth hezekias this is þ date of trouble of plage and blasphempe: for the chyldren are come to the place of bythe: but there is no po wer to bynge them forth. The Lorde thy God (no doubt) hath well consydered the wordes of Rablaketh, whome hym Lord þ kyng of the Assyrians hath sent to desyre and blasphempe the lypunge God, with such wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde ryghte well. And therefore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that are lyfte. So the seruauntes of the kyng hezekias came to Esaye.

And Esaye gaue them thus answer, Say thus vnto your Lorde thus sayeth the Lorde, Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou haste hearde where wth the kyng of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blasphemmed me. Beholde, I wyl cause a winde to go ouer hym as sone as he heareth the rumoure, he shal go agayne into his countre, there wyl I destroe hym wth the the sworde in hym one lande. * Nowe when Rab laketh returned he founde þ kyng of Assyria lay inge sege to Lybnas, for he had understande þ he was departed from Lachys. For there came a rumoure that Charakys kyng of Ethyoppa was come forth to warre agaynst hym. And when the kyng of Assyria hearde that, he sente other messengers to kyng hezekias wth thep commaundement. Saye thus to hezekias kyng of Iuda. Let not thy God dysceane þ, in whome thou hopest, and sayeste: Jerusalem shal not be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Assyria.

For loo, thou knowest well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the lande þ they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape: Were the people of the Gentyles (whome my progenyto urs conquered) delpued at any tyme thowowe theyre Gods? * Asnaneir, Gozan, Haran, Kereph and the chyldren of Eden, whiche were at Chasalar. Where is the kyng of hemath, & the kyng of Arphad, and the kyng of the crye Sepharaim Eua and Ana: Nowe when he zekia had receaued the letter of the messaungers and reade it, he wente vp into the house of þ Lo de, and opened the letter before the Lorde, and hezekia prayed before the Lorde on hym selfe O Lorde of hostes thou God of Israel, whych dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou arte the God, that onely is God of all kyngdomes of the world for thou onely hast created heauen and earth,

Enclyne thyn eare Lorde and consyder, open thyn eyes, O Lorde, and se, and pender all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, whiche hath sent hys embassage to blasphempe the lypunge God.
It is true O Lorde, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and landes, and caste thep goddes in the fyre. Not wthstan dyng those were no gods, but the workes of mens handes, of wood, or stone, therefore haue they destroied them. Delpue vs then, O Lorde oure God, from þ handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then Esaye þ sonne of Amos sent vnto hezekia, saying Thus say eth the Lord God of Israel: Wher as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Senna cherib the kyng of Assyria this is the answer that the Lorde hath geuen, concernynge hym.

Dispyled arte thou, & mocked: O daughter Sy on he hath taken his leade at the, O daughter Jerusalem. But thou Sennacherib: whome hast thou despyed & blasphemmed: Agaynst whom hast thou lyfted vp thy voice, and cratted thy proude lokes: euen agaynst the holp one of Is aell. Thou wth thy seruauntes hast blasphemmed the Lorde, and thus holdest þ of thy selfe. I wyl couer thy hye mountaynes and sydes of Lyba nus wth my horsemen. And there wyl I cutte dowe the hye Cedres trees and the fazyeste fyre trees, I wyl vp into the byght of it, and into þ cheke of hym tymbre woddes. If there be no water, I wyl graue and dypncke. And as for waters of defence, I shal dyppe them vp wth þ the Lorde, & sayde. Remember (O Lorde) that I haue walked before the in tructh, and a sted-fast herte, and haue done the thyng that is pleasayde God vnto Elai<sup>r</sup>: Go and speake vnto He-

A Crane and moyled as a dove.

Dezekia is reproved of Esaie because he showed his treasure unto the embassadors of Babilon.

At * same tyme, Merodach Ba-Babylon, sent letters and presētes to hezekia. For he vnderstode how

And hezekia was glad therof, and showed them the commoditie of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spices and rootes of precious oyles, all that was in his cubberdes and treasure houses. There was not one thyng in hezekias house, and so showed he all his kyngdom but he let them se it.

Then came Elaye the prophete to kyng hezekia, and sayde vnto hym: What haue the men sayde and frome whence came they vnto the: hezekia answered, they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me out of Babylon: Elay said what haue they looked vpon in thine house: hezekia answered. All that is in myne house haue they sene and there is nothyng in my treasure but I showed it them.

E Then sayde Elaye vnto hezekia: Under-stande the worde of the Lorde of hostes. * Beholde the tyme wyl come that euery thyng which is in thine house, and all that thy prynces haue layed vp in store vntill this daye shalbe carped to Babylon, and nothyng lette behynd. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Pea and parte of thy sones, that come of the, and whome thou shalt get shalbe carped hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons court. Then sayde hezekia to Elaye. Nowe God prosper his owne counsaile whiche thou hast tolde me he said moreover. So that there be peace and faythfulnes in my tyme.

The crimes of S. Iohn Baptist, The preparation of the Apostles. The calling of the Gentiles.

Comfort my people (O ye prophetes) comfort my people, saith your god, comforted Ierusalem at the here and tell her: that her trauaile is at an ende that her offence is pardoned that she hath receaved of the Lordes hande sufficient correction for all her synnes. * A voice cryed in wyldernesse. Prepare the waye of the Lorde in the wyldernesse, make streyght the path for our God in the desert. Let al walles be exalted, and euery mountayne and hille be layed lowe: what so is crooked, let it be made streyght and let the rougher, be made plapnfeldes. * For the glorie of the Lorde shall appere, and all flesh shall at once se it, for whyp: p mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake. Nowe crye. And the prophete answered what shal I crye: * that all flesh is grasse, and that al the goodlynes therof is as the floure of the felde. The grasse is withered, the floure faileth awaye. Even so is the people as grasse, when the brethe of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Neuertheless whether the grasse wither, or that floure fade away. * Per the worde of our God endureth for euer. So vp vnto the hye hill. O Sion, thou that byrnest good tydings, lyfte vp thy voyce with power. O thou preacher Ierusalem. Lyfte it vp without feare, and saye vnto the cyties of Iuda: Beholde poure God, beholde: the Lorde God shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he byrgeth hys treasure with hym and his shoores go before hym. He shall fede hys flocke lyke an herdeman. He shall gather the lambs together with his arme, and carpe them in hys bolome, and shall kyndly entreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in hys fyste: Who hath measured heauen wpp: hys spaine and hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in thys measure: Who hath weped the mountaynes and hilles in a ballaunce: Who hath refourmed the mynde of the Lorde: or to whome hath he shewed his counsell: * Or who is of hys counsell to teach hym: or who hath geuen hym vnderstandynge and hath taught hym the path of iudgement: Who taughte hym comynge and opened vnto hym the waye of vnderstandynge: Behold al people are in comparison of hym as a droppe to a bucketful, and are counted as the lest thyng that the ballaunce wepeth. Pee and the fleshe he taketh vp as a verpyle thyng. Ipharus is not sufficient to mynstere tye for his of ferpnge, & all the beastes therof, are not ynough to one sacryfice. All people in comparison of hym are reckened as nothyng: & if they be compared wth hym, lesse then nothyng: as it that is not. To whom then wyl ye lyken God: or what similitude wyl ye set vp vnto hym: Shall the carner make hym a carned ymage: and shal the golde smyth couer hym wth the golde, or caste hym into a fourme of syluer plates: & moreover, shall the ymagemaker (that the poore men which is dysposed maye haue some thyng to set vp also) like out a chole a tre that is not rotten & carue therout an ymage that moueth not: Linc we ye nothyng, O wretches: hearde ye neuer of it hath it not bene preached vnto you since the begynnynge: haue ye not bene enfourmed of thys by the foundacyon of the earth, & he spreceth vpon the cyrcle of the worlde, and that all the inhabytours of the worlde are in comparison of hym, but as grechoppers: * That he spredeth out the heauens as a couerpnge: that he stretcheth them out, as a tente to dwell in: That he byngeth prynces to nothyng, & the Iudges of the earth to dust so that of them it maye be sayde thys: ye not planted nor sowed agayne, neyther they stocke rooted agayne in the earth. For as soon as he bloweth vpon them, they whypster and fade away lyke the strawe in a whypster wynde. To whome nowe wyl ye lyken me: & whome shall I be lyke sayeth p holy one: Lyfte vp your eyes on hye, & consider: * who hath made these thynges, which come out by so greate heapes: and he can call the al by theyr names. For there is nothyng byd vnto the greatnes of hys power, strenght & myght how may the Iacob thynke, or howe may Iliase saye. O ye wayes are hys from the Lorde and my God knoweth not of my iugemntes. Knowest p not: or haste p not heard that the euertlastig God p Lord which made all p corners of p earth is neither wey nor faynt: and p hys wysdome ca, not be comprehended but p he geuerth strengthe vnto p wey, & powere vnto the faynt: Chylidren are wey & faynt, & the strongest men fall. * But vnto them p haue the Lord before theyr eyes, shal

Of the goodnes and mercy of God toward the people.

I bringe forth founteynes in the hilles, & welles in the playnefeldes: I turne & wilbernes to ryuers, & the drye lande to countrees of water. I plante in the waste grounde trees of cedre, boxe, myrr, and olyues. And in the drye, I set fyre trees, elmes & hawthornes together. All this do I, that they al together, may le and marke, perceaue with they: hartes and cōsidie that the hande of the Lord maketh these thynges. & that the holy one of Israel bypunge the to passe stande at your cause (sayeth & Lord,) and bypunge forth your strongest groude, sayeth the kynge of Jacob. Let the bypunge forth they: goddes, & let their gods tel vs what shall chaunce hereafter yee, let the shewe vs the thynges & are past, what the be: let them declare the vnto vs: that we may take them to better, and knowe the hereafter. Ethen shewe vs thynges for to come, and tell vs what shall be done hereafter: so shall we knowe. & you are gods, do some thing ether good or bad. so wyl we bothe knowlege & same, and tel it out. Beholde, ye are gods of naughte, and your makynge is of naught: per, abhominable is the man & hath chose you. Reuercheles * I haue waked vp one fro the north, & he shall come. And another fro the east, which shall call vpon my name, & shall treade vpon princes as vpon clape. & as the potter treadeth downe the myrr. Who declared this fro & begynnyng, and we wyl knowe him: Or from & old times, & we wyl cōfesse & saye & he is righteous. But there is none & sheweth or declareth any thyng: there is none also that heareth your wordes. The first is that shall saye to & Spō. Beholde, behold they are present & to Ierusalem it selfe wyl I geue an Euangelist. But when I cōsider, there is not a man among them nor any that can geue counsell nor when I examen the that can answere one worde. Loo, wycked are they, & vaine with the thynges also that they take in hande, yee, they: ymagis are but wynde & vayne thynges.

And a bryddrede shall be not bryde and the smoking flaxe shall be not quēch but faithful and truly shall he geue Judgement, nor be persyue nor carefull, that he may restore ryghte oulines vnto the erth, & the gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. * For thus sayeth God & Lord vnto hym: (euen he that made the heauens & spredde them abroad, & set forth & earth w her increase which geueth breath vnto & people & is in it: & sperte to the & dwel therein) I & Lord haue called the in righteoulnes, and led the by the hande. * Ethen fore wyl I also defende the, & geue & for a couenaunt of & people, & to be & * lyght of & Gentiles that thou mayest open & eyes of the blinde, * let out & prysoners from they: bondes: & the & lyt in darkenes, out of the dongeon house. ## The xliii. Chapter

Heare now, O Iacob my serua-unt, and Israell whome I haue chosen, for thus sayeth the Lorde, that made the, fasthponed the, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe Be not afrayd, O Iacob my seruaunt I wyl teous whome I haue chosen. For I shall poure water vpon the drye grounde. and ryuers vpon the thyrstye. * I shall pour my spere vpon thy seede, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall growe together lyke as the grasse, and as the wylloves by the waters syde. One shall saye I am the Lorde. Another shall call him self after the name of Iacob. The thyrde shall subscribe with his hande vnto the Lorde, and geue himselfe vnder the name of Israell.

Thus hath the Lorde spoken, euen the kynge of Israell and his redemer, the Lorde of hostes * I am the first and the last, and wythout me is there no God, If any be lyke me, let him call for thyng past, and openly shew it, and lay it playne before me, what hath chaunced synce I appoynted the people of the worlde, & what shall be here-ly, or what shall come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let the shew these thynges. Be not abashed nor afrayed for haue not I euer told you hether to & warned you? Pe can beare me recorde your selues Is there any God excepte me, or any maker that I shulde not knowe hym?

All keruers of ymages are but vayne, and the harued ymages that they loue, can do no good.
They must beare recorde them selues, that (seing they can nether se, nor vnderstande they shall be co-founded. * Who dare then make a God, or fasthpon an ymage, that is profitable for nothyng?

* Scholde al the felowshyppe of them muste be broughte to confusyon. And truly as the worke masters of them are men, they shall be gathered together, they shall stande, tremble, and be confounded one wyth another. The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it wyth hoot cooles, and fasthponeth it wyth the hammers, and worketh it wyth all the strengthe of hys armes yee, sometyme he is faynte for very hunger, and so thurste that he hath nomore power. The carpenter (or ymage haruer) taketh measure of the tymber, & spredeth forth hys lyne. he maketh it wyth some coloure, he planeth it, he culeth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man: and accoydng to the betwye of a man that it maye stande in the temple.

Moreover, he goeth out to hewe downe Cedre trees. he bringeth home Cines and Okes and takynge a bolde courage, he seeketh oute the best tymber of the wodde. he hym selfe hath planted a pine tre, which shal be bathswelled, which wodde serueth for men to burne. Of thys he taketh and warmeth hym selfe with al he maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterwarde ma-keth a god thereof, to honoure it, and an ydoll to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre wyth another he rostedd fleshe, that he maye eat rostedd hys belly full. wyth the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth I ha. I am wel warmed I haue bene at the fyre. And of the resydue he ma-keth hym a God, & an ydoll for hym selfe. he kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayth delpue me, for thou arte my God.

* Yet men nether consyder nor vnderstande, because they eyes be stopped, that they cannot se: and they hertes, that they cannot perceaue.
They pondre not in they myndes, for they haue nether knowlege nor vnderstandynge to thinke thus. I haue byent one pece in the fyre. I haue baked breade wyth the cooles therof, I haue rostedd fleshe wyth all. and eaten it. Shall I nowe of the resydue make an abhominable ydoll, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wodde? Thus he doth but lese hys laboure: and hys hert whyche is dysceined doth turne hym asyde, so that none of them can haue a fre conscience to thinke may not I erre?

Consyder thys (O Iacob and Israell) for thou art my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou mayeste serue me. O Israell for get me not? As for thyne offences, I haue dyspyned them awaye, lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst: Turne the agayne vnto me. For I haue redeemed the.

Be gladd pe heauens: whome the Lorde hath made, for the Lorde hath dealt graciously wyth hys people lette all that is here beneth vpon the earth be ioyefull. Retorne pe mountaynes and wooddes, wyth all the tree therof, for the Lorde hath redeemed Iacob, and wyl shewe hys mercie vpon Israell. Thus sayeth the Lorde thy redemer euen he that fasthponed the frome thy mothers wombe. * I the Lorde do all thynges my selfe alone. I onely spread oute the heauens, and I only haue layde the foundacyon of the earth by my ne owne selfe. I destroye the tokens of wyched and make the sothsayers fooles. As for the wyle I turne them backwarde, and make they confynge foolysheynes.

he doth set vp the purpose of hys seruante and fulfilleth the counsell of hys messaungers, Concernyng Ierusalem he sayeth It shall be in-habytcd. And of the cyties of Iuda. They shall be buylded agayne, and I wyl repaire they de-cayed places: he sayeth to the grounde be drye And I wyl drye vp the water foudres, he sayth of Egipt. he is my hearde man, so he shall fulfill all thynges after my wyl. he sayth also of Ierusalem: It shall be buylded, and of the temple it shall be fast grounded.

God of Israel which haue called the by thy name Pe heauens from aboue droppe downe, and let the cloudes rayne righteousnes. The earth o-eth with hys maker, the pottherd with the potter. Sayth the clay to the potter What makest thou or thy worcke serueth for nothyng. Who be vnto hym that sayeth to hys father, Why forgettest thou: And to his mother, Why barest thou, Thus sayeth the Lord, euen the holie one and maker of Israel. I like me of thynges for to come concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remem-des. I haue made the earth, and created man vpon it. With myne handes haue I spread forth the heauen, and geuen a commaundement for al the ousnes, and ordre all hys wayes.

* He shall buyde my cytie, and let out my prisoners, and that nether for gyfte nor rewardes, sayth the Lord of hostes. Thus sayth the lord The occupiers of Egypt. The marchautes of the Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with trybut, they shall be thyne they shall folow the, and go with cheynes vpon theyr fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplica-cyon vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. * Howe profounde arte thou O God thou God and Sauoure of Israel: Confounded are they all, and put to dyshonoure they are gone hence together with shame, euen the makers of Images. But Israel shall be saued in the Lord whiche is the enclaspynge saluacyon. Pe shall not come to shame nor confusyon worlde withoute ende. For thus sayeth the Lord, * euen he þe created heauē the God þe made the earth, that fashioned it, and set it forth. He dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lord withoute whom there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretly, neither in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, þe I sayde vnto the seide of Jacob like me

I am the Lord whiche when I speake, declare the thyng þe is ryghteous and true, gather you and come together, drawe nye hether, you þe are escaped of þe people. * haue they any vnderstandyng, þe set vp the stockes of theyr Idoles, and pray vnto a god, þe cannot helpe them: drawe nye come hether, and let them aske counsel one at another, and shewe forth. What is he þe tolde this before: or who spake of it euer sence the beginning haue not I the Lord doone it: * without whom there is none other God: þe true God & saupour, and there is els none but I. And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) þe ye may be saued for I am God, and there is els none, I swear by my selfe, oute of my mouth cometh the word of ryghteousnes, and that no man may tonges shall swere by my name, sayynge: Here ly, in the Lord is my righteousnes and strenght.

To him shall men come, but al they that thynke scorne of hym, shall be confounded. And the whole seide of Israel shall be iustified, and make theyr boast in the Lord.

Christ is prophesied fore must they go into captiuitie.

Hearken vnto me, O house of Jacob, and al ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel who I haue borne from youre mothers wombe: and broughte you vpon from youre byrth, till ye were in fashion or Image, that I maye be lyke hym.

* Pe soles (no doubt) wyll take out syluer & gold oute of youre purses, and wepe ye, & byre a gold-whiche geueth no answer. and deliuer not the ¶ Consider this well, and be ashamed. Go in-Thou shalt nomore be called tendre and pleasa-vntresse thy bzodeted heare, put of thy shooes, make bare thy knees, and wade thorow the water ryuers, * Thy shame shalbe dyscouered and

But sayll, holde thy tounge, and get thee into some darcke corner, (O daughter Caldea) for thou shalt nomore be called ladde of kingdomes.
I was so wrothe wth my people, that I pun-

And helpe all þ, thou haste not regarded these

They shall inpyghtely fall vpon the, for the multitude of wytches, and for the great heape of thy counsellors. For thou hast trusted in thy wyckednes and hast sayd: * No man seeth me. Thyne owne wyse dome and cunnyng hath dysceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and wythout me there is none. Therefore shall trouble come vpon the and thou shalt not know from whence it shall aryse. Synners shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. I saye vnto thee, Nowe go to thyne counneters, and to the multitude of thy wytyches, wyth whome thou haste werped thy selfe from thy yowthe yf they maye

A Yhes, hearken vnto me, & take hede pe people from farre. The Lorde hath called me from my byrthe, and made mencion of my name fro my mothers wombe: he * hath made my mouth & lyke a sharpe swerde vnder the shadowe of his hande hath he defended me, and bydde me in his quyer as a good acowe, and sayde vnto me. Thou arte my seruaunt Israel, & I wyll be honoured in the. Then answered I: I haue lost my labour, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

B Neuerthelesse I wyll comyt my cause and my worke vnto the Lorde my God. And now sayth the Lorde, euen he that fasthoned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruaunt, that I may bypunge Jacob agayn vnto hym howbeit Israel wyll not be gathered vnto hym agayn. In whose syght I am great, whiche also is my Lorde, my God, & my strength. And he sayd it is but a smal thyng that thou arte my seruaunt, to see vp the kynredde of Jacob, & to restore the destruction of Israel. * For I haue made the the lght of the Gentyles, that thou mayst be my helth vnto the ende of the worlde.

C Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde the redeemer and holp one of Israel bycause of the abhorryng & despysynge amonge the Gentyles, concernynge the seruaunt of all them that beare rule. Kynges and prynces shall se, and arple and worshyp, bycause of the Lorde that is saythfull: and bycause of the holy one of Israel, whiche hath chosen the. And thus sayth the Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I herde the, and in the daye of saluacion haue I helped the. * I wyll preserue the, & make the to be the attonement of the people, that thou mayst helpe vp the earth agayne: and possesse agayne the desolate herytages. * That thou mayst saye to the prysoners. go forth, and to them that are in darchnes, come into the lght, they shall fede in the hye wapes, and gette theyr pasture in all hye places.

* They shall neyther hunger nor thirst, heafe nor sunne shal not hurt them. For he þ fauouret them, shal leade the, & geue the drynke of þ spring of welis I wyll make wapes vpo al my mountay-

Take of ioye ye hyl- es, for God hath comforted bys people, and wyll haue mercye vpon bys that be in trouble.

But Sion sayd, * God hath forsake, & my lord hath forgottē me. Will a wyfe forget þ chyld of her wombe, & not pytie the sonne whom she hath borne: And though she do forget, yet wyll I not forget the. Beholoe, I haue wyrtten the vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. They make ha to buylde the vp agayne. As for those þ ouerthrowe the, & made the waste, they shal be parte from the. * Lyfte vp thyne eyes, & looke about the al these gather them together & come to the. As trulpan I lue (sayth the Lorde) þ shalte put them all vpon the as an apperell, and gyde the to the as a byrde doth her Iwelis. As for thy lande þ lyeth desolate, wastid & destroyed, it shal be to narrowe for them þ shal dwel in it. And they that wold deuoure the, they shalbe farre awape. Then þ chyld whom þ bare shal bypunge forth vnto the, shal saye in thyne eare: this place is to narrowe, geue place that I maye haue rowme. The shal þ thynke by thy selfe. Who hath gotten me these: seinge I am bare alone, a captiue & an outcast: And who hath noursched the vp for me? I am desolate & alone, but fro whēce come these?

And therefore thus sayth þ Lorde God: Behold I wyll strecthe out myne hande to the Gentyles and let vp my token to the people. They shall bypunge the thy sonnes in theyr lappes, and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon theyr shoulers. For kynges shalbe thy nursynge fathers, & Que nes shalbe thy nursynge mothers. They shal sal before the with theyr faces flat vpo the earth: & lycke vp the dust of thy feete that thou mayest knowe how that I am the Lorde. * And whoso putteth his trust in me shal not be confounded. Who spoyled the gyaunt of his pray: or who taketh the prisoner from the myghty? And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: The prisoners shalbe taken from the gyaunt: and the spoyles deliuered from the violent, for I wyll mayntayne thy cause agaynst thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyll fede thyne enemyes with their owne flesh, and make them drynk of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all the shall knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lorde, thy sayour, thy noble redeemer.

A consolation and comfort to the people of Job.

* My people wente dooone afore tyme into E gypt there to be straungers, and the kynge of þ Assyrians oppzessed the without any cause. And nowe what profyte is it to me (sayth the Lorde) that my people is frely caried awaye, & brought into heupnes by theyr rulers, & my name euer syll blasphemed sayth the Lorde: But that my people maye knowe my name, therfore I say in that daye they shall knowe it, that I am he that do speake I saye euen I. * Howe bewtyful are laupnge health of our God: Awaie awaye, get you out from thence, & touch no vncleane thyng Go out from amonge luche. And be cleane that beare the vessels of the Lorde. For ye shall not es Lorde shall go before you, and the God of Isra ell shall gather you together.

Behold, my seruante shall deale wylfely ther hym, shall see hym, and they that heard nothyng of hym shall beholde hym.

The liii. Chapter.

The prophete sheweth evidently of the Wallon of our Saur our Iesus Christ.

Who hath geuen credence vnto the thing that we haue hearde: O to who is the arme of the Lorde knowne: For he dyd growe before the Lorde lyke as a braunch and as a rote in a drye grounde, * he hath netter bewty nor fauoure. When we shall loke vpon hym there shall be no saynes we shall haue no lust vnto hym. * he is dyspyssed & abhor red of men, he is such a man as is full of sorowe & as hath good experyence of infymities: We ha ue rekened hym so vyle, þ we had our faces from hym pee, he was dyspyssed and therfore we regar ded him not, howbeit * he onely hath taken on hym our infymities, & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge hym, as though he were plagued and cast downe of God and punished * where as he (not wpythstandynge) was wounded for our of fences, and smytten for our wyckednes For the chastelment of oure peace was layde vpon hym, and wpyth hys stryppes we are healed.

* As for vs, we haue goone all astraye (lyke shepe) euerie one hath turned bys owne waye.
But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon hym þ iniquitie of vs al he suffered violence and was euell intreated, and dyd not yet open his mouth * he shall be led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as still as a lambe before the shearer, and not open hys mouthe he was had awaye frome pyson hys cause not hearde and wpythout any iudgemente: Whose generacyon yet who maye nombe: he was cut of from the ground of the ly for the transgression of my people, which in dede had deserued that punishment * his graue was geuen hym wpyth the condemned, and wpyth the ryche man at hys death * Where as he dyd neuer violence nor vnyght, neyther hath there bene a ny dysceatfulness in hys mouth.

* Yet hath it pleased the Lorde thus to burst hym wpyth plagges and to smyte hym wpyth infy myte, that when he had made hys soule an offe ryng for synne he myght se longe lastyng seed.
And thys deuice of the Lorde shall prosper in hys hande wpyth trauell and labour of hys sou le, shall be optayne frute and he shall be satysfyed * by the knowlege of hym whych is my ryghte ous seruant he shall iustfy the multitude, for he shall beare awaye theyr synnes. Therfore wil I geue hym the multitude for hys parte, and he shall deure the spoyle wpyth þ strongest, because he geueth ouer hys soule to death, * And is reke ned amonge the transgressours, whych neuer the lesse hath taken awaye the synnes of the multy tude, and made intercessyon for the mysdoers.

The liii. Chapter

Of the grete compasson of Christ. The subynaryon of God in duerty but a short space, but his mercy is e uerlasting.

Be glad nowe, * thou barren that bra rest not, reioyce, synge, and be merce thou that arte not wpyth chyldre: For the desolate hath mo chyldren then the maried wyfe, sayeth the Lorde.
Make thy tentes wyder, and synde out the ban gynges of thyne habitation spare not, lay forth thy cordes, and make faste thy stakes, for thou shalt be multiplyed on the ryghte syde and on the lefte, and thy seede shall haue the Gentyles in possellō and dwel in the desolate cities. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded: Be not a shamed, for thou shalt not come to confusyon.
Pee, thou shalt forget the name of thy youth & shalt not remember the dyspouore of thy yow dowheade For he that made the shall be thy lord * and husbunde (whose name is the Lorde of ho stes) and thy redeemer shall be euen the holyc one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole world. For the Lorde hath called the byng as a desolate sorow full woman, and as a yonge wyfe that hath byo

The Prophecy

C When I was angrye, I hyd my face from þe for haue I pardoned the, sayth the Lorde thy redemer. * and thys is vnto me as the water of floure, for lyke as I haue sworne þe I wyl not brynge the water of floure any more vpon the worlde * so haue I sworne that I wyl neuer be angry wth the, nor reprove the: The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylls shall fall downe but my louyng kyndnes shall not moue, and the bonde of my peace shall not fall downe from the, sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull loue. Beholde, thou poore stroye: but all the weapons þe are made agaynst them: and condempne them. This is the herita-

The 12th Chapter.

A consolation and comfort to the people. The fruit and profit of the work of God,

Come to þe waters al ye that be thyrsty, and ye þat haue no monye. Come by that ye maye haue to eate. Come, by wyne and mylke wythout any monye, or mony worth, wherefore do ye lape out your mony for þe thyng þe fedeth not, & speche your laboure about the thyng þe satisfieth you not. But herken, herken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the best, & your soule shall haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Encline youre eares, and come vnto me, take heede (I saye) and your soule shall lyue. * For I wyll make an everlastyng couenant wyth you even the sure mercyes of Dauid 23 Beholde, I gaue hym for a vyne among folke, for a Wynter & captayne vnto the people, Lo thou shalt call an vknownen people, & a people that had no knowlege of the shall runne vnto the: because of the Lorde thy God, & the holpe one of Israell, whyche glozfyed the. Seeke the Lorde whyle he maye be founde: and call vpon h whyle he is nye. * Let þ vngodly mā forsake his owne wayes, and the vnrightheous hys own: ymagynacions, and turne agayne vnto the Lord so shall he be merciful vnto hym, and to our god for he is verie redye to forgene.

For thus sayeth the Lord: my thoughts are not your thoughts, and your ways are not my ways, but as farre as the heauens are hyer the the earth, so farre do my wayes exceede yours.

and my thoughtes yours. * And lyke as the ray ne and snowe commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thither agayne but wat<sup>er</sup>eth the earth, maketh it fructfull and grene, & it maye ge ue come vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eaterh, So the worde also that commeth out of my mouth: shall not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplishe my wyll and prospeere in the thyng wherth I sende it.

And so shall ye go forth wth sope, and be led wth peace, The mountaynes & hyls shall syng wth pou for sope, and all the trees of the selde shall clapp<sup>t</sup> theyr handes. For thornes ther shall

The 1st Chapter.

¶ In the season of judgement and to thy trouble, and to the spiritual happiness of the Sabbath, I say, with shepherds, that browse thy flock.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * kepe egypte: and do ryghte, for my sauynge health shall come shortly, and my ryghteousnes shall be opened. Blessed is the man that doth this and the man schilde whiche keepeth the same. * He that taketh hede, that he bring haim not the Sabbath (that is) he that keepeth hym selfe that he do none euil. Then shall not the stranger, whiche cleaueth to the Lorde saye: * Alas the Lord hath put me cleane out from his people. Apyther shall * the gelded man saye. Ioo, I am a drye tree. For thus sayeth the Lord vnto the gelded that keepeth my Sabbath namely that holdeth greatly of the thyng that pleaseth me, and keepeth my couenaunte: vnto them wyl I geue in my household, and within my walles, a better heritage name then yf they had bene called fornes and daughters. * I wyl geue them an enerlastyng name, that shall not perishe. Agayne the strangers that speke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue his name: * and to be his seruantes. And al they whiche kepe the selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath namely, that they fulfil my couenaunt, Then wyl I bringe to my holy mountayne, & make the lopfull in my house of prayer. Theyr burnt offeringes & sacrifices shall be accepted by my aulter. * For my house shall be called a house of prayer for al people. Thus sayeth the Lorde God whiche gathereth together the scattered of Israel: I wyl bring yet another congregacyon to hym. Come all ye beastes of the felde, that ye maye deuour all the beastes of the wod. * For his watchmen are al blynd they haue altogether no vnderstandynge, they are all dome dogges, not beynge able to bark: they are slepe, sluggyshe are they, and yf they syng they are chamelelle dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The shepperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, * but euerye man turneth his owne waye, euerye one after his owne couetousnes wpyth all his power. * Come (saye they) I wyl lych wyne, so shall we fylle our selues that we may be drunken. And do to morrow lyke ag to day: yee, and much more.

Namely, that the rightous is coueyed away from the wicked he cometh into peace, and godly men rest in theyr chambres, and before the godlye man goethe peace. Come hither therfore pe charme's chyl'dren, * ye sonnes of the aduoutre, and the whoze: wherein take ye your pleasure vpon whō gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out your tongue: Are ye not chyl'dren of aduoutre? And a seed of dissimulation: * Ye make your fyre vnder the oles, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offre chyl'dren in the valleyes and dēnes of stone. Topparte that be with the stonye rocks by the ryuer. Pea euen these shal be thy parte. For thou hast poured meate and drynk offeryng vnto them. Shoulde I delyte in that? Thou haste made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vpthyther, and there thou hast slayne iacryces. * Behynde the doores and postes hast thou set vpon thy remembraunce.

When thou haddest conquered thy self to another then me, when thou wōrest vp, and made thy bed wyder, and with those ydolers hast thou made a couenaunt, and louedst their couches, where thou fōrest them. Then wentest thou straight to kynges with * orle and byners, and entes (that is, thou hast sent thy messengers iacres of, and yet art thou fallen into the pytte thereby. Thou art wery for the multitude of thine owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer. I wyll leaue of. * Thou hast had the lyte: that thy handes wrought, and therfore y arte careles. For whē wylt thou be abashd, or feare feing thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, neither hast me in thyne hert: Thinke I thou, that I also will holde my peace as aforetyme that thou fearest me not. Pea, verely I wyll declare thy goodnesse and thy workes, but they shal not profyte the. when thou cryest, let thy chosen hope deliuer the. But the wynde shal blowe them forth, and vanitie shal take them all away. * Neuerthelesse, they shal put their trust in me, shal inheryte the lande, and haue my holy hyll in possession.

D And therfore thus he sayth: * Make playne, make playne: and cleuse the street, take vp thy stumbyng blockes oute of the waye shal leade to my people. For thus sayeth the hōc and excellent, euen he shal dwelle in euery lastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one. * I dwell vpon a boue, and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also that is of a contrite and humble spyrte do I dwell that I may heale a troubled mynde, and a contrite herte. * For I chide not euer, and am not wroth wyth out ende. But the blastynge goeth from me, and is included in the bodye, and I made the breath: I am wroth with hym for his couetousnesse. I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angry, whē he turneth hymself, and foloweth the by waye of his owne herte. I haue sene his wayes, and I deale with hym. I leade hym, and restore to hym comfort, and to those that were sorre with hym. I make the frutes of thanksgyng, that he may saye: Peace, peace * vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nyghe, sayeth the Lorde, and I make hym whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge se, that can not reste, whose water foameth with the myre and grauell. * Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayth God.

The. lvii. Chapter.

The Lord hath the mouth of the prophet repleveth the people for theyr sayng, which were full of hypocryse.

Expe now as loude as thou canst, leaue not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, and shewe my people theyr offences, and the house of Jacob theyr synnes. For they scke me dayly, and wyll know my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd right, and had not forsaken the statutes of theyr God. They argue with me concerning right iudgement, and wyll be nye vnto God. * Therfore fast we (saye they) and thou seest not: we put out lyces to straitnesse, and thou gardest it not.

* Behold, when ye fast, your lust remaineth: ye syl, for ye do no lesse violence to your betters, lo, ye fast to stryfe and debate, and to smyte wth the syl of wyckednesse. Nowe ye shal not fast: if ye make your voice be heard aboue. * Thinke ye this fast pleaseth me, shal I a man a uide chaste him selfe for a day, and to wryth his heeb bout lyke a hoke, and to lye vpon sackcloth in an ryer cloth: Shoulde that be called fastynge, or a daye that pleaseth the Lorde: Doeth not this fastynge rather please me, shal I loose hym oute of bondage, that is in thy danger: that shal breake the othe of wycked bargaynes: that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from the all manner of burthens: * to deale thy bread to the hungry, and byngne the poore wandryng, bringe into thyne house: when thou seest shal naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thy neygghoure, (and deuyse not thyne owne felsh.

Behold, * the Lordes hande is not so shortened that it cannot helpe, netheer is hys eare so stopped that it may not heare. But * your inpydednes haue sepe rated you from your God, and your * synnes hyde hys face from you, that he heareth you not. For your hands are defyled with bloude, and your fngers wyth vnpyghreousnesse. Your ipees speake leaspnges and your tounge setteth oute wyckednes. No man regardeth ryghteousnesse, and no man iudgeth truly, & euerie man hopeth in vayne thynges, and p'magyneth disceate * conceaith wearenes, & bypnygeth forth the euil. They brede Cockatrice egges and weaue the spyders webbe. Who so eateth of thepy idgges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them: ther cometh up a serpente. They brede maketh no clothe, and they make not couer them wyth theyr laboures. They dedes are the dedes of wyckednesse, and the worck of cobbrey is in theyr habes. * They fecte runne to euill, and they make hast to shedd innocent bloude, theyr counceils are wycked counceils, harme * and destruccyon are in theyr warres. But the waie of peace they know not. In their going is no quite: theyr wayes are so croked & wholorner goeth therin knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that egypte is so far from vs and that rpgl t. eusnes cometh not nye vs. ¶ We loke for l'ghte, loo, it is darcknes, for the morninge shyneth. ¶ We walke in the darcke:

* We grope lyke the blynde vpon the wal, we grope euen as one y bathe none eyes. We stoble at y none daye as though it were toward nyght in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We rooze all lyke Beares, and mourne sylly lyke doves. We loke for egypte, but there is none, for health, but it is farre from vs. For our offences are manye before the, and oure synnes testyfy agaynst vs. Pee, we must confesse that we offende, and knowlege that we do amysse: Namely, transgresse and dyssemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awaye frome oure God vsynge presumptuous and trayterous p'magnacyons, and castynge fals matters into oure hettes. And therfore is egypte gene asyde, and ryghteousnesse standeth farre of. * truche is fallen downe in the strete, and the thyng that is playne & open, may not be thewed. Pee the truche is taken away, and he that releyneyth hym selfe from euil, muste be spoyled. When the Lorde sawe this, it dyspleased hym sore, that there was no egypte. He sawe also, that there was no man ryghteous and he wondered that there was no man to helpe hym. Wherefore he helde hym by hys owne power, and he sustayned hym by hys owne ryghteousnes. He put righteounes vpon hym for a brest plate, he set the helme of health vpon hys heade. He put on wrath in steade of clothyng, and toke gelousye aboute hym for a cloke, lyke as when a man goeth forth wyathfully to recompence his enemyes, and to be aduenged of hys aduersaries. ¶ Namely, that he myght recopence and reward the Jlandes, wher thowow the name of the Lord myghte be feared from the ryfynge of the sunne and hys maiestye, vnto the going downe of the same. For he shal come as a vpolent water streame whiche the wynde of the Lorde hathe mowd.

* But vnto syon there shal come a redemer and vnto them in Jacob that turne from wyckednes sayth the Lorde. I wyl make thys counciunt with them sayth the Lorde. ¶ I speke that is vpo y, and y wordes whych I haue put in thy mouth shal neuer go out of thy mouth, nor oute of the mouth of thy chyldres chylde, from this tyme forth for euermore worlde wythoute ende, sayth the Lorde.

The prophesie of þe chyrche shall be annoynted a sent to preache

In the sprete of the Lorde God is vpon the acceptable care of the Lorde, and the daye of vengeance of our God: * that I myght comgeue vnto them that mourne in Syon, that I myght geue I sape betwix in steade of ashes, sopfor an heuyn mynde. That they myght be called for hym to reioyce in.

They shall buyde the longe rough wyldetheyr substance. For poure great reioyce you shall haue double ioye, and for shame shall they Thou helpest hym that doth right wythe cheerfulnesse and them that thyr eke vpon thy wayes. But loo thou hast bene angrey, for we offended, and haue bene euer in sinne, though the worlde haue cleaured to them & yet shall we be sland. We are al as an vncleane thyng & al oure righteousnes are as the clothes stayned wth floures of a woman, we sal euery pechon as the leafe, for oure synnes carpe vs awaye lyke the wynd.

There is noman that called vj on thy name, that standeth vp to take olde by thy. Therefore hydest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs because of our synnes. But nowe, O Lord, thou father of ours & we are thy chylde, and thou arte oure potter, & we al are the worke of thy handes & We not so sore dyspleased O Lo. de, and kepe not oure offences to long in thy remembraunce, but consyder that we are all thy people. The cy-ty of thy Sanctuarie lyeth wast. Sion is a wyld-bernes, and Ierusalem a deserte. Oure holpe house whych is oure bewtye, wher our retharys prayed the, is brent vp: pee all oure comyntyes and pleasures are wasted awaye. Wylt thou not be intreated, O Lorde, for al thyng? Wylt thou holde thy peace and scourge vs so sore?

U The.ira Chapter.

¶ The felicity of Jerusalem and the triumph of the church.

They seke me that herbert to haue it Esa. 41. c asked for me, they spy de me; neyther to haue not soughte me. I haue sayd Ieroma. 2. m I am here, I am here. I am found of a people þe neuer called vpon my name for thus long haue I euer hidden out my habes to an vn-faithful people that go not the ryght waye, but after after theyr offone p magynapōs: To a people þ is euer despyng me to my face. * They make theyr oblatiōs in gardens, & theyr smoke vpon alters of byrche, they lurke amonge the graues and lye in theyr beddes all nyght. * They eat swyns fleshe: & vncleane broth is in theyr vessels. If thou comest to see them, they sayd touch me not: for I am holper then thou.

All these men when I am angrye, shalbe turned to smoke and I saye that shal burne for euer Scholde, it is wyrtten befor my face, & shal not be forgottē, but recompensid. * I shal rewarde it them into theyr bosome: I meane your mylde-des and the myddes of your fathers together (sayth the Lord) wher I haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaynes, and I asphemed me vpo the hylls: therfore wyl I measure theyr olde de-des into theyr bosome agayne. Moreouer thus sayth the Lord. * lyke as when one wolde gather holly grapes, man sate vnto him breake it not of for it is holy: & euen so wyl I do also for my seruantes sakes, that I wyl not dectrope them all. But I wyl take a seed out of Jacob & out of Iuda ene. to take possesiōn of a byll.

My chosen shal possesse these thynges & my ser-uantes shal dwell there. Sathan shalbe a shepe folde, and * the valleye of Jehoz shal geue þ shal lynge for the cattell of my people that feare me.
* But as for you, ye are they y haue forsakē the Lord and forgotten my holly byll. Ye haue set vp an alter vnto Iuppiter, and geuen rysh drynk-offerynges vnto the planetes. Therfore wyl I nombe you wth the swerde, that ye shalbe destroyed all togyther. For when I called, noman gaue me answer whē I spake, ye barked not vnto me but dyd wycheidnesse before myne eyes and chose the thyng that pleased me not.

Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde my seruantes shal eat, but ye shal haue hunger Beholde, my seruantes shal drynke, but ye shal suffre thurst. Beholde, my seruantes shal be merry but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my ser-uantes shal reioyce for a very quyetnes of here But ye shal crye for sorow of herte and cōpleyn for veracpō of mynd. Your name shal leaue accused amonge my chosen, for God the Lord shal slaye you, and call his seruantes by a nother name. * Whoso reioysyth vpon earth, shal reioyse in the true God. And whoso sweareth vpon þ earth shal sweare in the true God. For the olde enemy shalbe forgotten, and taken awaye out of my syghte. * For loo, I shal make a newe heauen and a newe earth And as for the olde, they shal neuer be thought vpon, nor kepte in mynd. but the Lord sayeth: be glad and euermoost reioyse, for the thynges þ I shal do

For whyr Beholde, I shal make a topyfull Jerusalem, and bys people topyful: pre, I my selfe wyl reioyse wth Jerusalem, and be glad w my people. * And the voyce of weppynge & wap-lyng shal not be heard in her from thence forth Ther shal neyther be chyld, nor olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chyld cometh to an. C. yeare olde it shal dye. And yf he that is an. C. yeare of age do wrong he shalbe curled * They shal buylde houses and dwell in them they shal plant vyneyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shal not buylde and a nother possesse they shal not plant, & another eate * But the lyfe of my people shalbe lyke a tree, and so shal the worcke of theyr handes.

My chosen shal lyne longe, they shal not laboure in vayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the hygh blessed seede of the Lord, and theyr frutes wth them. And it shalbe, that o euer they call, I shal answer them.

Whyle they are yet but thyngkynge howe to speake, I shal heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shal fede together, and the Lyon shal eat haye lyke þ bullocke. * But earth shalbe the serpentes meate. There shal noman hurte nor slay another in al my holly byll, sayth the Lord.

The lxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hande, he despyseth sacryfices done without mercy and sayth.
God doth rebuke them that are troubled for his sake, among the Chyldren, the Sabbath is conpnyall.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * Heauen is my seate, and the earth is my footestole, where shal nowe the house stand that ye wyl buylde vnto me? And where shalbe the place that I wyl dwell in?
As for these thynges my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayeth the Lord * Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen hym that is poore & of a lowly troubled spyre, and stādeth in awe of my wordes. For whoso sayeth an oxe for me doth me so greate disho-nour as he that kylleth a man. He that kylleth a shepe for me, knetcheþ a dogge. He that byn-geth me meat offeringes, offereth swines bloude Whoso maketh me a memorial of incence, prayseth the thyng that is vnryghte. Per take theyr such thynges in hande, and theyr soule de-lyteth in these abhominacions.

* Therfore wyl I also haue pleasure in laghynge thē to scoyne, and the thyng that they feare wyl I byngeth vpon them. * For when I called no man gaue answer: when I spake they wold not heare. But dyd wycheidnesse before mine eyes and chose the thynges that displeasē me. Heare the worde of the Lord all that feare the thyng which he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you and cast you oute for my names sake, saye: The Lord is greuous agaynst vs: but you shal se hym in ioye when they shalbe confounded.

* Then shalbe heard a great noyse from the citty and the temple, the voyce of the Lord, that wyl rewarde, and recompence his enemies, lyke as when a wife byngeth forth a mād child, or euer she suffer the payne of the byrth, and an-guysh of the trauell. Who euer hearde or sawe such thynges doth the ground beare in one day or are the people bozne at once, as shon traualed in child byrth and bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lord.

* Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh barren: sayeth the God? Reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad wth her, all ye that loue her: * Be topyful wth her, al ye þ mourned for her

my people then: we are Lordes, we will come no more vnto the: Doe the a mayden forget her raiment, or a byrde her stomacher: But as for my people, they haue forgotten my dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so high lye (to optayne fauoure therethorowe) when thou hast yet staped them with blasphemies: and teachest thyne owne wayes:

* Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all these places Yet darrest thou say. I am without blame and gylelesse. Tush his wrathe can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in Judgemente, because thou darrest saye. I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro to change thy wayes: For thou shalt be confounded as well of Egypt, as of the Assyrians, yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them and smyte thyne handes together vpon thine heade. Because the Lorde both abhorre that confydence and hoope of thyne, and thou shalt not prosper withall.

The iii. Chapter.

God being mercifull calleth vnto repentance his people which he had forsaken for thyr whoredome in thyr youth. He rebyleth Israel vnto repentance promisinge to the shephardes that haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God: confessing thyr offence.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

Comenly, * when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she goeth from hym, and marryeth with an other, then the questyon is: Shuld he resort vnto her anye more after that? Is not this felde then defiled and vncleane? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with manye louers: yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyfte vp thine eyes vnto the hilaulers and loke yf thou be not despyled with whoredome. Thou hast wayted for them in the streets, and as a murdher in the wylbernes. Thowowe thy whoredome and shamefull blasphemies. is the lande despyled.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

* This is the cause that the capne and cunynge dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gottē the an whores for heade and wilt not be ashamed Elles woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father thou art he that hast brought me vp, and ledde me from my south: wilt thou then put me away, and cast me of for euer? Or wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Neuertheles, thou speakest suche wordes, but thou art euer doyngge woyle and woyle.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

* The Lorde sayde also vnto me: in the tyme of Josiah the kynge, hast thou sene what the rebellyon of Israel hath done: howe she hath runne vp vpon all the hyllies, and amonge all the thycktrees, and there played the harlot, hast thou sene also (when she had done all this) howe I sayde vnto her that she shulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet she is not returned:

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

* Iuda that vnfaithfull syster of hers also sawe this: namelpe: that after I had well sene the aduoutpe of the whyncking harlot Israel I put her away, & gaue her a bil of deuozcemēt. For all this, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

was not ashamed, but wente backe, and played the whore also: Yee, and the nople of her whoore dome hath despyled the whole land. For she hath commytted fornicacyon wth stones & stockes.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

Neuertheles, her vnfaithfull syster Iuda, is not * turned vnto me agayne wth her whole herte, but fapnedly, saythe the Lorde. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: * The baklyder Israel is more ryghteous, then þ vnfaithfull Iuda & the fore go preache these wordes toward the North and saye: Thou disobedient Israel, turne agayne (sayeth the Lorde) & I will not let my wraath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (sayeth þ Lorde) and I will not alwaye * beare displeasure agaynst the: but thys I will, that thou knowe þ great blasphemies that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde thy God and hast made thy selfe partaker of straunge Goddes vnder all grene trees, but hast had no wyl to beare my voyce, sayeth the Lorde.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

* O ye disobedient chyliden, turne agayne sayeth the Lorde, & I will be married wth you. For I wil take one out of þ cyp, & it. oute of one generatyon, from amonge you & bringe you into Spon & will geue you herdemē after myne cunynge, whych shal fede you w learnynge & wyl dome. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the lande, then sayeth the Lorde there shall nomore booste be made of the Atke of the Lordes testamēt and noman shal thyncke vpon it, nether shall any man make mencyon of it for from thence it shal nether be vpspyed nor honored wth gyftes. * Then shall Ierusalem be called the Lordes seat, and al hepythen shal be gathered vnto it for þ name of the Lordes sake, which shal be set vp at Ierusalem. And from that tyme forth they shal folowe nomore the pyngynaryon of thyr owe forwarde herte.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

Then those that be of the house of Iuda shall go vnto house of Israel * and they shall come togpyther oute of the North, into the same lande that I haue gyuen your fathers. I haue shewed also, howe I toke the vp beyeng but a chylid and gaue the a pleasaunte lande for thyne herpytage: yea, and a goodly holte of the hepythen, and how I commaunded the, that thou shuldeste * call me father onely, and not to whynke from me.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully saylethe her husbände, so are ye vnfaithful vnto me (O ye house of Israel) saythe the Lorde.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

* And therfore the voyce of the chyliden of Israel was herde on hye, wepyngge and wailing: for they haue despyled thyr waye, and forgotten God the Lorde.

Jer. xli. a
Ezech. xi. b

O ye disobedient chyliden, turne agayne (saye we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde oure God:) And so shall I heale your backturnynge. Truly, vayne trusteth he for he alpe that locketh for it in the hyllies, and in vayne is it sought in the multitude of þ mountaynes, * but þ health of Israel standeth onely vpon God our Lorde. * Confusyon hath deuored oure fathers labour from our poughte vp: yea, they thepe & bullockes, their sonnes & daughters. Thou

The Prophecye

Thou hast scourged them, but they take no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and would not amende.

23 Therefore I thought in my selfe: peradventure they are so simple and folysh, that they understand nothing of the Lordes wape & iudgements of our God. * Therefore wyl I go vnto the pri-eues and rulers, and talke with them, yf they knowe the wape of the Lord and the iudgements of our God. But these (in lyke manner) haue broken the pocke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

24 Therefore, a lyon out of the woode hath hurte them, and a wolfe in the euenyng shall de-stroye them. The Leopard both lye lurkynge by their cities, to teare in peeces all them that come therout. For their offences are multiply-ed, and their departing away is encreased.
Shulde I then for all this haue mercie vpon them? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me, & sware by them that are no goddes. And albeit, that I fedde them to the ful, yet they fall to aduourty, and haunte harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclely lust, they are become lyke the stoned horse * every man neyeth at his neighbourys wyfe: * Shoulde I not correcte this, saith the Lord? Shuld I not be auenged of every people yf like vnto this? Elyme up vpon their walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not utterly take awaye their fortresses, because they are not the Lordes.
For vnfaithfull hath the house of Israel and Juda forsaken me, saith the Lord: * They haue denyed the Lord, and sayde: it is not he that looked vpon vs. * Thus there shall no mys-fortune come vpon vs, we shall see neither sword nor hungere, * As for the warning of the prophetes they take it but for wynde: yea there is none of these whiche wyl tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

25 Therefore, thus saith the Lord God of hostes: because ye speake such wordes, behold: * The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wodde, that the fyre may consume them. * Lo, I wyl bringe a people vpon you from the east, & house of Israel (saith the Lord) a myghty people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neyther understandest what they saye.

They are arrows are todayne deathe: yea, they themselves be very gyaunted. This people shall eate vpon thy frute and thy meate yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy ewe and thy bullockes. They shall eate vpon thy grapes, & fygges. As for thy strong & well fensed cities, wherein thou dydest truste, they shall bringe to powder, and that thou shalt see the sword. * Nevertheless I wyl not then haue done with you, saith the Lord. But yf they say wherefore doth the Lord our God al this vnto vs?

26 Then answer them: * because, that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge god-des in your owne lande, euen so shall ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande. Preache thys vnto the house of Jacob and crye it out in Juda, and saye thus: Heare thys (thou folysh and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes but ye see not: eares haue ye but ye heare not. Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lord? Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? * whych bind yf see wyl the lande, so that it cannot passe his boundes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothinge, & though the waues thereof be swell, yet maye they not go ouer. But this people hath a false and obstinate harte they are departed and gone away from me.

They thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the Lord our God, that geueth vs rayne early and late, when neede is. whych kepeth vs from the haruck for vsperly.

* Nevertheless, your mysdoes haue turned these from you, & your synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wycked persones, that pryncipally laye snares and wayes for men, to take them and destroye them.
And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are they houses full of that whych they haue gotten wyl falsch and discreete. herof cometh their great substance and rychesse, herof are they fat and welthy, & are more myscheuous then any other.

* They nuryshre not the lawe they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they prospere: yet the iudge not the poore accordyng to equyte. * Shuld I not punyssh these thynges. saith the Lord? Shuld I not be auenged of all suche people as these be: horrible and greuous thynges are done in the lande. The prophetes teache falsely, and the priestes receaue gyftes, and my people hath pleasure therein. What wyl come therof at the laste?

The vi. Chapter.

The synnes for which Jerusalem is a sypre, whiche cometh to pass. Countenances. Discrete. The Lord reiecteth the sacrifices of the Jewes. The comminge of the Babylonians is prophesied agayne.

Dome oute of Jerusalem, ye stronge chylde of Beniamin blowe vpon the trumpettes ye * Ecuytes, set vpon a token vnto Bethcaran, for a plage and agreate mysferte appereth out from the North I wyl speke yf daughter Spon to a fayre & tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherders w their flockes. Their tentes shall they pitch round about her, and euery one shall serde them that are vnder his hande.
Make battayll agaynst her (shall they saye) Arise, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet day. Alas, the daye goeth away, & the nyght shadowes fall downe. Arise, let vs go vp by nyghte, & destroye her strongholdes, for thus hath the Lord of hostes commaunded. Hewe downe her trees, and set up bulworkes agaynst Jerusalem, for the tyme is come that this cite must be punyshed: for in her is all malyciousnesse. Lyke as a condyte spouteth out waters, so she spouteth oute her wyckednesse. Robbery and vnyghtcounesse is herde in her, sorow and woundes are euer there in my syghe. Amende the (O Jerusalem) lesse I wythdrawe my hart fro the, & make yf desolat and thy land also, yf no man dwell in it. For thus saith captiue: the Lord of hostes. The residue of Israel shall be gathered, as the remnant of grapes.

And therefore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whome shall I speake, whom shall I warne that he maye take hede? Theye eares are so uncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Jer. lvi. a. and. lvi. b.

Jerem. v. c. and. lvi. b.

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scoone, & haue no lust thereto. And therefore I am so ful of thyne indignacion, (O Lord) that I maye suffer no longer, but shew it out vpon the chyldezen & are without and vpon al yonge men. Pee, the man muste be taken prisoner wth the wyfe, and the aged wth the crepell. Theye houses wth theye landes, & wyues shall be turned in to straungers when I stretch out myne hand vpon the inhabytors of thys lande, sayth the Lord.

Jer. lvi. c. Jer. lvi. d. b.

Jer. lvi. c. Jer. lvi. d. b. Jer. lvi. d. b.

* And helpe that, they heale the hurte of my people wth swete wordes, sayinge peace, peace when ther is no peace at al. Were theye ashamed when theye had comytted abhominacion? Truly maye theye be past shame.

Jer. lvi. c.

* And therefore theye shall fall among the slayne & in the houre when I shall vset them, theye shall be broughte downe sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord go into the stretes, consyder and make inquisicion for the olde waye, and if it be the good & ryghte waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But theye saye we wyl not walke therein, & I wyl set watchmen ouer you, and therefore take hede vnto the voyce of the tropet. But theye saye we wyl not take hede. Heare therefore ye gentyles, & thou congregacyon shall knowe, what I haue deuyled for them. Heare thou earth also, be holde, I wyl canse * a plague to come vpon thys people euen the frute of theye owne ymaginacyons. For theye haue not bene obedyent vnto my wordes & to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherefore I bypunge ye me lincense from Saba, & swete smelling vnges Calamus fro farre countreys. Your burnt offeringes displease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrifices. And therefore thus sayth the Lord beholde, I wyl make thys people fall, & therefore shall fall fro among them the father wth the chyldezen, one neyghbour shall persue the wth another.

Jerem. lvi. c. Jer. lvi. d. b. Jer. lvi. d. b.

Thus sayth the Lord, * Beholde there shall come a people from the North and a great people shall aryse fro the endes of the earth, w bowes and wth darters shall theye be weaponed. It is a rough & ferece people, & an vmercyfull people, theye voyce roareth lyke the see, theye ryde vpon horses wel appoynted to the battell agaynst the daughter Syon. The crye of them haue we hearde. Our armes are feble, heupnes and sorow is come vpon vs, as vpo a womā traueylng wth chylde: Let no man go forth into the felde let no man come vpon the hie strete. for the shewe and feare of the enemyes is on euerye syde.

Jer. lvi. d. b.

Wherefore gyde a sacke cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) spynckle thy selfe wth ashes: & mourne & wepe bytterly as vpon thyne onely beloued sonne. For the destroyer shall soeuerlye fall vpon vs. Them haue I sette for a stronge tower (O thou prophet and a well fenced wal amonge my people, to seke & to try theye wayes * for theye are al stubburne apostates & fallen awye, walkynge dysceitfullpe, theye are cleane brasse, and yd, for theye hurt and destroy euery mā. The bellows are bent in the fyre, the leade is not molten: the melter melteth in wayne for the euil is not taken away from them. Jeremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, wch he receyved in the outwarde scrupce of the temple. The euils that shall happen to the Jewes for the bysprynge of theye prophetes. & after that doth not the Lord chespe requyte of the Jewes, but that theye shall be ouerchawne.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremye, sayinge * Stand vnder the gate of the Lordes house and crye out these wordes there wth a loud voyce and saye. Heare the word of the Lord al ye of Iuda & go in at thys doore to worshyp the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel. * Amende your wayes & your counceils, & I wyl let you dwel in thys place. # The Prophecie prayer for them thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wise will I hear the. Se-est thou not what they do in the cities of Juda, and in the streets of Jerusalem? The children gather sticks, the fathers kindle the fire, the women knead dough to bake cakes for the kingdom of heaven. They pour out drink offerings unto strange gods, to provoke me unto wrath.

Howbeit they hurt not me, saith the Lord, but rather confounde and shame them selves. And therefore thus saith the Lord God, behold, my wrath and my indignation shall be poured out upon this place, upon men and cattell, upon the trees in the feld, and fruite of the land, & it shall be burnt so that no man maye quench it.

Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Heape up your burnt offerings with your sacrifices, and eat the flesh. For when I brought your fathers out of Egypt I spake no word unto them of burnt offerings and sacrifices but thus I commanded them, saying * hearken and obey my voice, and I shall be your God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walke in all my precepts which I have commanded you, that ye may prosper. But they were not obedient, they inclined not their eares therunto, but went after their owne magnificacions, and after the motions of their owne wicked herte, and so turned them selves away, and converted not unto me. And this have they done, from the time your fathers came out of Egypt, unto this day.

Nevertheless, I sent unto you, all my ser-uants the prophetes. I rose up early and sente you saying, ye shall be my people, and I will be your God, but they would not hearken, nor offer me their eares, but were obstinate, & worse then their fathers. And thou shalt now speak all these wordes unto them, but they shall not heare the, thou shalt cry unto them, but they shall not answer the. Therefore shalt thou say unto them thus is the people, that neither heareth the voice of the Lord their God, nor receiveth his correccion. * Faithfulness and truth is cleane rooted out of their mouth.

Therefore cut of thyne heare, O Jerusalem and cast it away, take up a complaint on hye, for the Lord hath cast away, and scattered the people that he is displeased withall. For the children of Juda have done euill in my sight, saith the Lord. * They have set up their abo-minacions in the house that hath my name, and have defiled it. They have also builded an altar at Topheth, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, & they might burne their sonnes and daughters in fire, which I neuer commanded the, neither came it ever in my thought.
And therefore behold, the dayes shall come (sayeth the Lord) that it shall no more be called Topheth, or the valley of the children of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter, for in Topheth, they shall be buried, because they shall crie haue no rowme. * Per, the dead bodies of this people shall be eaten up of the foules of the ayre, & wilde beastes of the earth, and no man shall fray them away. And as for the voice of my people, the gladness of the cities of Juda, and Jerusalem the voice of the byde grome, and of the byde, I will make them cease: for the land shall be desolate.

Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes. The Lord moueth the people to amendment, rebuking by their synnes. He rebuketh the king doctores of the prophetes and prelates.

At the same tyme saith the Lord, I will bring the bones of the kinges of Juda, & the bones of his princes, the bones of the prelates and prophetes yee and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem shall be brought out of their graues and layd agaynst the sunne the mone, and all the heauenly host, whom they loued, whom they serued, whom they ranne after, whom they sought and worshipped. They shall neither be gathered together nor buried, but shall ly as donge upon the earth to the shame and dysprysynge.

And all they that remaine of this wycked generacion, shall desyre rather to dye then to lyue wherefore they remaine and where as I sca-ter them, saith the Lord of hostes. Thus shalt thou saye unto them also, thus saith the Lord Women fall so, that they aysle not up agayne.
O yf Israel repent, wil not God turne agayne to them? Wherefore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so farre backe that they turne not a-gayne? They are ever the longer the more obstinate, and will not be converted.

For I have looked and considered, but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentance for his synne & will so muche as saye wherefore, haue I doone thus? But euery man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth the spyl, lyke a wyld horse in a battell. The stroke in the ayre knoweth his apoynted tyme, the Turtledoue, the Swallowe and the Crane, consider the tyme of their trauel * but my people will not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the Lord. How dare ye saye then, we are wise, we haue the lawe of the Lord amonge vs?

Trulye in vayne hath he prepared his penne and vanysh haue his wyrters wyrtten it, therefore shall the wyse be confounded, they shall be afrayd and taken for lo, they haue cast out the worde of the Lord, what wysdome can the be amonge them? Wherefore I will geue them wyues unto aleauntis, and they shall be destroyed.

For from the loweste to the hyeste they so-lowe all synne, and from the prophet vnto the preast, they deale all wyth lyes. * Neverthe-les, they heale the hurte of my people very frendly, saying peace, peace, where there is no peace at all. Ipe for shame, howe abhominable thynges do they? yet they be not ashamed yee, they knowe of no shame. * Wherefore in the tyme of their visitacion, they shall lye amonge the dead bodies, and be ouerthrowne saith the Lord.

Moreover I will consume them in dede, sayeth the Lord, so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne, neither one fyge vpon the fygtre and the leaues shall be plucked of. And the thyng that I haue geuen them shall be taken from them

For the Lord our God hath put vs to silence & geuen vs water myrte wpth gall, to dryncke, because we haue sinned agaynst hym. * We looked for peace, and we saie not the better, we wayted for the tyme of healt, and lo, here is not hyng but trouble.

The noyle of hys hoyses is hearde from Dan the whole lande is afrayed at the neyng of his stronge hoyses, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the lande, wpth all that is in it the cities and those that dwell therein. * Moreover I will sende Cockatrice and serpentes amonge you, (whych wpll not be charmed, and they shal bite you sayth the Lorde.

I wolde haue had comforte agaynst the sorowe but sorowe is come vpon me, and heauyness vereth my herte, for loo, the voyce of the cryng of my people is hearde for feare of them, that come frome a farr countrey. Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not the kynge in her? Therefore then haue they greaued me, that the Lorde saie wpth theyr pimages and looly the straunge fashyons of a forcyne God. The heruic is gone, the Sumer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am soze vexed because of the hurt of my people, I am heuy and abashed, is not there not trespase at Gylgath? Is there no wyllyson there? Why then is not the healt of my people recovered.

The ix Chapter:

The complaine and bewayling of the prophet the mope of the people, in the knowledge of God ought we only to reioyce. The vncertainty of the herte.

Who * wpll geue my heade water enough, and a well of teares for my ne eyes, that I maye wepe nyght & daye for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cottage some where farr from folke, that I myght leaue my people, and go frome them, for they be all aduouterers and a thynkyng sort. They bende theyr tonges like bowes to shote out lyes. They ware stronge vpon earth. As for the truth, they maye nothyng at wape wpth all in the worlde. For they go frome one wyckednesse to another, and wpll not knowe me, sayth the Lorde.

Pee one must kepe hym selfe from another no mā maye safely trust hys owne brother, & for one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghbour begyleth another. Pee, one dissembleth wth another, and they deale wpth no truthe. * They haue practysed theyr tonges to lye, and taken greate paynes to do myschefe: They lytteste in the myddes of a dysceatfull people, whych for theyr dyssemblyng falsch, wpll not knowe me sayth the Lorde.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, be holde, I wpll melt them, and trye them: for what shuld I els do to my people? * Theyr tonges are as lyke sharpe arrowes, to speake dysceat. With theyr mouth they speake peacyably to theyr neyghboure, but piously they lape wapte for hym. * Shulde I not punyche them for these thynge, sayth the Lorde? Or shulde I not be aduenged of any suche people as thys? Upon the mountaynes wpll I take vp a lamentacyon & a sorowful crye, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernes. Namely howe they are so bryt vp, that no man goth there anye man moze. Pee a man shall not heare one beast crye there.

Birdes & catell are gone fro thence, * I wpll make Ierusalem also an heape of stoncs, & a den of vnymous wormes. And I wpll make the Cyttes of Iuda so wast, & no man shal dwell therein. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstade thys? Or to whome hath the Lord spoken by mouth? he maye shewe thys and say. O thou lande, why persthest thou so? Therefore arte thou so brente vp, & lyke a wyldernes. & no man goth thow we Pee, the Lorde hym selfe tolde the same vnto the that forsoke hys lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in comaundement, neyther lyued there after: * but folowed the wyckednes of theyr owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as theyr fathers taughte them.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes God of Israel. Beholde, I wpll fede thys people wpth worme wode, & geue them gal to dryncke: * I wpll scatce them also amonge the heathen, whom nether they nor their fathers haue knowe: and I wpll sende a sword among them, to persecute them, vntill I bynne them to naughte. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, beware of the vengraunce that hangeth ouer you: and call for mournynge wpues, & sende for wyse women that they come hostely, and synge a mournynge songe of you, that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that oure eyeliddes maye gush out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse heard of Syon. O howe are we so soze destroyed? O howe are we so peteously confounded? We must forsake oure owne natural countrey, and we are quyte out of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the word of the Lord (O ye women) & let your eares regard the wordes of hys mouth, & ye maye learne your dought erst to mourne, & feuey, one may teach her neyghbours to make lamentacyon. Namely thus. Death is clymng vp in at our windowes, he is come into oure houses, to destroye & chyldre before the doze, and the yonge man in the strete. But tell thou playnly, thus sayeth the Lorde.

The deade bodies of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde and as the hepe after the mower, and ther shalbe no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Let not the wyse man reioyce in hys wysedome: nor the stronge man in hys strength, neither the rych mā in hys ryches. * But who so wpll reioyce let him reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me for I am the Lorde whych do merce, equitye, & ryghteousnes vpon the earth. * They for haue I pleasure in suche thynge, sayeth the Lorde, Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I wpll vyset all them, whose foze-skyne is vncircumcysed. The Egypcians, the Jewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, * and the Chanaan Madpanites & dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcysed in flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The Prophecy

The .x. Chapter.

The confessions of the heathen are not to be feared. Of the weakness of idols, and of the power of God. Of such matters.

3

Heare the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the. O thou house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord * Ye shall not lerne after the maner of the heathen, and ye shall not be afrayed, for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are a trayde of such pre, all the customes and manner of the Gentyles are nothyng but vanite. They hewe downe a tree in the woode, with the hades of the workeman, and fasten on it with the axe, they coner it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nailes & hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as a sycke as the Palme tree, it can neyther speake nor go one foote, but muste be borne. * We not ye afraid of such, for they can do neyther good nor euill. But there is none lyke vnto the, O Lord, * and great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the Kyng of the Gentyls, for thyne is the dominion.

For among al the wyse men of the Gentyls, & in al theyr kyngdoms, ther is none that maye be likened vnto the. They are altogether vnlearned and vnwyse in thys one thinge. Al theyr conyng is but vanite: namelpe wood, syluer: whych is brought out of Tharsis, and beate to plates: and golde from Ophir, * a worke that is made with the hand of the craftesman, & the carter clothed with pelowes pliche & scarlete, euen so is the worke of theyr wyse men altogether. But the Lord is a true God, a luyng God, & an euerlastyng kyng. * If he be wroth, the earth shaketh, all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacyon.

As for theyr gods thus shal you say to them: they are goddes, that made neyther heauen nor earth, therfore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thinges vnder heauen. But (as for our God) * he made the earth with his power, & with his wysdome doth he order the whole compass of world, with his discrecion hath he spred out the heauens. At his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre, * he draweth vp the clowdes from the uttermost partes of the earth: he turneth the lpyngynge to rapne, and bringeth forth the wyndes out of theyr treasures. His wisdom maketh all men fooles: And confounded be carvers of ymages, for the theyr caste, is but a vayne thyng, and hath no lpyte. * The vayne craftesmen with theyr workes, that they in theyr vanitie haue made, shal perceyue one with another in tyme of visitacyon.ouerthelle Jacobs porcyon is none suche but it is he that hath made all thynges, and Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wayes out of the lande thou that arte in the stronge place. For thus sayeth the Lord. Behold, I wyl now throwe as with a stone slynge the inhabytours of thys lande at thys once, & wyl bringe trouble vpon them that they shal proue true: he worde, that I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, howe am I hurt! Alas howe paynfull are my scourges vnto me! For I consydre thys sorrowe by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, & all my wardes are broken. My chyldren are gone from me, & can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spredde out my tent, and to set vp my hangynges. For the herde men haue done folysly, & they haue not sought the Lord. Therfore haue they deale vnwysely with theyr catell: and are scattered abroad. Beholde, the nosse is heard at hande and great seueren out of the north to make the ctytes of Iuda a wyldernes, and a dwellyng place for wyld beasts. * Nowe I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mans power to ordeyne his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steps and goynges. Therfore chaunge thou, O Lord, but with fauour * not in thy wrath, bringe vs not vnto naught. * Pour out thyne indignacyon rather vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vpon the people that call not on thy name. * And for cause they haue consumed, deuoured, and destroyed Jacob: and haue made his habytacyon wast.

The .xi. Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the worde of God. The people of Iuda following the sayings of theyr fathers, worshippynge strange goddes. The Lord sayeth that he wyl not brate the Jewes, and he shal destroye also Jeremie to proue for them.

Thys is another sermon, whych the Lord commanded Jeremie for to preach, sayinge. heare the wordes of the couenaunte, and speake vnto the men of Iuda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel. * Cursed be euerie one that is not obedynt vnto the wordes of this couenaunt. whych I commanded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypt, from the piron forname, sayinge: * We obedynt vnto my voyce, & do accordyng to al that I commaunde you so shall ye be my people, and I wyl be your God, and wyl kepe my promise, * that I haue sworne vnto your fathers. Namely that I wolde geue them a lande, whych floweth with mylke and honne, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto thys daye. Then answered I and sayd: Amen. Let it be euen so Lord as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayd vnto me agayne. Preach thys in the ctytes of Iuda & rounde about Jerusalem, & saye heare the wordes of thys couenaunt that ye maye kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted your fathers euer since the tyme that I brought them out of the lande of Egypt vnto thys daye. I gaue them manyng by tymes, sayinge: hearken vnto my voyce. * Nevertheless they wolde not obey me, nor enclpne theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymagynacyons of theyr owne detes. And therfore, I haue accused them as transgressours of al the wordes of thys couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe whych they (not wylstandynge) haue not kept.

And the Lord sayde vnto me. It is found out that the whole Israel & all the ctyzens of Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemies of theyr fathers, whych had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyl haue these olde folowed strange goddes, and worshipped worshipped them The house of Israel and Juda haue broken my couenaunt, whiche I made wpth theyr fathers.

E Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde Beholde, I wpll sende a plage vpon them, whych they shall not be able to escape, and though they cry vnto me, I wpll not heare them. * Then shal the townes of Juda and the ctytys of Ierusalem go, and call vpon theyr gods vnto whom they made theyr oblacions, but they shall not be able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. * For as many ctytes as thou hast O Juda, so many goddes hast thou had also. And loke howe many stretes there be in the, (O Ierusalem) so many shamefull alters haue ye set vp, alters I say to offere vpon them vnto Baal. * Therefore praye not thou for thys people, byd nether prayse nor prayer for them, for though they cry vnto me in thyr trouble, yet wpll I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house seinge he hath workted abhominacyon, scrupge many Goddes. * The holpe flesheofferings in the temple are gone from the O Juda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy boast of it. * The Lorde called the a grene Olive tre, a fayre one, a fruefull one, a goodly one but wpth great clamor hath the enemye set fyre vpon it and the brannches of it are destroyed. For the Lorde of hostes that planteth the, hath deuyled a plage for the (O thou house of Israel and Juda for the euell that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath in that ye byd scrupge vnto Baal,

D Thys (O Lorde) haue I learned of the, and vnderstande it, for thou hast shewed me theyr pynnyng. * But I am as a meke lambe and woe that is carryed awaye to be slayne, not knowinge, that they had deuyled suche a counsell agaynst me, sayinge. * We wpll destroy thys meat wpth wodde, and bypue hym oute of the lande. of the lpyng: that his name shal neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, * I wpll beseeche the nowe (O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous Judge, thou that triest the reynes and the hartes. let me se the aduenged of them for vnto the haue I commytted my cause. The Lorde therefore spake thus of the ctytys of Anathoth: that soughte to slaye me, sayinge. * Wreache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or els thou shalt dye of oure handes. Thus I saye I spake the Lorde of hostes. Beholde, I wpll vylte you. Your pouge men shall perperse wpth the sword, your sonnes and your daughters shall vtterly dye of hunger, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the ctytys of Anathoth wpll I bypunge a plage. euen the peace of theyr dyspacyon.

The xiiij. Chapter

The prophet murmured greatly at the prosperitie of the wicked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jews are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynst Carates, and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threatneth destruction vnto the nations that do byderd vpon Ieremyc: which troubled and beset it.

I Lorde, thou arte moare ryghteous, then I shulde dyspute wpth the. Nevertheless, lette me talke wpth the in thynges resonable. * Howe happeneth it, that the waie of the vir-godly is so prosperous: and that it goeth so wel wpth them whych wpthout anye shame offend & lyue in wickednesse? Thou plantest them they take roote, they growe, & bypunge forth frute. They boist much of the, yet arte thou farre from theyr rapnes. But thou Lorde (to whome I am wel known) thou that hast sent and proued my bert: take them away, lyke as a flocke is carryed to the slaughter house, and penynt them for the day of slaughter. Howe longe shall the land moune * and all the herbes of the feilde perperse, for the wickednes of them that dwel therein.

The cattell and the bydes are gone: yet saue they tush. * God wpll not destroye vs vtterly. Seinge thou arte werpe in runnyng wpth the fotemen, howe wpll thou then runne wpth horses in a peaceable sure land thou mayest be safe. But howe wpll thou do in the furpous pynde of Iordane: For thy brethren and thy kintred haue altogether dyspylled the and cryed out vpon the in thine absence. * Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and leste myne herptage. My lyfe also that I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemies. * Myne herptage is become vnto me, as a lpye in the wod. It creepeth out vpon me, there fore haue I forsaken it. Myne herptage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse colour is vpon it. Come and gather ye together all the beastes of the feilde, Come that ye maye eate it vp. * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my byrde, and troden vpon my porcyon. Of my pleasaunt porcyon, they haue made a wyldernes and desert. They haue layde it wast and nowe it is wast, it spggeth vnto me. Pee, the whole labyerth wast, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery waye, for the sword of the Lorde both consume from the one end of the lande to the other, and no fleche hath reste. They haue sowne wheate, and reaped thornes. They haue taken herptage in possyssen, but it doeth them no good. And the prophetes were ashamed of poure scrupges, because of the great wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euill neryghbours, that laye hande vpon myne herptage, whych I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wpll plucke them (namelye Israel) out of theyr lande, and put out the house of Juda from among them. * And when I haue rooted them out, I wpll be at one wpth them agayne: and I wpll haue mercy vpon them: and bypunge them agayne, euerye man to his owne herptage, and into his lande. And yf they name ly that trouble my people) wpll learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be reckened amonge my people: But yf they wpll not obeye, then wpll I rote out the same folke, and destroye them sayth the Lorde.

not pynable for I my selfe wyll be wyth the, to help. the and deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde And I wyll ryd the out of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the handes of tyauntes.

The xvi Chapter.

The prophete the myster of the Jewes. He sheweth that the wo: shippinge of ydoles and the contempt of Gods lawes is cause of theyr miserie. He prophesyeth the captivityte of Babylon, and theyr deliuerance from thence a-gayn. The calyng of the Gentyles.

Thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalte take the no wyfe, nor beget children in thys place, for of the choldren that are borne in thys place of theyr mothers that haue borne them, and of theyr fathers thit haue begotten them in thys lād, thus sayth the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible death no man shal wepe for them nor burye them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perishe thowowe the swerde and hunger, and theyr bodies shalbe meat for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the earth. For thus sayth the Lorde, So not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne and wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace from thys people sayth the Lorde, yee, my fauoure and my merce. And in thys lande shall they dye, olde and younge, and shall not be buried, no man shal bewepe them, no man shal clynpe or shawe hym selfe for them.

There shal not one vplet another, to mourne wyth them for theyr deade, or to comforte them.
One shal not offer another y cup of consolacion to forget theyr heynesse for father and mother, * Thou shalt not go into theyr feast house, to sit downe, to eat and dryncke with them: for thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel.
Beholde, I shall take awaye out of thys place the voyce of meryte and gladnes the voyce of the bydegrome of the byde, yee, and that in your dayes, that ye make se it.

Howe when thou shewest thys people al these wordes they shal vnto the. * Wherefore hath the Lorde deuyled all thys greate plage for vs?
Or what is y offence and synne y we haue done agaynst the Lorde our God? Then make thou them this answer. * Because your fathers haue forsaken me sayeth the Lorde and haue walked after straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshipped, but me they haue forsaken and haue not kept my lawe. * And ye with your shameful blasphemies haue exceded the wycked-nes of your fathers, for every one of you hath folowed the frowarde and euill ymagynacion of hys owne herte: and is not obedyente vnto me.

Therefore wyll I cast you out of thys lande into a land that ye and your fathers knowe not and there shal ye serue straunge goddes day and nyght, there wyll I shewe you no fauoure. * Be-holde, therefore sayeth the Lorde the dayes are come that it shall no more be sayde: The Lorde hath brought the choldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypte, But it shalbe sayde: the Lorde hath brought the choldren of Israel out from the north, and from all landes where he had scatred them: for I wyll bring them agayn vnto thys lande that I gaue vnto theyr fathers

Beholde sayth the Lorde. * I wyll sende out many spyers to take them, and after that wyll I sende out hunters to hunte them out from all mountaynes and hylles, and out of the caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde all theyr wayes, y they cannot be hyd from my face, nether can theyr wycked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte.
But fyyste wyll I suffycentely rewarde theyr shameful blasphemies and synnes, because they haue despyled my lande, namely wyth theyr synnyng ydoles and wyth the carjons of theyr ab-hominacions, wherwyth they haue fylled my heritage. * O Lorde, my strength my power and refuge, in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shal come vnto the, from the endes of the world, and saye, Clerely our fathers haue cleaved vnto lyes theyr ydoles are but vayne and vnproffitable.
Howe can a man make those hys gods, whyche are not able to be gods? And therefore I wyll ouer-teach them, sayth the Lorde: I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lorde.

The xvii Chapter.

The frowardnes of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put theyr confidence in man, and those blessed thit trust to God as here is wycked. God is the seuerer of the herte. The spynge waters are for taken. The halowynge, at the shab: both is commaunded.

Our synne (Ope of the trybe of Juda) is wyrtten in the table of your vertes and grauen so vpon the edges of your aulters wyth a penne of yron and wyth an Adamante clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon theyr choldren, so thynke you also vpon your aulters, woddes tyche trees, hye hylles, mountaynes and feldeg.
* Wherefore, I wyll make my mounte that shal deth in the seide al your substance and treasure to be spoyled, for the greace synne that ye haue doone vpon your hye places thowowe oute all the coastes of your lande, ye shalbe cast out also from the heritage that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the heauye bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue mynistrad fyre to myne indygnacion, which shall burne euermoore. Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Cursed be the man that putteth his truste in man and that taketh the fow for hys arme, and he whose herte departeth from the Lorde, he shal be lyke the heathe, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thyng, thit is for to come he shall not se it: but dwell in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupped lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth hys truste in the Lorde and whose hope is the Lorde hym selfe * For he shalbe as a tre that is planted by the waters syde: whyche spredeth oute the roote vnto mynnesse, whome the heate cannot harme: whit it cometh, but hys leaf shalbe grene And though there growe but lytle fruyte, because of drouth, yet is he not carful, but he neuer leaureth of to bringe forth the fruyte. Amonge all thynges man hath the most dysceitful & stubburne hert,

Who shal then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde but not ryghteouslye. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynd hym, and at the laste very conduyte of the waters of lyfe.

¶ Heale me, O Lorde, and I shalbe whole: sane Beholde, these men saye vnto me Where is the worde of the Lorde? (Let it come nowe.) Where as I neuerthelesse, obedyntlye folowed the as persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be atraped, and not me. Thou shalt brynge vpo them the tyme of theyr plage, and shalt destroye them ryghte soe.

¶ Thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Go & stande vnder the gate where thorowe the people and the kynges of Iuda go oute and in, yea, vnder all the gates of Ierusalem and saye vnto the heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Iuda and all þ cypzyns of Ierusalem, that go thorowe thys gate.
¶ Thus the Lord commaundetb * Take hede for poure lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabbath to brynge it thorowe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also oute of poure houses in the Sabbath. Ye shall do no laboure therein, but halowe the Sabbath, * as I commaunded poure fathers. Howbeyt, they obeyed me not, neyther harkened they vnto me: but were obstynat and stubborne, & neyther obeyed me, nor receaued my correction. Neuertheles yf ye wyl beate me (sayth the Lorde) & beare no burthen in o þ cytie thorow thys gate vpo þ sab-both yf ye wyl halow þ sabbath, so that ye do no work therein the shalther go thorow þ gates of thys cytie kynges and prynces, that shall set vp on the throne of Dauid: They shalbe carped vpo charettes, and ryde vpon horses bothe they and theyr prynces. Yea whole Iuda & the cytyzins of Ierusalem shal go here thorowe: and this cytie shall euer be the more and more inhabited.

¶ There shall come men also from the cyties of Iuda, from aboute Ierusalem and from the lande of Beniamin, from the playne felde, from the mountaynes, and from the wyldernesse whiche shall brynge burnt offerynges, sacryfices, oblacions, and incence, and offere vp thankesgyuynge in the house of the Lord. But yf ye wyl not be obedynt vnto me, to halowe the Sab-both, so that ye wyl beare poure buethens tha-we the gates of Ierusalem vpo the Sabbath.

¶ Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem and it shall burne vpon the houses of Ierusalem and no man shalbe able to quench it.

The. xlii. Chapter.

¶ God sheweth by the example of a potter that it is in his power to destroye the despayres of his wycke: and to helpe them agayne when they amende. The despayres of the Iewes agayn-st Ieremie his pater agaynst his aduersaries.

¶ This is another comynycacion that God had with Jeremie, sayinge: Ircle, and go downe into the potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house, I founde hym making his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the potter made of claye, brake amonge his han-des, so he began a newe, & made another vessel accordyng to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: * Saye not I do with you as this potter doth, O ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lord: Behold, ye house of Israell, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hand * When I take in hande to roote out, to de-stroye, or to walle awaye any people or kyng-domes: Yf the people against whome I haue thus deuysed, couerte from theyr wyckednes: I repent of the plage, & I deuysed to brynge vpon them. * Agayne, when I take in hande to buyld or to plante a people or a kyngdome, yf þ same people do euell before me, & heare not my voyce I repent of þ good that I deuysed to do for the.

¶ Speake now therfor vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth the Lord Behold, I am deuysing a plage for you and am takynge a thynge in hande agaynst you.

* Therefore, let euery man turne from his euill waye, take vpon you the thynge that is good & do right. But they said Nomore of this * we wyl folowe oure owne ymagynacions, and do euery man accordyng to the wyllfulnesse of his owne mynde.

¶ Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Aske amonge the heathen, yf any man haue hearde such horrible thynges, as the daughter of Sy-on hath done. Shall not þ snowe, that melteth vpon the stony rookes of Lybanus) moysten grauen awaye, that they runne nomore, geue moystnes, nor make fruytful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sa-crafice vnto vayne gods. And theyr prophetes make them fall in theyr wayes from the auncut pathes, & to go into a fote way not vled to be troden of iust me. Wherethorowe they haue brought theyr lade into an euerlastyng wildernes & scozne. * So that whosoeuer trauayleth therby, shalbe abashed, and wag their beates

¶ With an East wynde wyl I scatter them before theyr enemy. And whē theyr destruction commeth, I wyl turne my backe vpon the, but not my face. Then saide they * come let vs ymagine some thyng agaynst this Jeremie. For the preastes shall not be destitute of counsell,

But the worde of þe Lord was a very burninge fyre in my herte, and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue stopped: I myghte not. For whiche I heard so manie derpyons and blasphemys on euery syde of me, complayne vpon hym saye they: and we wyll tell hys tale, yea, euen of myn owne comppynions: and suche as were conuersaunte wth me, wente about to murder me saynge: vpon hym, we shall one waye or othere begyle hym, and pzeuayle agaynst hym. and be aduenged of hym.

But the Lord stode by me lyke a myghtye gyaunte, therfore my persecuters fell, and coulde do nothyng. They shalbe sore confounded, for they haue done vnwysely, they shal haue an euerlastyng shame: * And nowe O Lord of hostes thou ryghteous searcher, (whiche knowest the rapnes, and the very hertes) let me see them punyshed, for vnto the, I commyt my cause.

Synge vnto the Lord, and pzeaple hym: for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed from the hande of the vyolente. * Cursed be the daye wherein I was borne vnhappye be the daye when in my mother brought me forth. Cursed by the in an that brought me father the tydynges to make hym glad, saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cytyes * whiche the Lord turned vpsyde downe. Let hym, heare ceping in the maynyng, and at none daye lementable howlyng. Whycherwest thou not me as lone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? That my mother had bene my graue her selfe, that the byrth myght not haue come oute, but remayned styll in her. * Wherefore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experyence of labour & sorowe, & to leade my lyfe wth shame.

The xxi. Chapter.

The prophete sayeth that zedekiah shalbe taken, & the cytye burned

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie * what tyme as the kynge zedekiah sente vnto hym pharur the sonne of Belchias, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasias pzeaste saynge: * Alke counsell at the Lord (we praye the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of babylon belegethe vs, yf the Lord paradventure) wyll deale wth vs, accordyng to hys mercifulous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremie: Geue zedekias thys answer. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel beholde, I wyl turne backe the weapons that ye haue in your handes, wherewith ye fyghte agaynst the kynge of Babylon and þe Chaldees which beleage you rounde aboute þe walles: and I wyl byng them together into the myddest of thys cytye, and I my selfe wyl fyght agaynst you with an outestretchyd hande and wyl a myghtye arme, in greate dyspleasure and terribile wraethe, and wyl synge them þe dwel in thys cytye, yee, both men, and catell shal dye of greate pestilence * And after thys (sayeth the Lord) I shall deliuer zedekias the kynge of Iuda, & hys seruantes hys people (and such as are escaped in the cytye from the pestilence, weede and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folowe vpon theyr lyues, which shall synge them with the swearde, they shall not ppyte them they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lord: * behold, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and deathe. * Whoso abyedeth in this cytye, shall perishe: cyther with the sweard with hunger, or pestilence. But whoso goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that beleage it, he shal saue his lyfe, and shal wyne his soule for a praye * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytye (sayeth the Lord) to plage it and to do it no good. It must be gyuen into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, & be bzent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Iuda say thus. Heare þe worde of the Lord (O thou house of David) for thus sayeth the Lord: * whiche ryghteousnesse, and that lone deliuer the oppressed from vyolent power, & ouer myrterable wraath breake out lyke a fyre and burne, so that no man maye quenche it, because of the wickednesse of your ymagynacions. * Behold (sayeth the Lord) I wyl come vpon you that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldes, and saye: * Cuth, who wyl make vs afrayed? or who wyl come into oure houses? For I wyl vyset you sayeth the Lord: because of the wickednes of your iudgements, & wyl kindle such a fyre in your wood, as shal consume al þis about you.

The xxii. Chapter.

The xxii. chapter the kynge of Iuda to iudgement and reboure: wher zedekiah is brought to the bryche of Belshazzar the sonne of Josiah is prophesied.

Thus sayde the Lord Go downe into the house of the kynge of Iuda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord, thou kynge of Iuda, that lyttest in the kynglye seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and oute at this gate. Thus the Lord commaundeth: * kepe equitye and ryghteousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from the power of the vyolent: do not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wydowe and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

And kepe these thynges saythfully then shal there come in at the doore of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauidys seate: they shalbe caried in in charrettes, and ryde vpon horses both they and theyr seruantes, and theyr people. But yf ye wyl not be obedyent vnto these commaundementes. * I sweare by myne owne selfe saith the Lord) this house shalbe waste. For thus hath þe Lord spokē vnto þe kyngeys house of Iuda. Then Gilead art vnto me þe head of Libanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and thy cytyes also) that no man shal dwell therein? I wyl pzeare a destroyer with his weapons for the, to hewe downe thy espycally Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

And all the people that goo by this cytye shal spake one to another * Wherefore hath the Lord done thus vnto this noble cytye?

The Prophecye

Then shall it be answered because they have broken the covenant of the Lord they God, and worshipped and served strange goddesses.

Then shall it be answered because they have broken the covenant of the Lord they God, and worshipped and served strange goddesses.

* Mourn not over the dead, and be not woo for them, but be sorre for hym that departeth away: for he cometh not agayne, and seeth the Lord as touchyng the Lord as touchyng * Selu the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda. whiche ragged after his father, and is carped oute of this place, he shall neuer come hether agayne, for he shall dye in the place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shall se this lande nomore.

Woo worth hym

* Woo worth hym & buyldeth his house with vncyghteousnes, and his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenceth his vncyghteous labour, nor payeth hym his hire: he thinketh in hymself, I wyl buyde me a wyde house and gorgeous parlours. He causeth wyndowes to be between therein, and & sylnges and ioyntes maketh he of Cedre, and painteth the with Sinyer. He byncketh thou to ragge now, & thou prouoketh me to wrath with thy Cedar trees?

D Dye not thy father eate and byncke, and prospere well, as long as he dealeth with equitytie, and cyghteousnes: For when he helped the oppressed and poore to theyr cyghte, then prospered he well. Fro whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lord: Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes & thyne herte, they looke vpon couctousnes, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge, and violence.

And therefore thus sayeth the Lord against Jeoakym, the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda. They shall not mourne for hym as they vse to do alas brother, alas syster, neither shall they say vnto hym, Alas syster, alas for y noble Prince. But as an asse shall he be buried, corrupt, and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

E Clyme vp & byll of Libanus (Whou dough ter Syon) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Zaban, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnyng, whyle thou wast yet in prosperite. But thou saydest I wyl not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed fro thy youth that thou woldest neuer heare my voice. All the herdmen shall be dyscuen with the wynde, and thy derlynges shall be carped awaye into captiuitie. Then shalt thou be broughte to shame and confusyon because of al thy wyckednes, thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedar trees.

How lytle shalt thou be regarded when thy sorowes & pangys come

How lytle shalt thou be regarded when thy sorowes & pangys come & as a womā traueling with child:

* As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lord, Though Conanus the sonne of Jeoakim, kynge of Juda were the sygnēt of my cyghte hande, yet wyl I plucke hym of. And I wyl geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of the Chaldecys. Moreover, I wil send the & thy mother that bare & into a straunge lande where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyl despise to retorne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. Thys man Conanus shall lyke an ymage robbed and sorne in peaces, whiche pleaseth noman for all his appetell. Wherefore, both he and his seed shall be sente awaye, and caste out into a land that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord: Whyt this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall thys man haue all his lyfe longe. Neether shall any of his seed be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of Dauid: & to beare rule in Juda.

The xxiii Chapter.

He speaketh agaynst euill Curates that make banock of the sake of the Lord. Of the conuersion of the remnaunt of the Jewes to the lawe & the commynge of the true Shepherde Christ in prophete. Agaynst false prophetes: when a prophet preacheth the word of God, God conuerteth & heres of & heres agaynst prophetes that preach per vnder the name of God. The myracle of false prophetes.

O be & vnto & shepherdes, that destroye & scatter my flocke, sayeth the Lord. Wherefore, thys is the commaundemente of the Lord God of Israell: vnto the shepherdes that fede my people.

Ye scatter and thruste oute my flocke and looke not vpon them. Therefore now wyl I vset the wyckednes of youre ymagynacyons, sayeth the Lord: And wyl gather together the remnaunt of my flocke frome all landes that I haue diuyn them vnto, & wyl byngne them agayne to theyr pastures, & they may grow and encrease. I wyl set shepherdes also ouer them, whiche shall fede them. They shall nomore feare and drede, or there shall none of them be loste, sayeth the Lord.

* Scholde the tyme cometh sayeth the Lord that I wyl rase vp the cyghteous braynche of Dauid: whiche kynge shall beare rule, and he shall prospere with wysedome, and shall set vp equitye and cyghteousnes agayne in earth.

In thys tyme shall Juda be saued, and Israell shall dwell wthoute feare, And thys is the name that they shall call hym: * euen the Lord oure cyghteousnes, & And therefore beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lord, that it shall be nomore sayde the Lord lyueth, whiche brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypt. Out the Lord lyueth, whiche broughte forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel out of the Northland and from all contreyes wher I haue scattered them: and they shall dwell in theyr owne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my bodye, because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake. I am become lyke a drunken man (that by the reason of wyne canne take no rest) for very feare of the Lord and his holpe wordes: because the lande is full of aduouterers, and thowowe swarynge, it moarneth, & and the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Pre, the waye that men take is wyked, and theyr gouernaunce is nothyng lyke the holpe worde of the Lord.

For & prophetes and the prestes them selues are polluted wth pocytes and theyr wyckednes haue I founde in my house, sayeth the Lord. Wherefore theyr way shall be syppe in the darkenes wherin wherein they make flatter and fall. For I will bring a plague upon them, and the fear of the Lord shall be upon them. I have sent solps among the prophets of Samaria, that preached for Baal, and deceived my people of Israel.

I have sent also among the prophets of Jerusalem foule aduoutre, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moost chameful men by the hande, flatteringe them, so that they cannot returne from their wickednes. All these wickednes are unto me as Sodome, and as the inhabitants of Gomorah.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes concerning the prophets. Beholde, I will fede them with wormewode, and make them drinke the water of gall. For from the prophets of Jerusalem is ppeccisly come into al þ lande.

And therefore the Lord of hostes geueth you this warnunge. * Heare not the wordes of the prophets that preach unto you, and deceaue you, truelpe they preach you vanite, for they speake the meaning of their owne heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord.

* They saye unto them that despise me. The Lord hath spoken it: Tush, ye shall prosper right well. And unto all them that walke after the luste of their owne heart: they saye. Tush, there shall no mysfortune happen you. For who hath spoken in the counsaile of the Lord that he hath heard and vnderstand, what he is aboute to do? Who hath marked his deuple, and heard it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lord (that is, his indignacion) shall go forth, and a violent wynde shall fall downe vpon the heade of the vngodlye.

And the wrath of the Lord shall not turne agayne, vntill he perfourme & fulfil the thought of his heart. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meaning.

I haue not sente these prophets (sayeth the Lord) and yet they came, * I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my counsel, they had opened to my people my wordes, and they had turned my people from their euill wayes and wicked ymaginacions: * Am I then God that seeth but the thinge whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farre off? sayeth the Lord. * Nay any man hyde hym selfe so, that I shall not se hym. sayeth the Lord. * Do not I fulfil heauen and earthe, sayeth the Lord? I haue heard well ynough, what the prophets say, that preach lyes in my name, saying: I haue dreamed: I haue dreamed.

Howe longe will this contynue in the prophets harte to tell lyes, and to preach þ crafty subtiltye of their owne heart? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as their forefathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophete that hath a dreame, let him tel it * and he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shewe it faithfully.

For what hath the chaffe and wheate to do together, sayeth the Lord? Is it of my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lord: and lyke an hammer, þ breaketh þ harde stone? Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I will vpon the prophetes that steale my worde pruely from euery man: Beholde here am I (sayeth the Lord) agaynst the prophetes that make toges tendre to speake and to saye: The Lord hath sayde it. Beholde, heare am I (sayeth the Lord) agaynst those prophetes that barre prophete lyeinge dramas, and myraclis, whome I neuer sente nor commaunded them. They shall do this people greute harme, sayeth the Lord.

If this people, ether any prophet or preste aske the, and saye, what is the burthen of the Lord? Thou shalt saye vnto them what burthen: Therefore will I cast you from me (sayeth the Lord) because ye poure selues are a burthen. And the prophete, preste, or people that vseth this tearme (the burthen of our Lord, ym wyl I vylet and bys house also.

But thus shall ye saye euery one to another and euery man to his brother. What answer hath the Lord geuen: what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lord ye shall speake nomore of it, for euery mannes owne worde is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuing God, the Lord of hostes oure God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes, what answer hath the Lord geuen the? what sayeth the Lord? And not once to name the burthen of the Lord. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord. For so much as ye haue vsed this tearme the burthen of the Lord where as I notwithstandinge sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Behold therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, & will cast you out of my presence, yee, & the cytye also that I gaue you & poure fathers: and will bringe you to an euerlastyng confusion: and into such a shame as shall neuer be forgotten.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

The vpspon of the papures of sygges. The first vpspon sheweth what parte of the people shalbe brought agayne from captiuite. The seconde: that ierusalem and the rest of the people shalbe destroyed.

The Lord shewed me a vpspon, Behold, there stode two maunders of sygges before the temple of the Lord after that * Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led away captiue Iechonias the sonne of Ieoakym. kynge of Iuda, the myghty men also of Iuda with the worke masters, and conynge men of Ierusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good sygges, each lyke as those that be fyssh type. In the other maunde were verye noughty sygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: what seest thou Jeremie? I sayde: * sygges wher of some be verpe good, and some so euell that no man maye eat them.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord þ God of Israel, lyke as þ knowest the good fygges, so shall I knowe the men led away whom I haue sent out of this place, into the land of the Chaldees.

They haue forsaken the foldes lyke as a lyon. For the land is waste, because of his furpous crueltie, and for his fearefull indignacion.

¶ The xxvi Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendment. He taketh of the prophetes and prester an brought to iudgement. Eliah the prophet is killed of Achabim contrary to the will of God.

In the begynnyng of the raynge of Iehokim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came this word from the Lorde, sayng. Thus sayth the Lorde

Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (oute of the cyties of Iuda) come to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, al the wordes that I comaunde the to saye.

Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (peradventure) they wyll hearken, and turne euery man from hys wyked wape, * that I maye also repente of the plage whiche I haue determined to bynge vpon them, because of theyr wyked inuentions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord: yf ye wyll not obey me, to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes whome I sent vnto you, to saynge vpon my selfe, and sayll lndynge. Yf ye wyll not followe them (I saye) then wyll I do to this house * as I dyd vnto Sylon, and wyll make this cytye to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preestes, the prophetes, and all the people hearde Jeremys preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Now when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto the people: then the preestes, the prophetes, and all the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. How darrest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyde vnto Sylon and this cytye shall be so waste, yf no man shall dwell therein.

And whē al the people were gathered about Jeremys in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Iuda herde of this rumour, and they came sone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the * newe doze of the Lorde. Then spake the preestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people these wordes. * This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cytye, as ye pour selues haue herde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremys vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytye all the wordes that ye haue hearde. Therefore amende your wayes, and your aduersementes, and be obedyent vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God: so shall the Lorde repete of the plage, that he hath deuyled agaynst you. Nowe as to me: I am in your handes, do with me as ye thinke expedient and good. But thus shall ye knowe. yf ye put me to death: * ye shall make your selues, this cytye and all the inhabytours therof guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a trethe, that the Lorde hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preestes and prophetes. This man may not be condemned vnto death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayde thus vnto all the people: Micheas, the Morasthite, * whiche was a prophet vnder Ezechiah kynge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Syon shall be plowed lyke a felde, Ierusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyl of the Lordes house shall be turned to an hye wood. Dyde Ezechiah the kynge of Iuda and the people of Iuda put hym to death for this? No verely: * but rather feared the Lorde, & made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the whiche cause also the Lorde repeted of the plage, that he had deuyled agaynst them. Shulde we then do suche a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? Ther was a prophet also the preached by the name of the Lorde, called Eliah the sonne of Semiah, of Gaththarum: this man preached also agaynst this cytye, and agaynst this lande according to al as Jeremys sayth. Now when * Ichoakim the king with al the estates & princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slay hym. * When Eliah perceyued that, he was afraied and fled, and departed into Egypt.

Then Ichoakim the king sent his seruantes into the lande of Egypt: namely Elnathan the sonne of Achboz and certain men with him into Egypt, whiche fetched Eliah out of Egypt, and brought hym vnto kynge Ichoakim, that slay hym with the swerde, and cast his deed bodye into the comen peoples graue. But Achabim the sonne the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremie, that he came not into þe handes of the people to be slaine

The xxvii. Chapter.

Jeremie at the commaundement of the Lorde for both bondes to the kynge of Iuda and to the other kynges that were nys, whereby they are mannyd to become subiectes unto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they be sure not false prophetes.

In the begynnynge of the raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah king of Iuda, came this worde vnto Jeremie fro the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me. Make the bondes and chaines, and put them aboute thy necke, and sende them to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab, to the kynge of Ammon, to the king of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messengers which shall come to Ierusalem vnto Zedechiah the kynge of Iuda, and bydde the same vnto theyr masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel, I speake thus vnto your masters. * I am he, þe made the earth, the men, and þe cattell that are vpon the grounde, with my greute power, and outstretched arme: and haue geue it vnto who it pleased me: * And now wyl I deliuer al these lades into þe power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon: my seruant. The bestes also of the felde shall I geue him to do him seruite. * And al people shall serue him, & his sonne, and his chyldees chylde, vntyl þe tyme of the same lade be come also þe manye people and great kynges shall serue him.

Moreouer, that people and kyngdom which wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyl not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the king of Babylon þe same people wyl I vspyt with the swerde, with hungre, with pestilence, vntyl I haue consumed them in his handes, saith the Lorde. * And therefore folowe not your prophetes, soothsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wythches, whiche say vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes to bringe you farre from your lande, and that I myght caste you out, and destroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym, those wyl I lette remayne in theyr owne lande (saith the Lorde) and they shall occupye it and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde Iredkia the king of Iuda, and said * Put your neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylte thou and thy people perishe with the swerde, with hungre, with pestilence lyke as the Lorde hath deuyld for all people, that wyl not serue the kyng of Babilon? * Therefore geue no care vnto those prophetes (that tell you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon) for they preached you lies nether haue I sent them, saith þe Lorde: howbest they are bold, falsely to prophete in my name, that I myght þe sooner driue you out, and that ye myght perishe with your preachers.

I spake to the prestes also and to al the people: Thus saith the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes that preache vnto you, and saye. Beholde, * the vessels of the Lorde house shall shortly be broughte hither agayne from Babylon: For they prophete lyes vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon: that ye maye lyue. Wherefore wyl ye make this cytie to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in verdede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be commytted vnto them, then let them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnant of the ornaments (which are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in þe house of the kynge of Iuda, and at Ierusalem) be not carped to Babylon also. For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken, concernynge the pylers, the lauer, the seate and the residue of the ornaments that yet remayne in this cytie, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not. * when he carped awaye Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Ierusalem vnto Babylon captiue.

Pea, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchynge the residue of the ornaments of the Lorde house, of the kynge of Iudaes house, and of Ierusalem: * They shall be carped vnto Babylon, and ther they shall remayne vntyl I vspyt them, saith the Lorde. * Then wyl I bringe them hither agayne. And this was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnynge of the raygne of Zedechiah kynge of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The false prophete of Hananiah the prophet Jeremie the which that the prophete of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He bringe suppers of the Lorde, reproueth Hananiah, propheteinge þe death.

In the fourthe yere of the raygne of Zedechiah kynge of Iuda, in the fyfth moneth, it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Amur the prophete of Sibeon, spake to me in the house of the Lorde in þe presence of þe prestes and of all the people, and sayde: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, * and after two yeres wyl I bringe agayne into this place all the ornaments of þe Lorde house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon carped awaye from this place, vnto Babylon. Pea I wyl bringe agayne Jeconiah the sonne of Jehoakim the kynge of Iuda hym selfe, with all the prisoners of Iuda (that are carped vnto Babylon) euen into this place, saith the Lorde. For I wyl breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremie gaue answere vnto the prophete Hanania before the prestes, and before all the people that were presente in the house of the Lorde. * And the prophete Jeremie sayde: Amen, the Lorde do that, and graunte the thyng whiche thou hast propheted: that he may bringe agayne all the ornaments of the Lorde house, and restore all the prisoners from Babylon into this place. Neuerthelesse, hearken thou also what I wyl saye, that thou and al the people may heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, whiche propheted of war or trouble

The Prophecy

Preastes wherein thou wrotest thus vnto hym: The Lorde hath ordeyned the to be a preast in stead of * Jehoiada the preast that thou shouldest be the chefe in the house of the Lorde, aboue all prophetes and preachers, and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pylery, or in the stocks.
Howe happeneth it then, that thou haste not re-proued Jeremy of Anathoth, whyche neuer lea-ueth of hys prophecyinge? And besyde all this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babylon, & tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuite shall longe endure: that we shulde buyde vs houses to dwell therin: and to plante vs gardens, that we maye enioye the frutes therof. Whych letter Sopho-niah the prest receyued, and let Jeremie the prophete heare it. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie sayinge sende word to all them that be in captiuite on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concernynge Semiyah the Aethiopian: because that Semiyah hath prophec-ied vnto you without my commaundment & broughte you into a false hope, therefore thus saith the Lorde both certifye you Behold, I will vset Semiyah the Aethiopian, & hys seed so that none of hys shall remayne amonge this people, and none of them shall see the good that I will do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

The xxx. Chapter

The returne of the people from Babylon. God besheweth the worth that the people is spiritual, the be-struction of the enemies of Israel.

In these are the wordes that the Lorde sheweth vnto Jeremie, sayng, Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: * I write vnto you by diligent al the wordes that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke for so loo the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde that I will bringe agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel, and Iuda, sayeth the Lorde. For I will restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.
Agayne these wordes spake the Lorde, concernyng Israel and Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde We haue hearde a terrible cry, feare and dysqui-etnes, for what eyles doth this synners, that I see: Namely that al stronge men smyte, euery man hys hand vpon his lorne: as a woman in the payne of her trauaile. Who euer take a man travayle with chylde: Enquyre thereafter, and see. See, all they faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dredeful that none maye be likened vnto it, and alas for the tyme of Iacob's trouble, for the which he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye sayeth the Lorde of hostes I will take hys rocke from of thy neke and breake the yokes And straungers shall no more serue him, but they shall do seruyce vnto the Lorde, and to Dauid their kynge, whome I will capte vnto them. And as for the, O my seruant Iacob, feare not sayth the Lorde and be not afrayed, O Israel. For loo, I will helpe the also from farre, and they shall come from the lande of they captiuite. And Iacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in reste, and haue a properous lyfe, and no man shall make hym afrayed.

For I am with the to helpe the sayth the Lorde * And though I shall destroye all the people amonge whom I haue scatered the people I will not destroye the, but correct the, * and that with dys-creacion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyle * without faute. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde Thy byroinges are parlous: and thy woundes redde to cast the into sickness, There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to laye plaster vpon or to bynde vp the wounded there maye no man helpe the. All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothyng for the, For I haue geuen the a cruel stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdoedes for thy synnes haue had the ouerhand. Why makest thou mone for thyne harme: in dede, thou art sore wounded and in perardye, but for the multitude of thy mysdoedes and synnes I haue done this vnto the.

* And therefore all they that deuour the, shall be deuoured, and all thyne enemies shall be led in to captiuite. All they that make the wast, shall be wasted them selues, and al those that rob the people I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy belth agayne & make thy woundes whole sayth the Lorde because they reuyled the, as one cast away & dyspised. So sayd they is he who no man regardeth. For thus sayth the Lorde. Be-holde. * I will bringe agayne the captiuite of Iacob: & I will dede his dwellinge place. The cittyte shall be buylded in her olde estate, & the houses shall haue they right foundation, And out of them shall go the sounde of the voyce of ioye.

I will multiplye them, and they shall not be fewe I shall endue them with honoure, and no man shall subdue them. Theyre chylidren shall be as afore tyme, and theyre congregacyon shall continue in my syghte. And al those that were them I will vset. * A captaine also shall come of them and a pryncce shall sprynge out from the myddes of them, hym will I challenge to my selfe and he shall come vnto me. * For what is he that geueth ouer hys herte to come vnto me sayth the Lorde * He shall be my people also, and I will be poure God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wyathe of the Lorde breake out as a fowle water as a myghty whyle wynde, and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodlye.

The terrible dyspleasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, vntill he haue done, and performed the intente of hys herte, * which in the latter day-es ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all generacions of Israel, and they shall be my people.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The prophecy that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperite. To be turned from synne to the wylde of God. The byrd of chylde is prophesied. All the wylde shall be to theyr wylde. The newe Testament and covenante is prophesied. The chylde shall be taught in the waye of the Lorde. The synners shall be so remitted, that they not once be brought on God's wylde that he be, lead of the Jewes, & be buylded agayne at Ierusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: * the people of Israel, whiche escaped in the wyldenes from the swearde, founde grace to come into theyr rest. Curio shall the Lorde nowe also appere vnto me from farre and save, I lone

John. vi. 1 * I lone the with an euerlastyng lone, therfore by my mercy I haue drawen the to me. I wyll repayre the agayne, O thou doughter of Israel that thou mayst be fast & sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrets agayn, and go forth with them that leade the daunce. Thou shalt plante vynes a-gayne vpon the hylls of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and comenly eate of it.

25 For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, aryse, * let vs go vnto Sion to our Lord God for thus sayth the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentyles: speake out, syng and sape: O Lord saue thy people, the remnaunt of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I wyll byngne them a-gayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chylde, and suche as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be great.

They shall come wepyng & with mercifull pitye wyll I byngne them byther agayne, I wyll leade them to the ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shal not stumble. * For I am Israel's father, & Ephraim is my first borne.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye Gentyles, preache in the ples, that I ye farre of, and saye: he that scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shep-herde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the violent, and they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes, whiche the Lord shall geue them. Amely, wheate, wyne, oyle, ponge shepe & calues.
And they: conspyence shall be as a well watered garden, for they shall no more be hungry.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, ye, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne they: sorowe into gladnes, and wyll com-forte them from they: sorowes and make them topfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the herdes of the preastes, & my people shal be satisfied with my goodnes, sayth the Lord.

Thus sayth the Lord: * the voyce of heuy-nesse, wepyng & lamentacion was herde on hye euen of Rachel, mournyng for her children, and wold not be comforted, because they were a way.

But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from wepyng and cryenge, withholde thynne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth the Lord And they shal come agayne out of the lande of they: enemyes. Yee, euen thy posterite shall haue consolacyon in this, sayth the Lord, that thy chylidren shall come agayne in to they: owne lande. Moreover, I herde Ephraim, that was led a way captiue, complayne on this maner. * O Lord, thou hast correct me, & thy chastynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe.
* Conuert thou me, and I shal be conuerted: for thou art my Lord God: Yee, as soone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: & when I vnderstand, I shall smyte vpon my thigh. For verely I haue comytted shamefull thynges. For I haue borne & reproke & confusyon of my yowth vpon thys complayne, I thought thus by my selfe. * is not Ephraim my dere sonne? Is he not the chylde, to the whome I haue had all my myghte and pastyme? For sens the tyme that I sprang comened wyth hym, I haue hym euer in re-membraunce: therfore, my very herte dyspeth me vnto hym, gladye and louingly wyll I haue mercy vpon hym sayth the Lord: Set & watch men, proude teachers for &: set thynne herte vpon the ryghte waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou doughter of Israel, turne agayne to the ctyes of thynne. Howe longe wyll thou go astraye, O thou shipwreke doughter?

For the Lord wyll worke a newe thyng vpon earthe. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel It wyll come therto, that when I haue broughte Iuda out of captiuite, these wordes shal be hearde in the lande and in hys ctyes. The Lord whych is the sayre * bydegrome, or rygh-teousnesse, make the fructfull. O thou holy hyll.
And there shall dwell Iuda and all her ctyes, & shepherdes, and husbandmen. For I * shal fede the hungry soule and refreche all faynte hertes.
When I heardet hys, I came agayne to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I had ben wakid out of a sweet sleepe. Beholde, sayth the Lord, the dayes come that I wyll sowe the house of Israel & the house of Iuda, wyth men and wyghte.

* Yee, it shal come therto, that lyke as I haue gone aboute in tymes past to rote them oute, to scattere them, to breake them downe, to destroye them, and chasten them. Euen so wyll I also go dply gently aboute, to buyde them vpon agayne, & to plante them sayth the Lord. * Then shall it no more be sayde the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the chylidrens teth are set on edge for euery one shal dye for his owne mysdede: so that whoso eateth a sower grape, hys teth shal be set on edge. * Behold, the dayes come, sayth & Lord that I wyll make a newe couenaunt with & house of Israel and wyth the house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with they: fathers, when I toke them by the hand and led them out of the lande of Egypte: whycor couenaunt they broke: yee, euen when I as an husband had rule ouer them sayth the Lord. * But thys shal be the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israel after those dayes sayth the Lord. * I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in they: hertes, & and wyll be they: God, and they shal be my people.

And from thence forth, shall no man teache hys neyghboure or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lord. But they shal all knowe me from the lowest vnto the hyeste, sayth the Lord. For I wyll forgene they: mysdedes, and wyll neuer remembere they: synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lord, whych gaue the: sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and starres to shyne in & nyght: whiche moueth the see, so that the floudes therof wate scarce: his name is the Lord of hostes. Lyke as thys ordynance shall neuer be taken oute of my syghte, sayeth the Lorde. So shall the scribe of Israel neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

G Moreover, thus sayth the Lord lyke as the heauen above can not be measured, and as yf fowndacions of the earth beneth maye not be sought oute. So wyl I also not caste oute the whole scribe of Israel, for that they haue corrupted: sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lorde: that the cytie of the Lorde shal be enlarged from the * towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the cyght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of * Gareb, and shal come aboute Gaath, and the whole vallepe of the dead cackalles, and of the asches, and all the felde vnto the broke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the horsgate to ward the East wher as the Sanctuarie of the Lorde also shal be set. And when it is now buyled, and set vp of thys fashion, it shall neuer be broken nor caste downe any more.

The xxxii Chapter.

Ieremye is cast into the pylson, because he prophesied that the kinge of Babilon, by the felde that Ieremye bought at the commandement of the Lorde, to signifye, that the people shulde come agayne to thys owne possession. The people of God are hys seruantes and he is thys Lord. To feare God is Goddes gyfte, to the extent that synners maye be saved.

A These wordes spake the Lord vnto Ieremye, in the tenth yere of zedekiah kyng of Iuda: whiche was the cyghtene yere of Nabuchodonosor, wher tyme as the kyng of Babilons hooftelapdespege vnto Ierusalem. But Ieremye the Prophete laye bounde in the court of the pylson, whiche was in the kyng of Iudas house: wher zedekiah kyng of Iuda coulde hym to be layde, because he had prophesied of Ieremye. Thus sayth the Lorde: * Beholde, I wyl deliuer thys cytye into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, whiche shal take it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees but surely he shal come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon whiche shal speake wyth hym mouth to mouth: and one of them shal lye another in the face. And zedekiah shal be caried vnto Babilon, and there shal he be, vntill the tyme that I vspyt hym sayth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hande to fight agaynst the Chaldees thou shalt not prospeere.

And Ieremye sayde: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me. Beholde, Hananeel, the sonne of Selum thys vncles sonne, shal come vnto the and require the to redeime the lande that lyeth in Anatoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of hynged it is thy cyght to redeime it, and bye it oute.

And Hananeel, myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the pylson, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde and sayde vnto me: Buy my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anatoth in the countrepe of Ben Iamin: for by heritage I haue cyght to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeime it. Then I perceyued that thys was the commaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anatoth, myne vncles sonne and wayed hym thre the money: euen seven sy-cles, and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make a wytyng, and to seale it: and called recoorde therby, and wayed hym there the money vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the cyndence with the coppe when it was orderly sealed & red it ouer, and I gaue the cyndence vnto Baruch the sone of Seriah, the sone of Maasiah in syght of Hananeel, my cosyn, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that he named in the cyndence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the court of the pylson.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this sealed cyndence with the coppe: and to lye it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue. For the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses felde, and vyneyardes shal be possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had deliuered the cyndence vnto Baruch sone of Seriah, I besought the Lorde, saying. O Lorde God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hys arme, and there is nothing hyd fro the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thoufandes, thou recompenseth the wyckednes of the fathers, vnto yf some of the chyldezen that come after them. Thou art the great & myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and excellent in worke. Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldezen, * to rewarde euery one after his waye: and accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.

Thou hast done great tokens and wonders * in the lande of Egypt, as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel, & vpon those men, to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme and with greate terriblenesse: and hast gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promised vnto they fathers. Namely, that thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye. * Now when they came therin, and possessed it they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulworkes made nowe against the cyty to take it and it shall be wonne of the Chaldees that besyge it with swearde, with hunger, & drath: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are present vnto the. Yet (sayst thou vnto me O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shal loose a peece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying. Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh is there any thyng then to harde for me. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: * Behold, I shall deliuer this cytye into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kyng kyng of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shall come and wyne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred dypnke offerpnces vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seynge the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth vpon what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes, sayth the Lord.

What hath this ctyte ben els but a prouoking of my wrath, euer sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherein I cast it out of my syght, bycause of the great blasphemys of the chyldren of Israel and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me yee they, their kynges theyr prynces, theyr prestes, theyr prophetes, the men of Juda, & the ctytezens of Jerusalem.

J * When I stode vpon the wall, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backs to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed & correct, & but set theyr ydols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to voue theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Juda synne with suche abhominacyon. And now therfore, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye your selues confesse) shall be deliuered into the hande of the kyng of Babylon when it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence. * Scholde, I wyl gather them togyther from all landes, wherein I haue scatred them in my wrath in my fearfull & great displeasure, & wyl bring them agayn vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, & I wyl be theyr God.

G * And I wyl geue them one hert & one way, that they may feare me al the dayes of their life that they & theyr chyldren after them may prosper. * And I wyl set vpon euery lastyng covenant with them. Namely, that I wyl neuer cease to do them good, and that I wyl put my feare in their hartes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. * Yee, I wyl haue a lust, and pleasure to do them good, & faithfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayth the Lord. I like as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wyl I also bring vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: wherof ye saye now, that it shall neuer be inhabited of the people, nor of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shall be bought for money, and euynences made therevpon, & sealed before wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem, in the ctytes of Juda, in y ctytes that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth yee, and in y ctytes that are in y south. For I wyl bring theyr prisoners hyther agayne, sayth the Lord.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is monyfyed of the Lord to praye for the deliuerance of the people, whiche the Lord promysed: God for geueth spynnes, and doth graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the birth of Chyche. The kyngdome of Chyche is & shal neuer be ended.

Now, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremyc on this maner, * when he was yet bounde in the Courte of the pylson. Thus sayeth the Lord, whych shal plet the thyng that he speaketh the Lord whych persourmeth the thyng that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord. * ctyte vnto me and I wyl answere, and shew y greute and hye thynges, whych were vnknowe vnto the. Thus I saye spake the Lord God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this ctyte and the houses of the kyng of Juda, & they are broke thowowe the ordynauce & the swearde: Because the inhabytors of this ctyte haue come to fyght against y Chaldees, and they are fylled with the deade karkases of men whome I haue slayne in my wrath and dyspleasure: when I turned my face from this ctyte, because of all her wyckednesse. Scholde sayth the Lord, I wyl repayre and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole I wyl open them the large treasure of peace and truth. And wyl retorne the captiue of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vpon agayn as they were afore. * From all misedes, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I wyl clense them.

And all theyr blasphemys whych they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I wyl forgeue them. And this shal get me a name a prayse, and honour amonge all the people of y earth whiche shall heare all the good that I wyl shewe vnto them yee, they shall be as a prayse, and as a stoned at all the good dedes and benefytes y I wyl do for them. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: * In this place where of ye saye that it shall be a wyldernesse, wherein neither people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the ctytes of Juda and wythoute Jerusalem (whych also shall be so voyde, that neyther people nor catell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the bydegrome and of the byde, & voyce of them that shall syng: * Prayse the Lord of hostes, for he is louynge and hye merce endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vpon giftes in the house of y Lord. For I wyl restore the captiue of this land, as it was afore sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, It shall come yet therto that in this lande, which is voyde from men and catell and in all the ctytes of the lande, there shall be set vpon shepheardes cotages: in the ctytes vpon the mountaynes and in the ctytes that lye vpon the playne, and in the ctytes of the south.

In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the feldeg of Jerusalem, and in the ctytes of Juda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of hym, that selleth them, sayth the Lord. * Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lord, that I wyl persourme that good thyng, whych I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel, and to the house of Juda.

In those

The Propheeye

In those dayes and at the same tyme, I wyl lynge forth vnto Dauid, the braunch, of rygh teousnesse, and he shall do equitie and ryghteou nesse in the lande. In those dayes, all Iuda be helped, and Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he shall call her, is euen God our ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth * Dauid shall neuer want one to sit vpon the throne of his house of Is rael: * neyther shall the prestes and Leuites wante one to offer alwaye before me burnt of feringes, to kindle the meate offeringes, and to prepare the sacryfices.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jere mye after this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde: Make the couenaunt * whiche I haue made woth daye and nyght be broken, that there shulde not be daye and nyght in due season: Then make my couenaunt also be broken, whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, so he not to haue a sonne to raygne in his throne, so shall also the prestes and Leuites neuer faile, but seme me. * For lyke as the starres of heauē maye not be nombred neyther the sande of the see me sured: so wyl I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunt, and the Leuites, my mynisters.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Considerest thou no what this people speaketh? They saye: (as they saye) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despyed my peo ple, and they reputed them as though they were no people. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt woth daye and nyght, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: the wyl I also caste awaye the sede of Iacob & Da uid my seruaunt, so that I wyl take no pynce out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abraham Isaac and Iacob. But yet I wyl turne agayne they captiuite, and be mercifull vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Be thou wylleth that the kinge of the kinge of Babelon be geuen into the handes of the kinge of Babelon. For he rebuketh them that broughte such of theyre brethren into captiuite, as were parsones to go at theyr lyberte.

These are the wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye * What tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babil lon & all his hostes (out of all the king domes that were vnder his power) and all his people fought agaynst Ierusalem, and all the citizens thereof. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Is rael: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Ju da, and tell hym: The Lord sendeth this word vnto thee. * I wyl deliuer this cite into his hand of the kyng of Babilon: he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, and deliuered into his power.
Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babilon in the face and he shall speake woth the mouth to mouth & then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah, kyng of Ju da: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne woth the swearde, but shalt dye in place. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytors were brent: so shalt thou be brent also, & thy mourning they shall say: Oh Lord

For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayd Jeremye the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Iuda in Ierusa lem. What tyme as the kyng of Babilons host besieged Ierusalem, & the remnant of the cyties: Samel, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remay ned of the * stronge fenced cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all his people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaymed * a libertie, so that euery man shulde let his seruaunt & handmayde go fre: Hebrue, and Hebruelle, and no Iewe holde his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement, & euery man shulde set at libertie his bonde seruaunt, & bond woman, & no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedyent, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel.

* I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypt, (that they shulde nomore be bondmen) sayinge: When seuen peres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruaunt an Hebrue go fre, if he haue serued hym seuen pe res. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herke ned not vnto me. As for you, ye were now tur ned, and dyd ryght before me in that ye proclay med, euery man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in my tem ple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue tur ned your selues agayne, & blasphemed my name.
In this, & euery man hath requyred his seruait and handmayden agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, & to be your bondmen, and bondwomen.
And therefore thus sayth the Lorde ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme freedom vnto his brother and neyghbour: wherfore I wyl call you vnto a freedom, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence & to hunger, and wyl make you to be plagued in all the king domes of the earth. Yet, those men that haue bro ken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntment which they made before me, when * they bewed & calfe in two, & when there went thorow the two halves thereof: the princes of Ju da, the princes of Ierusalem, the gelded men, the prestes, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorow the two spedes of the calfe Those men wyl I gyue into the power of the enemies, and into the handes of them that fo lowe vpon theyr lyues.

* And theyr dead bodies shalbe meate for the fowles of the ayre, and beasts of the felde. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda and his princes, I wyl deliuer them into the power of theyr ene mies, and of them that desyre to slay them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babilons host, which * now is departed from you. But thow me my commaundement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cite, they shall fyght agaynst it: wyne it, and burne it: Moreover, I wyll lape the ctytes of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the abedience of the Rechabites, & there by confoundeth the pryde of the Iues. The commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. The threatenynge punishment vnto the rebellious Iewes. He promyseth p'seruation vnto the Rechabites, for theyr abedience.

In the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie, in the raygne of Iehoa-him the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda are these. Go vnto the house of the Rechabites, & call them out, and brynge them to the house of the Lorde into some commodious place, & geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Iazaniah, the sonne of Jeremie the sonne of Habazniab, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole housholde of the Rechabites: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chyldren of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedai: the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the prynces, that is aboue the closet of Ehasiah the sonne of Helum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kyned of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father commaunded vs, saying: Pee and your sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, & buylde no houses, sowe no seede: plant no vyues, yee ye shall haue no vynyardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lye long in the lande wherin ye be straungers. Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all þe hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues our sonnes & our daughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs neyther vynyardes, nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all þe Ionadab our father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp into the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Ierusalē, that we may escape the host of the Chaldees and the Assyrians, and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda and the inhabitours of Ierusalē: Wyl ye not be resourmed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde? The wordes whiche Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey theyr fathers commaundement. But as for me, I haue stande vp early, I haue spoken vnto you, & geue you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not ben obedyent vnto me. Yee, I haue sent my seruantes all þe prophetes vnto you, I rose vpearly, & sent you word, sayinge: Turne you now euery man from his wycked way: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worshipp them:

that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and pour fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyldren of Ionadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastly kepte theyr fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll brynge vpon Iuda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyled agaynst them. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuerthelesse, they wolde geue me no answer: Jeremie spake also to the householde of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab your father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all þe he hath bydden you. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alwaye before me.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wryteth, as Jeremie subiect the booke of the curse agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent wth the booke vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers shew vnto the kynge the wordes of the booke. Jehudi taketh the booke and readeth a litle of it, and caeth it in the fyre. There is another wryt at the commaundement of the Lorde.

In the fourth yere of Iehoakim þe sonne of Josiah the kynge of Iuda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, sayinge. * Take a booke, and wryte therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to þe agaynst Israel, agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah, vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, whych I haue deuyled for them they maye peradventure, turne euery man from his wycked waye: that I maye forgiue theyr offences and synnes. Then dyd Jeremie call Baruch the sonne of Neriah: and Baruch wryte in the booke at the mouth of Jeremie all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremie commaunded Baruch sayinge. I am in pylson, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thyself and reade the booke that þe hast wrytten at my mouth. Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade the in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, & the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come oute of the ctytes may heare. Peradventure, they wyl pray my help before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrath and dyspleasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people. So Baruch þe sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremie the prophet commaunded him readyng þe wordes of þe Lorde out of þe booke in þe Lordes house. And this was done in þe fyft yere of Iehoakim þe sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, in the ix moneth, when * it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shuld fast before the Lorde: & they also þe were come from þe ctytes of Iuda vnto Ierusalē.

The Prophecy

E Then read Baruch the wordes of Jeremie oute of the booke wrythin the house of the Lord: oute of the tresury of Samariah & sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doore of the Lordes house. that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah & sonne of Samariah, the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of the Lord oute of þ booke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the scribes chambers, for that all the princes were set. Elisama the scribe, Dalaiab the sonne of Semel, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Samariah the sonne of Saphan, sedeciah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes þ he hearde Baruch reade oute of the booke before the people.

D Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniab, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, unto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the booke, where oute thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Seriah, toke the booke in hys hande, and came unto them. And they sayde unto hym: Spytte downe and make the booke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare. Nowe when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certysse the kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe dydest thou wrytte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me w hys mouth, and I wrote them in the booke.

E Then sayde the princes vnto Baruch: So thy waye, byde the with Jeremie, so that noman knowe where ye be: And they went into þ kyng to the court. But they kepte the booke in the chambze of Elisama the scribe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes that he myght heare. So þ kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the booke whiche he broughte out of Elisama the scribes chambze. And Jehudi red in it that the kyng and all the princes whiche were aboute hym myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ii moneth, and ther was a fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leues therof, he cut the booke in peces w a penknife and cast it into the fyre vpon the harty vntill þ booke was ail brent in the fyre vpon the harty.

A Yet noman was abashed thereof, or rente hys clothes: neyther the kyng hym selfe, nor his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiab, and Samariah besoughte the kyng that he wolde not burne the booke: not withstanding the kyng wold not heare the but commaunded Jerabinael the sonne of Amelech, Baraiab the sonne of Ezrell, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Jeremie the prophet but þ Lord kept them out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had brent the booke and þ sermons which Baruch wrote at þ mouth of Jeremie, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Take an other booke and wrytte in it all the fore sayde sermons, that were wrytten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakym the kyng of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim the kyng of Juda thus & sayth the Lord: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast þ wrytten therein, that þ kyng of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste. so þ he shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lord sayth of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda. * There shall none of his generacyon sit vpon þ throne of David. His dead corse shall be cast out, that the heat of the daye, & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyl visit the wyckednes of hym, of his seide, & of his seruantes. Moreover, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, & vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremie another booke, & gaue it Baruch þ scribe the sonne of Seriah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremie, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakim the kyng of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Zebediah succeded Conania. He sentech unto Jeremie to praye for hym. Jeremie saynge unto the lande of Babilon: Myn is taken. He is beaten and put in prison. He is deliuered to be brought to Babilon.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah * whiche was made kyng thowowe Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the lande of Juda, in the citie of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But neyther he nor his seruantes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the wordes of the Lord, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremie. * Neuerthelesse, Zebediah þ king sent Jehucal the sonne of Seleimiah, & Sophoniah þ sonne of Maasiah þ priest to the prophete Jeremie, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremie walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Pharaos host also was come out of Egypt. whiche when the Chaldees that besyged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came þ worde of the Lord vnto the prophet Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth þ Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Juda that sent you vnto me for counsaile. * Behold, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande. but the Chaldees shall come agayn and fyght agaynst this cite, wyne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: discerne not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner. Thus, þ Chaldees go not to theyr waye fro vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole host of the Chaldees that besyge you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fyre vpon this cite.

Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of þ Egyptians arisynge. Jeremie went out of Jerusalem, towarde the lande of Ben Jamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And

And when he came vnder Beniamyns porte there was a porter, called Jereph, the sonne of Selemph the sonne of * Hananiah, whiche fell vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge thy mynde is to runne to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jeremie It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles, Jereph wolde not beleue hym but brought Jeremie bound before the prynces. Wherefore the prynces were angry wth Jeremie, & smote hym and layde hym in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremie put into the dongion & prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. & Then Jereph the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quyetly in hys owne house, sayinge thynkest thou thys busynes (that nowe is in hand) cometh of the Lord? Jeremie answered, yee, that it both and thou saydest he shal be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreover, Jeremie sayde vnto kynge Jereph. What haue I offered against the, against thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? * Whereat your prophete, which haue prophesied vnto you, and sayd: That the kynge of Babylon shalde not come agaynst you and thys lande. And therfore heare nowe O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepted before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathan the scribe. & I dye not there. Then Jereph the kynge commaunded to put Jeremie in the fore entree of the prison, and dayly to be geuen hym a kake of breade out of the bakers treate vntyll all the breade in the cyeve was eaten vp. Thus Jeremie remayned in the fore entree in the prison.

The xxxviii. Chapter:

By the motion of rulers Jeremie was put into a dongion. At the request of Abemelech the chamberlaine, the kynge commaunded Jeremie to be brought forth of the dongion. Jeremie shewed the kynge howe he myght escape death.

At Jereph the sonne of Nathan, Godoliah the sonne of Shasbur, Iucal the sonne of Semelpah, and Jereph the sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremie had spoken vnto all the people namelie on thys maner. Thus sayeth the Lorde, * Who so remayneth in thys ctyte, shall perishe, eyther wth the sweade, wth hunger or wth pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Chaldees, shal escape, wyngyng hys soule for a praye, and shal lyue. * For thus sayth the Lorde. Thys ctyte (no doubte) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon and he shal wyne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kynge. Why we beseeche you let thys man be put to death. For thou hast beset the handes of the loudyngs that be in thys ctyte, and the handes of all the people whiche speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man verily labouryth not for peace of the people but myschefe. Jereph the kynge answered & sayde loo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremie, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sonne of Amelech that dwelte in the fore entree of the prison: And they let downe Jeremie wth coarbes into the dongion, where there was no water but myre. So Jeremie stakke fast in the myre. And when Abemelech the chamberlaine, being a chamberlaine in the kynges court, vnderstood that they had cast Jeremie into the dongion, he went out of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Beniamyn) these wordes my Lorde the kynge, where as these men medle wth Jeremie the prophete, they do hym wronge. Namely in that they haue put him in prison, ther to dye of hunger, for there is no more breade in the ctyte. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the chamberlaine and sayd Take from hence xxx men whom thou wylt, & drawe vp Jeremie the prophete out of the dongion before he dye. So Abemelech toke the men wth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and woine cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde into the dongion to Jeremie.

And Abemelech the chamberlaine sayde vnto the prophete Jeremie: I put these ragges and cloutes vnder thynne arme holes, betwixte them and the coarbes and Jeremie dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremie wth coarbes, and toke hym out of the dongion, and he remayned in the fore entree of the prison. Then Jereph the kynge sent, and caused Jeremie the prophete to be called vnto hym, into the chymere entree that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremie I wyl aske the somwhat, but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremie answered Jereph. If I be playne vnto the, thou wylt cause me to suffice death: If I gyue the counsayl, thou wylt not folowe me. So the kynge sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremie, sayinge As trulye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto Jereph. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * If case be, that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this ctyte shall not be brent. yea, both thou and thy household shall escape wth youre lyues. But if thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons prynces, then shall this ctyte be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Jereph sayde vnto Jeremie: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremie answered: No, they shall not betraue the: O hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto the: lo shalt thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnly. Beholde, all the women that are left in the kynge of Judahs house, shalbe led forth out to the kynge of Babylons prynces. And they shall saye, that thou art disceyued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and set thy feet fast in the myre, and goue theyr way from the. Therefore all thy wyues wth theyr children shall they lede forth vnto the Chaldees and thou shalt not escape theyr handes, but thou shalt be the kynge of Babylons prysoner: and thy citty shall thou cause to be brent. Then sayd ze-dekiah vnto Jeremey lorde that nobodys knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But of the princes perceaued that I haue talked wth þe and comine vnto the sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the / þyde it not from vs, and we wyl not put the to deathe. Tel vs: we praye the what sayde the kynge to þe: Se thou geue the thys answer I haue humbly besought the king

th. he wyl let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not ther. Then came al the princes vnto Jeremey, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge badde hym.
Then they helde theyr peace and let hym alone: for they perceaued no thynge. So Jeremey abode in the foor eentre of the prysoun, vntill the daye that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxix. Chapter

Abuchodonozor king of Babilon sent Jeremey the prophet to be taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slaine. He is thrust out. Jeremey is prouided for. Abimelech is deliuered fro captiuitie, because of the confidence that he had in God.

When the citty of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ix. year of ze-dekiah kynge of Iuda, in the tenth moneth), came Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon and all his host, and beseged Ierusalem, and fought agaynst it.
And in the xi. year of zedekiah in the iiii. mo-neth, the ix. daye of the moneth, he brake into the citty. Then all the princes of the kynge of Babylon came in, and sette them downe vnder the porte Neregel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sar-chachym, Rabfairs, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag wth all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. And when zedekiah the kynge of Iu-da wth his souldiers saw them, they fled, and departed out of the citty by nyght, thorow the kinges garden, and thorow the port that is be-twene the two walles, and so they went toward the wyldernes.

But the Chaldees hoost folowed faste after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde of Jerycho, and brought hym prysoner to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblath, that is in the land of Hemah, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kynge of Babylon caused þe children of zedekiah and al þe nobles of Iuda to be slaine before his face at Reblath. And made zedekiahs eyes to be put out, and bounde hym w two chaynes, and sent hym to Babylon.

After this, the Chaldees brent vnto the kynges palace, wth the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnaunte of the people that were in the citty: and such as wer come to helpe them (what soeuer was lefte of the comon sort) Nabuzara-dan the chefe captayne caried them to Babilon.
But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne let the rascal people (and those that had no thynge) dwell in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vynepardes and corne felde at the same tyme. Abu-chodonozor also the kynge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge concerning Jeremey: sayng thus: and charyng hym and make much of hym, for thou do him no harme but intreate hym after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabusazban Rabfairs, Neregal, Sarezer, Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lordes sente for Jeremey, and caused hym to be fet out of the fore eentre of the prysoun, and comytted hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan that he shoulde carie hym home: and so he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whole Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore eentre of the prysoun, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym saying: So and tel Abimelech the Moztian. Thus sayde the Lorde of hostes the God of Israll: Beholde the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuyld for thys citty, wll I bring vpon them that thou shalt se it, but I wyl driue the, sayeth the Lorde, and thou shalt not come in þe han-des of those men whom thou fearest. For doubt-les, I wll saue the, so that thou shalt not perish wth the swearde. but thy lyfe shalbe saued and that because thou hast put thy truste in me: sayeth the Lorde.

The xl. Chapter

Jeremey hath licence to go whither he will. He dwelleth with the people that remayne at Ierusalem. Ouer whom Sodolpab ruler of Iohanan propheseth death vnto Godoliah.

This is the worde that þe Lord spake vnto Jeremey, when Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had let hym go fre from Ramath, whether he had led hym bounde amonge all the prysoners that were caried from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremey and sayde vnto hym. The Lorde thy God spake mygdrely before, of the mysery vpon thys place. Nowe the Lorde hath sent it, and perforce med it, as he hath promysed. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lorde: and haue not bene obedyent vnto his voyce, therefore cometh thys plage vpon you. Beholde, I lose the bandes frome thy handes thys daye: if thou wylte nowe go wth me vnto Babilon, vnto then: for I wll se to the and prouide for the. But if thou wylte not goo wth me vnto Babilon, then remayne here.

* Schole, al the land is at thy wyll, loke whete thou thynkest conuenient and good for the to a-byde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Godolpab, therfore he sayde to hym: go backe to Godolpab, the sonne of Ahicah the sonne of Sarhan: whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour ouer the ctytes of Iuda, and dwell wth hym amonge the people or remayne wheresoeuer it please the. So the chefe captayne gaue hym his expences with a re-warde and let hym go. Then went Jeremey vnto Godolpab the sonne of Ahicam, to Eppa, and dwelte there wth hym amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the hoost of Iu-da (whiche wth theyr felowes were scattered abroad on every syde in the lande) vnderstoode, that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernour in the land: and that man

that man, wyfe, and chyldre, yee, and the poore men in þe lande that were not led captiue to Babilon shoulde be vnder þys iuryspexyon. They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa. Namely Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, Johanan and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Erahometh the sonnes of Ophai, the Netophathite, Iesaiyah the sonne of Maachath, wyth the companyens. And Godoliah the sonne of Achicam, the sonne of Saphan swore vnto them and they: sciowes in this maner. * We not afrayde to serue the Chaldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babilon seruce, so that ye prosper behelde, I dwel at Mizpa to be an officer in þe Chaldees behalfe, and to sayllke suche as come to vs. Therefore gather you wyne, come, & oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your ctyes that ye haue in keepinge.

D Yee all the Jewes also that dwelte in Mead vnder the Ammonytes in Ioumea and in all the countreys when they hearde that the kynge of Babilon had made Godoliah the sonne of Achicam the sonne of Saphan gouernoure, vpon them that were left in Iuda. All the Jewes that were returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreover Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were scatered on euery syde in the lande, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, and sape vnto hym knowest thou not that Balthis the kynge of the Ammonytes hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slay thee? But Godoliah the sonne of Achicam beleued the not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa these wordes secretly. Let me go I praye the and I will sle Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherefor will he kyl the, that all the Jewes which resorte vnto the, myghte be scatered, and the remnant in Iuda perishe? And Godoliah the sonne of Achicam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest of Ismael.

The xlii Chapter.

Ismael killeth Godoliah secretly, and many other wyth hym. Johanan followeth after Ismael.

Jer. xlii.

In the seventh moneth it happened, that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynge's bloud) came wyth the that were greatest aboute the kyng and ten men that were sworne wyth hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Achicam to Mizpa, & they dyd cate to gether. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wyth those tenne men that were sworne to hym, sette vpon and smote Godoliah the sonne of Achicam the sonne of Saphan wyth the sword and slewe hym, who the kynge of Babilon had made gouernoure of the lande. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were wyth Godoliah at Mizpa & all the Chaldees that he founde there waytinge vpon hym & those that were able to fyght he slewe wyth hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliah the matter was yett unknowne & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Syloah and Samaria, to þe nombre of. lxxx. which had shaven theyr beards, rente theyr clothes, & were all heauye, brynnyng meate offerynges: and in- cence in theyr handes to offere it in the house of þe Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wet forth of Mizpa & wepyng, to mete them. Nowe when he met them, he sayde: Go your waye to Godoliah the sonne of Achicam. And when they came into the myddest of the ctye, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (wyth the that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddest of þe ctye. Among these foure score men there were ten that sayde vnto Ismael. Wherfor slewe we not for we haue yett great a tresur in the feld of wheat, barley, oyle, and honye.

So he spared them, and slewe them not wyth the theyr brethren. Nowe the ctye wherem Ismael dyd cast the deade bodies of the men, whome he slewe because of Godoliah had kynge Azbucan sed to be made for feare of Saaza the kyng of Israhel, & the same ppe dyd Ismael slay wyth slayne men. As for the remnant of the people, the kyn- ges daughters and all the people that were left selfe at Mizpa vpon whom Nabuzaradan the cheif captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Achicam gouernoure. Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah carped them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonytes. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all they which had bene captaynes ouer the kynge's host wyth hym, herde of al wykednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, & they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyght wyth Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the great waters that are in Sychem. Nowe when all the people who Ismael led captiue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the host, they were glad. So all the people & Ismael had carped awaye fro Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Johanan wyth viii. of his sworne companions, and went to the Ammonytes. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the captaynes of the hoste, that were w hym toke all the remnant of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led awaye.

When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Achicam whome they also had reserved from hym: fyghtyng men, women and chyldren, and sel- ded men, whome they brought agayne from Sychem & went from thence and sat them downe at Scruth Canaan whych lyeth besyde Beershelem, & that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayd, be- cause that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Achicam's sonne & whome the kynge of Babilon hath made gouernour in the lande.

Then Jeremy the prophet sayde vnto them, I haue heard you. Ihis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremie concerning al the Jewes: which dwell in Egypt: at Migdol at Taphnis at Moph, & in the land of Patares. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Ye haue sene al the misery that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, & vpon the cyties of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein and that because of the greate blasphemies whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifice and worshipp vnto straunge goddesses, whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes al the prophetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. I do no suche abhominable thynges & thynges y<sup>e</sup> hate. But they wolde not folowe nor hearken to turne from their wickednes, and to do no more sacrifices vnto straunge goddesses.

Jer. xliij. a. and xliij. c.

Wherfore myne indignation and wrath was kindled, and it brent vp the cyties of Iuda, the feldest with the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. How happe neth it, that ye do so great euill vnto your owne soules thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your owne handes. When ye offere vnto straunge Goddesses in the lande of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myghte utterly perishe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacions. Do haue ye now forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kyniges of Iuda and their wiues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Iuda, in the cite, & in the stretes of Ierusalem?

Yet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, neither walke ye in my lawe and in my commandementes, that I haue geuen vnto you & your forefathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: the God of Israel. I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punish you, and to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnaunte of Iuda, that purpolly went into Egypte, there to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swearde and with hunger.

Jer. xliij. c. and xliij. a.

For from the least vnto the most, they shall perishe with the swearde and with hunger. More ouer, they shall be reuyled, al hoired, shamed, and cotounded. For I will perserue them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vpheld Ierusalem, with the swearde, with hunger, and with pestilence. So that none of the remnaunte of Iuda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda although they thynke to come thither agayne, & to dwell there. For noone shall come agayne, but such as are fled awaye.

Jer. xliij. a.

Then all the men whiche knewe that the pryces had offered vnto straunge goddesses, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, and all the people that dwelte therein: Egypte in the cite of Patares, answered Jeremie, and sayde: As for the wordes y<sup>e</sup> thou hast spoken vnto vs: in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wyse heare them, but what soeuer goeth oute of oure owne mouth that we will doo. We will do sacrifice and offer oblacens vnto the quene of heauen. * lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kyniges and oure heades haue done in the cyties of Iuda, and in the stretes and feldest of Ierusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vytyles then were we in prosperity and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

* But sence we leste to buene incence: and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thynges, and perishe with the swearde, and hunger. Laste of all: when we women dyd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen dyd we make her cakes and y<sup>e</sup> offer vnto her dyne offerynges, even to that ymage dyd we sacrifice and seruyce, without oure husbandes wylls.

Jer. xliij. b. and xliij. c.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto al the people to the men to the women, and to all the folke whiche had geuen hym that answer, dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kyniges and rulers, whiche al the people haue offered in the cyties of Iuda, in the stretes and lande of Ierusalem: and hath he not considered this in his mynde? In somuche that the Lorde myghte no longer suffice the wickednesse of youe inuencion, and the abhominable thynges whiche ye dyd. * Is not your lande desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein anye more, as it is come passe this daye?

Jer. xliij. c.

* Dyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made suche sacrifices to ydolls, and synned agaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not followed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Jer. xliij. c. and xliij. d.

Yee, this is the cause that all mysfortune happened vnto you: as it is come to passe this daye. Moreover Jeremie spake vnto all the people & to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lorde, all Iuda ye that be in the lande of Egypt. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Ye and your wyues haue spoken with your owne mouth, that this thing that ye haue fulfilled in dede * Yee, thus haue ye sayde: We will not sayle but performe the vowes that we haue lowed. We will do sacrifice & pour out dyne offerynges to ges to the queene of heauen: Purposely wyl ye set up your owne meanynges and perfourme your vowes. And therefore, heare the worde of the Lord all Iuda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte: Beholde, * I haue sworne by my great name sayeth the Lord: that my name shall not be rehearsed thowme any manes mouth of Iuda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye, The Lord God spueth, for I wyl walche, to plage them, and not for thep: welth.

* And all the men of Iuda that be in the lande of Egypte shall perthe wylth the swerde and wylth hunger, vntill they be vtterly destroyed.
Neuertheles, those that fled awaye for the swerde shall come agayne into the lande of Iuda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnant of Iuda, that are gone into Egypte, there handes of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon his enemye, whych sought after his lyfe.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Baruch is reproved of Jeremie.

These are the wordes that Jeremie the prophet spak vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah * after that he had wyrtte these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremie in the yere of Iehoi the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel vnto the, o Baruch. In so much as thou thoughtest thus when thou wast wytyng: Wo is me, the Lord hath geuen me sorow vpon sorowe. I haue werped my selfe wylth syghyng, and haue founde no rest.

Therefore tell hym, o Jeremie that the Lord saith thus, Behold, the thyng that I haue builded, wyl I breake downe agayne and rote out the thyng that I haue planted. yee, thys whole lande And sekest thou yet promocyen: Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wyl bringe a myserable plage vpon all fleshe, sayeth the Lord.
* But thy lyfe wyl I geue the for a praye in all places, wher soeuer thou goest.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The prophete Jeremie the destruction of Egypt. Deservance is promised to Israel

Here folowe the wordes of the Lord to the prophet Jeremie whych he spak agaynst al the Gentyles. These wor-des folowynge preached he to the Egyptians concernynge the host of Pharao, hophrea kyng of Egypt: when he was in Chatcamis besyde the water Euphrates what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon flew hym in the fourth yere of Iehosaphat the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda.

* Make ready buckler and shylde: and goo forth to fight: harness your horses, and set your selues vpon the, set your sallettes fast on, bring forth speares scoure your swerdes: and put on your breastplates.

But alas howe happeneth it, that I se you so afraid: why shrink ye backe: Thep: worth-ys are slayne yee, they runne so fast away, that none of them loketh behynd hym, fearfulness is fallen vpon euery one of them, sayeth the Lord The lyghtest of foote shall not fle awaye, and the worthys shall not escape.

Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they shal stumble and fall. But what is he thys that swelleth vp, as it were a floude roa-ryng and ragynge lyke the streames of water: It is Egypte that ryseth vp lyke the floude, and casteth out the waters wylth so greate noyse.

And he sayde, I wyl go vp, and wyl coner the earth, I wyl destroye the cytye wylth them that are therein, set ye vpon your horses rote forth ye cha-rettes come forth worthys ye Moyses, ye Li-beans with your buklers, ye Libeans with your bowes. Thep: daye of the Lord God of hostes is a daye of vengeance, that he maye abuenge hym of his enemyes. The swerde shall deuoure it shall be satysfied and bathed in thep: bloude.
For the Lord God of hostes shall haue a floure offeryng towarde the north, by the water of Euphrates. So vp, o Egipt, and bringe thy cattle vnto the daughter of Egypte. But in wayne shall thou go to surgerie, for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The heyden haue heard of thy name, and the lande is full of thy confusion: for one stronge man shal stembie vpon another and they are fallen both together.

* These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremie concernynge the commyng of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, whych was sent to destroye the lande of Egypte. Preache out thowme the lande of Egypt: and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Noph and Capnis, and say: Stande up! make the rebp for the swerde shall consume the rounde about.

Howe happeneth it, that the myghty worth-ys are fallen: Why stode they not fast: Euen because the Lord thrust them downe. The slaughter was great, for one fel euer stil vpon another One cryed vpon another. Al let vs go agayne to our people, and to our owne owne natural countre from the cruel swerde.

They shal crye euen there, o Pharao, kyng of Egypte thou troublous kyng the tyme shal bring sedycyon. As truly as I lyue sayeth the kyng, * whose name is the Lord of hostes, it shall come as the mounte of Taboz, and as I pha-nus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypte make ready thy geare to flyt. For Noph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein, The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodlye saye calfe: but destruction shall come oute of the north I say it cometh. Her waged soudyers that be wylth her are lyke fatte calues, They also shall fle awaye together, & not abyde for the daye of thep: slaughter, and the tyme of thep: vspytacyon shall come vpon them.

The cry

The cry of them shall make a noise, as the blaste of a trumpet. For they shall enter in with their hooftes, and come with the axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shall cut downe her wood, sayeth the Lord: They shall be innumerable: for they shall be more in nombre then the grasshoppers, so that no man shall be able to tel them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and deliuered into the handes of the people of the North.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visit that restless people of Alexandria, Pharaos and Egypte, yee, both their gods and their kynges such as Pharaos, and all them that put their trust in him. Yee I will deliuer them into the handes of those, that seek after their lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as aforetyme, sayeth the Lord.

But be not thou afrayde (O my seruante Jacob) feare not thou O Israel. For lo, I will helpe thee from farre, and thy seed from the lande of their captiuitie. Jacob also shall come agayne and be in rest. He shall prospere and no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruante) sayeth the Lord for I am with thee: and will destroye all nacions, among whom I haue scattered thee. Henceforth, I will not consume thee: but chasten thee and correcte thee, yee, & that with discrecyon: neyther will I spare the as one that were faultles.

The xlvii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistines.

These are the wordes, that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharaos smote the cytye of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde there shall waters ryse out of the North: and shall growe to a great floude runnyng ouer and couerynge the lande, the cytyes and they that dwell therein.

23 And the men shall cry, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noise and rampynge of their stronge barbed horses, at the rampynge of their charrettes and at the rumbling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyldren, so feble and wey shall their handes be at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste bothe Tyrus, Sidon, and all other that are sworne vnto them.

C For the Lord will destroye the Philistines, the remnant of the yle of Caphtor. Waldnes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with other valleys shall kepe her place.

Howe longe wilt thou sleepe, O thou sword of the Lord: When wilt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lord hym selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Ascalon and raysed it up agaynst the cytyes of the see coastes?

The xlviii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord agaynst Moab.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: Moab shall be to the cytye of Nebo: for it is laid waste, brought to confusion and inhabited with rithiari take. Misgab is brought to shame & afrayde: Moab can boast no more of his strength for they haue deuyled agaynst it. Come shall they say, let vs rote the out, that they may be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles and that the madmen may no more be taught vpon: & the swerde shall persecute the. A voice shall crye from Hozanaim: with great wastynge and destruction is Moab made desolate.

Chyldren coulde tel of the crye thereof. For at the goynge vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentation and mourning, and downe towarde Hozanaim, they heard a cruel and deadly crye. Get you away, saue your liues, and be like vnto the heath in the wyldernes. * For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne workes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his prelates and princes shall goe away into captiuitie.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cytyes none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the feldees shall be layed waste, lyke as the Lord hath spoken.

Crye wynges vnto Moab, that she get her a waye speedily: for her cytyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein.

Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lord negligently, and cursed be he that keepeth backe his swerde from shepyng of bloude.

Moab hath euer ben ryche and careles from her youth vp, she hath spten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessel into another (this) she neuer went away into captiuitie, therefore her cause remaineth, and her labour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayeth the Lord, that I shall sende her trusters to trusse her vp, which shall remoue her from her dwelling and empty her vessels, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust: Therefore do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed: and her cyties brent vp: her chosen yongmen be slayne, sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lord of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say, O how happeneth it, that the strong staffe, & the goodly rodde is thus broke? And thou daughter of Dibon come downe from thy glory, and spt in thy stre. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vnto the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Arec, get thee to the strete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and overcome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephath & Dibon: vpon Rabo

The Prophecie

Rabob, and the house of Deblathaim vpon Catrathiarim and vpon the house Samull, vpon the house Moan, and Carpothe vpon Bozrah, and all the cities in the lande of Moab whether they lye farre or neare.

The hoine of Moab is smytten doونه and her arme broken, sayeth the Lorde. Make her broncken, for she magnified herselfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clap theyr handes at her vomitte, and she also may be laughed to scoone.
O Israell, shalt thou not laugh hym to scoone, when he is taken among theues. * Pee, because of thy wordes that thou haste spoken agaynst hym, shalt thou be dyspnt away. Ye Moabites shall leauie the cities, & dwel in rockes of stone and be come lyke doves, & make theyr nestes in holes.

* As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard: for she is verie hye minded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomacke, sayeth the Lorde, I knowe, sayeth the Lorde her indignacion, she doth not ryght, her wordes are lyes and they haue not delt truly. Therefore shall there mourninge be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shall be made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jaser, and for the, O thou vynecarde of Sabinah. Thy vine braunches shall come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jaser, but vnto the see the destroyer shall breake into thy barrest and grapegatherynge. In the and there shall be taken awaye from the tymber felde, and from the hole lande of Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye: pea, there be none to crye vnto hym which afore tyme were herde fro Hezebon to Eleale and Jahaz, which lyfted vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto hozona-im, the bullocke of thre pere olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Memrun shall be dry-ed vp. Moreover, I wyll make Moab cease, sayth the Lorde, from the offerynge and cen-syng, for she hath made vnto her Goddes in hygh places. Wherefor my heart mourneth for Moab, lyke a croude playng an heuy song: and for the mens sake of the byekwa'lyng heart mourneth also: euen as a pyper that ppyeth a doleful song: for they shall be verie fewe, and destroyed.

* All heedes shall be shauen, and all beeredes clipped of, all handes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Vpō all the house toppes and stretes of Moab there shall be lamentable mourning. For I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessel, sayth the Lorde. O how is she destroyed: O how mourneth she: O howe doth Moab hange downe her head and is ashamed: Thus shall Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them that be rounde about her. * For thus sayth the Lorde Behold: the enemy shall come flyinge as an Eagle, and spied his wynges vpe Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and wynn the stronge holdes.
Then the myghty mens hertes in Moab shall be lyke the herte of a womā trauelyng with child.
And Moab shall be made so desolate that the shall nomore be a people because she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde. * feare, ppyt & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lorde.

Whoso escapeth the feare shall fall in the ppyt, & whoso getteth out of the ppyt shall be taken in the snare. For I wyll bringe a peare of vyltation vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are ha-ble to fyre, shall stande vnder the shadowe of he sebon: for there shall go a fyre oute of Hezebon, and a flame from Spon, and shall burne vnto that proude people of Moab, and the top of those sedycous chyldren.

Go vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe. Pea, thy sonnes & dought-ters shall be led awaye captiue. Yet at the laste, wyll I bringe Moab out of captiue agayne sayeth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plague of Moab.

The xlii. Chapter.

The wordes the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst the Edomites, Damascus, Lebar and Elam.

Concernynge the * Ammonytes, thus the Lorde sayth hath Israell no chylde, or is he wythoute an heire: Why hath your kynge then taken Gad in. Wherefor doeth your people dwell in his citties: Wherefore therefore, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, that I wyll bringe a people of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes and it shall be layed in a desolate heape and her cittyes brent vp: and the Israelytes shall be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lorde Hezebon shall mourne for it, shall be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde.

The cittyes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrd them selues wyth sackcloth, they shall mourne, and rine about the walles: for theyr kynge shall be led awaye prisoner: pea, bys prestes and princes wyth hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the valleye: theyr valley hath flowed away, O thou learde dought-ter, and thankest thou that thou arte so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to the: Beholde, I wyll bringe a feare vpon the sayth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that be about the: so that ye shall be scattered euery man from an other, and no man shall gather the together agayne that be fled. But after that I wyll bringe the Ammonytes also oute of captiuetye agayne.

* Vpon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on this maner: Is ther nomore wil-dome in Cheman: Is there nomore good counsaile amonge your people: Is theyr wysdome then touned cleue to nought: See you hence, turne your backes, cripe downe into the depe, O ye cittyens of Dedan.

For I wyll bringe destruction vpon Esau: pea & the day of your vyltacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leue so ne grapes: If the nyght robbers came vpon the shuld they not take so moch as they thought we ynough:

But I wyll make Esau bare, and dyscouere his secretes, so that he shall not be habile to hyde them.

them. Hys sede shalbe wasted awaye: yea, his brethren and his neyghbours: and he hym selfe shal not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherles chyldren behynde the, and I wyl kepe them: and thy wydowes shal take the: and I wyl comferte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. * Beholde they that me thought were vnnete to drynke of the cuppe, haue dronken wth the fyrst. and thynke thou then to be free.

No, no, thou shalt neyther be quyte nor free: but thou muste drynke also. For why? I haue sworne by my selfe, sayeth the Lorde, that Moze: ray shall become a wyldernesse, an open shame a laughynge stocke and cursynge: and al her cyties shalbe a continuall deserte.

For I am perswaded of the Lorde that he hath sent a message already vnto the heathen. Gather you together, & go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the batayle: for lo, I wyl make the but small amonge the heathen, and lytle regarded amonge men.

* The hye stomacke and the pryde of thy bert haue deceaued the, because thou wylt dwell in holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in possession. Neuerthelesse, though thy nest were as hye as the Eagles: yet wyl I caste the downe, sayeth the Lorde. Moreover, I dwelleme shalbe a wyldernes: * who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, & wondre at her miserable plagues. * Like as Sodom, Gomorre, and the cities that laye there aboute were turned vpsydwone sayeth the Lorde so shall no body dwell in Iudumea, and no man shal haue his habitation there. Beholde, lyke as y Lpon, so shall a destroyer come vpon the pleasaunt medowes of Iordan vnto the stronge dwellinge place: and when I haue made him quyet, I wyl make hym to flye from her: and all chosen men wyl I set in aray agaynst her. Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyl stryue with me? What wypperd may stande in my handes?

* Therefore heare the counsaile of the Lorde that he hath taken vpon Iudumea: and hys purpose that he hath deuyd vpon the cytyzens of Thema. The least of the flocke shal teare them in peces, and take what saye theynge they haue they shal make it waste: and them selues also. At the noyse of they fall: the earth shal quake: the crye of they: voyce shalbe herd vnto the red see. Beholde the enemye shal come and flye vpon hyther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and spyed by wynges vpon Moztah. Then shal the bertes of the wyrtypes in Edom be as the harte of a woman traueplynge of child. * Upon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shal come confusyon: for they shal heare euell tydynges, they shalbe tossed to and fro lyke the see that can not stand styll. Damascus shalbe sore afrayde, & shal flye tremblynge shal come vpon her. Sozowe and payne shal ouertake her as a woman traueling with chylde. But how shuld so wyrtypful & glorious a cite be forsaken: here therefore her younge men shal fal in the stretes, & al her men of war shalbe take away in that tyme, sayeth y Lorde of hostes

I wyl kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus whych shal consume the palace of Benhadad.

* As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazor whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, & get you vpon vnto Cedar, and destroye the people toward the east. They tentes and their flockes, shal they take away: yea, they hanginges and they vessels. They Cammels also shal they carry away with them. They shal crye to them: feare is on every syde.

He, get you lone awaye, crape into canes, that ye may dwell there, & ye inhabytors of Hafor, sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath holden a coucel concerning you: and concluded hys deuyce agaynst you. Arise, and get you vpon agaynst ponder ryche and careless people (sayeth the Lorde) which hath neyther gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone.

They Camels shalbe stolen, and the dyones of they catell dryuen away. Moreover, those wyl I scatter toward al the wyndes: and byng the to destruction: yea, and that thozow they owne samplers, sayeth the Lorde. Halso, also shalbe a dwellinge for dragons, & an euerlastynge wyldernes. so that no body shal dwell there: and no man shal haue there his habitation.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremie, concerninge Elam, in the begynnyng of y raygne of zedchiah kyng of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Behold, I wyl breake y bowe of Elam, and take away they strength: and vpon Elam I wyl byng the four wyndes from the four quarters of heuen, and wyl scatter them agaynst the same four wyndes. And there shalbe no people, but some of Elam shal flee vnto them.

For I wyl cause Elam to be afrayde of their enemyes, and of them that seke they lyues: and wyl byng vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, sayeth the Lorde. And I wyl persecute them wth the sword, so long tyll I haue brought them to naught. I wyl set my throne in Elam, I wyl destroye both the kyng and the princes from thence, sayeth the Lorde. Wnt in processe of tyme I wyl byng Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The I. Chapter.

The prophete the destruction of Babylon, and the assurance of Ierusalem, which was in captiuitie.

In the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremie, concerninge Babylon, and the landes of the Chaldees: * Preache amonge the Gentyles, let youre voyce be herd, make a token, crye out, kepe no silence, but say: Babylon is wonne * Sell is confounded, and Merodach is out: come.

* Yea, they goodes be broughte to shame and they ymagines burst in peces. For out of the north there dothe come a people agaynst her, to hyche make her lande so waste, that no body dwell therein, neyther man, nor beaste: for they flye and departe from thence, * In those dayes & at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel shal come, they and the chyldren of Juda weppng & makynge haste, and shal seke the Lord theyr God. They shal aske the waye to Syon, thither shal they turne theyr faces, sayenge: Come and we wyll cleave to the Lorde, in a covenant that neuer shal be broken.

3 My people hath bene a loste & flooke, my shepherdes have dysceyved them, and have made the go astraye upon the hylls. They have gone fro the mountayne to the lytle hylle, and forgotten theyr folde. All they came upon them, have deuoured them: and theyr enemyes sayd: we haue made no defaute agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yea, euen the Lord, whych is the bewty of theyr ryghteousnes and that defended theyr fathers. Yet shall ye fflye from Babylon, and departe out of the lade of the Chaldees & be ye as the raimmes that go befoze the flooke. * For so, I wyll wake up an host of people fro the northren lande, and brynge them vnto Babylon: these shal laye sege to it, and wynn it. Theyr arrowes shal not mysse, lyke as a conynge archer shutech not wronge.

And the Chaldees shal be spoyled, and al they that spoyl them, shal be satisfied, sayth the Lord. * a though ye were so cheatful & glad, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie. Your mothers shal be sore confounded, and they that beare you, shal come to shame.

She shal be the least set by amonge the nations voyde: wasted and dryed up. No man shal be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shal be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shal stande styll and be abayed, and shal wonder at all her plagues.

C Go forth in your armys agaynst Babylon rounde aboute, all ye that can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath synned agaynst the Lord. Cry out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde aboute: she shal yelde her selfe, her foundations shal fall and her walles shal come downe: for it shal be the vengeance of the Lord.

* Yea, vengeance shal be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye wth her. Rote out the cower from Babylon, and him that handleth the cyle in her uel. For feare of the swerd of the enemy euerp man shal get him to his owne people: and euerp man shal fflye to his owne lande. Israel is a scattered flooke & syons haue dysperled them.

* I praye the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon hath brosed all theyr bones.

D Therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll vset the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdome as * I haue visited the kynge of the Assyrians, and wyll brynge Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Charamel and Basan and be satisfied vpon the mounte of Ephraim & Galaad.

* In those dayes and at the same tyme sayeth the Lord: If the offence of Israel be sought for, there shal none be founde. If men enquire for synne of Iuda: there shal be none: for I wyll be merciful vnto them, whom I sustre to remayne ouer.

Go downe: O thou auenger, into thine enemyes lande, & visit the that dwell therein. downe with them, & smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lord: do accordyng to al that I haue comaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a daughter & great murther, namely on this manner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broke & broyled in sondre? Howe chaunceth it: that Babylon is become a wylder-nes among the heathen on this manner? I my selfe haue layed waste for the, & thou art take. Vnawares arte thou trapped and snared: for why thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto angre. The Lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the land of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: breke vpon her chylles: threwe her as ye threwe corne: despoyle her that northynge shal be left. Slaye all theyr myghty soldiers, & put the to death. No be vnto them, for the day & tyme of theyr visita- tion is at hande. We thynke I haue already a crye, of them that fled & escaped out of the lande of Babylon, which shewe in Sion the vengeance of the Lord our God, the vengeance of his temple: yea a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vpon all the archers agaynst Babylon, pytch your tentes rounde aboute her, & none escape. * Recompence her as she hath deserued: & accordyng as she hath done, so deale wth her agayne, for she hath set vpon her selfe agaynst the Lord, agaynst the holy one of Israel. Therefore ual her pynge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shal be rooted out in the daye sayth the Lorde. Beholde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes for thy day shal come, euen the tyme of thy visita- tion. And the proude shal fumble and fall, and no man shal helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vpon his cyties wth fyre, and it shal consume al that is rounde aboute hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Iuda suffre violence together. Al they that haue them in captiuite, kepe them faste, and wyll not let them go but theyr auenger and redeemer is myghty. Whose name is the Lorde of hostes. he shal mayntayne theyr cause he shal make the lade shake, and iudge the that dwell therein, one wth another. The swerde shal come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr prynces, and vpon theyr wyse men. The swerde vpon theyr soldayners, as for those, they shal be come foolcs. The swerde vpon theyr worthies, so that they shal stande in feare. The swerde vpon theyr horsemen and charrettes and vpon all the comen people that dwell vnder them: so that they shal all become lyke women.

The swerde vpon theyr treasure, so that it shal be stollen awaye. I broughte vpon theyr waters, so that they shal be dryed vp.

For the lande worshippeth ymages, and belyleth depyteth in straunge wonderfull thynges. Therfore shall wyldc beastes, Lamia and Catte of mountaynes, and estriches dwel therein for there shall neuer man dwel there, nether shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. I like as God destroyed * Sodom and Gomorre with the cyties that lay there about, sayeth the Lord. So shall no man dwell there also, nether shall any man haue there his habitacion. * Behold, there shall come a people from the north with a great bonde of men, & many kyngeys shall stande vpon from the endes of the earth. They beare bowes and bocklers, cruel are they & vnmereyful. They vopce roareth lyke the ragynge see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weapened to fyght agaynst the, O Babylon. As soone as the kynge of Babylon heareth tell of them, his handes shall be feble. Sorowe and heynnes shall come vpon hym, as a woman trauelynge wyth chyld. Behold, * lyke as the lyon cometh vpon from the pleasaunte medowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dyspue them for the, and make them raine agaynst her. But whom shall I chole out, & ordeyne to suche a thyng? * For who is lyke me, or who wyll stryue wch me? or what shepherde may stande agaynst me? Therefore heare the counsel that the Lord hath gyuen vpon Babylon, and the deuince þe hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees. The leaste amonge the people shall teace them in pees, and loke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shall lape it wast. The noyse at the wyppynge of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shall be herde amonge the sentryls.

The li. Chapter.

Howe Babylon shalbe destroyed by Ieremye.

Thus hath the Lordes said: * behold I wyll raple vp a perillouse wynde agaynst Babylon and her cytyzens that beare euyl wyl agaynst me. I wyll sende also into Babylō faners to lanne her out, and to destroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde. Moreover, the Lord hath sayde vnto the bowmen, and to them that clyme ouer the wales in bress plates. Ye shall not spare her pounge men lyll downe at her hooste. Thus the slayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chal-dees, and the wounded in stretes. * As for Israel and Iuda, they shall not be forsake of their God of the Lord of hostes for the holp one of Israels sake: no, though they haue fylled all theyr lande ful of synne. * Flye away from Babylon euery man saue his lyfe, that ye be not rored out to praye wyckednesse for the tyme of the Lordes vengeance is come. yea, he wyll rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande, * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes drunken. Of her wyne haue all people drunken: therefore, are they out of theyr wytres. * But suddenly is Babylon fallen, and destroyed.

Woe for her, byng playsters for her woundes, yf she may perauenture be healed agayne. Woe wolde haue made Babylō whole, say they:

but she is not recondred. Therefore wyll we let her alone, and go euery man to his owne countrey. For her iudgement is come into heauē and is gone vp to þe clouds. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousnes. And therfor com on, we wyll shewe spon þe worke of þe Lord our God.

Make sharpe the arrowes and multiplye your chyldes. * for the Lord shall raple vp the spere of the kynge of the Chaldees, which hath alreadye a desyre to destroye Babylon. They shall be the vengeance of the Lord, and the vengeance of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon: make your watche stronge, set your watch men in array: pray, hold prey watches: and yet for al that shall the Lord go forth with the deuince which he hath taken vpon them þe dwel in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters, O thou that hast so great treasure & riches, thyne ende is come, and the reherynge of thy wyppynge. * The Lord of hostes hath sworne by hym self, that he wyll ouerwhelme the with men, lyke grethoppers in nombze, whiche wyth a courage shall crye, alarum, alarum agaynst the.

* I can en the Lord of hostes, that wyth his power made the earth, wyth his wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and wyth his dyscretion sprede out the heauens. As soone as he letteth his voyce be herde, the waters in the ayer wate scarce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. he turneth the lyghtnynges to rayne, he byngeth the wyndes out of theyr secret places. If they be esteemed by theyr wysdō: almen are become fooles. * Confounded be al the casters of ymages, for the thyng that they make is but dysceate, & hath no breath. Wapne is it and an erronouse worke: and in the tyme of vyssitacion it shall perpyche.

Reuert helesse the porcion of Jacob is none. Suche but he that made al thynges, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he is the rodde of his enheritance. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapens for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in pees: & with the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thow the I haue beate to poulder hoyle and hoyleman, yea, the charrettes and such as sat vpon them. Thow the I haue broken man and woman, olde and yonge, bachelce and mayden. Thow the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandman and his catel, the prynces and the rulers. Therefore wyll I rewarde the cytie of Babylon, and al her cytyzens, the Chaldees wyth al the euyl whiche they haue done vnto Sion pray, that ye pour let ues shall se it, sayeth the Lord. Behold, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyll, sayeth the Lord: thou that destroyest al lādes: I wyll stretch out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyll make the a brente hyl: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foundations of stones shall be taken any more out of the, but wast and desolate shall thou lye for euer more, sayeth the Lord.

Set vp a toke in the lande: blowe the trōpet. It is tcs tes amonge the hepythen: prouoke the nacpous agaynst her, call the kyngedomes of Ararat, Hennis: & Alcanes agaynst her: Set the pynce agaynst her, bynge as greute a sorte of terpble hoyses agaynst her: as if they were grethoppes. Prepare agaynst the the people of the Medes wpyth they: kynges, princes, and al the chefe rulers. yee, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal shake and be afrayde wbe the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babilon so wast that no man shal dwell anye moze therein. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the batayle and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, they: strength hath sayled them, they shal be lyke women. They: dwellynge places shal be bzent vp, their barres shal be broken. One pursuauit shal mete an other: yee, one post shal com by another to byng p kyng of Babylon tidinges that his cite is taken in on euery syde, the foordes occupied, the fennes bzent vp, and the souldiers soze afrayde.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babilon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a threlshyng floure, but shortly shal her haruest come. Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. he swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled hys bely wpyth my delycates. he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thyng that was left me hath he carped vnto Babylon, sayeth p daughter p dwelleth in syon yea, & my bloude also vnto the Chaldees, sayeth Ierusalem. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyl drynke vp her see, and drye vp her waterspynges.

E * Babylon shal become an hepe of stoues & dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shal roate together lyke lyons, & as the ponge lyons when they be angrye, so shal they ben de them selues. In they: heate I shal gyue them a dynner and they shal be drunken for ioye. * Then shal they slepe an euerslapyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shal cary them downe to be slayne lyke shepe, like wethers and goates. O, how was Belach wonne: O, how was the glorp of the whole lade taken: howe happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the hepythen: The see is ryfen ouer Babilon, & hath couered her wpyth his great wanes. Her cyties are layed wast, the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauallyeth thowowe. Moreover, * I wyl vsset Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shal I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyls also shal rume nomore vnto hym: yea, and the walles of Babylon shal fal.

E My people, * come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe from the fearful wraoth of the Lorde. Be not sayntherred, and feare not at euery rumour that shal be hearde in the lande for euery yere byngeth newe tydynges, and in the yere folowynge newe tydynge, and robbynge in the lande and loyde vpon loyde. And lo, the tyme cometh that I wyl vsset the ymages of Babilon, and the whole lande shal be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth wpyth al that is therein, shal reioyse ouer Babylon when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babilon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal they fal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye p haue escaped p sweard hast thou, stode not styf, remembre the Lorde afarre of, & thynke vpon Ierusalem, for we are ashamed to heare p blasphemies our faces were couered with shame, bycause the straunge aleauntes came into the sanctuarpe of the Lorde. Wherefore beholde, (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh p I wyl vsset the ymages of Babylon, and thowowe the hole lande they shal mourne and fal. * Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, & kepte her power on hys: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A ppyous crye shal be herde from Babylon and a great mysery from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hys stomack and proude boasting, wher wpyth they haue bene as furious as the waues of great waterfloudes, & made great crakes wpyth they: wordes. For the destroyers shal come vpo her, euen vpon Babilon) whych shal take they: worthyes, and breake they: bowes for God is dysposed to auge hym selfe vpon them and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl make they: prynces, they: wylse me, they: chefe rulers, & al they: worthyes dronke. so that they shal slepe an euerslapyng slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The thycke wall of Babylon shal be broken, & her hys gates shal be bryt vp. And p thyng that the Gētyles and the people haue wrought wpyth great trauayle and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Ieremie gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Neriah, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon wpyth zedekiah p kyng of Iuda, in p fourth yere of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraiab was a peaceable pynce. Ieremie wrote in a booke all the mysery that shulde come vpon Babilon. yea and al these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babilon, and gaue Saraiab thys charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade al these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rate out thys place, so p neither people nor catel shal dwell there any more: but to lye waste for euer: and when thou haste redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thurst downe wpyth the burthen of trouble, that I wyl bynge vpo her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the pteachynge of Ieremie.

The

Chereafter the takinge of zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, zedekias sonnes are killed before his face, and his eyes put out. The cite is burned. The temple is spoiled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem are carryed to Babilon, kyng Jehoachin is brought forth of prison, and fed like a hynde.

Zedekiah was * one and .xx. yere olde, when he was made kyng, and he reigned a leuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremys daughter of Libna. He lived wyckedly before the Lorde even as Jehoachin dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyl he had cast them out of his presence.

And zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babilon. * But in the nynte yere of his regne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth day of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon with al his host came before Jerusalem, and beseged it, and made them bulwokes round aboute it. And this besegynge of the cite endured unto the eleventh yere of kyng zedekiah.

* And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. day of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the cite: that there were no more vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake a waye, and fled out of the cite by nyghte thowse the way of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cite rounde aboute, yet wente these men theyr waye toward the wyldernes.

And so the Chaldees folowed upon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when his hoolle was runne from hym: So they carryed the kyng away prisoner to Reblath unto the kyng of Babilon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement upon hym.

The kyng of Babilon also caused zedekias sonnes to be slayne before his face, yee, and put all the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde wth two cheynes, to be carryed unto Babilon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth, in the nynte yere of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, and the kynges of Babilons seruantes came unto Jerusalem, and bzent vp the house of the Lorde. He bzent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buildynges in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees were with the chefe captayne, brake downe al the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and suche folke as yet was left in the cite: which also were fallen to the kyng of Babilon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carryed them away prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vyneyardes and feldeg. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and carryed all the metall of them unto Babilon. They toke awaye also the caldrons, shoules, the shokes, sprinklers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupied in the service, with the basins, colcarnes, sprinklers, pottes, candlestykcs, spones, and cuppes wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pylers the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate * which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel conteyned so much metall, yt myght not be weyed. For every pyler was eghtene cubites hie: and the rope that wente aboute it, was twelue cubites, and foure spngers thicke and roude. Nowe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hie: & vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde aboute of cleane brasen.

After this maner were both the pylers fastenied wth the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred and .xxvi. whych hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chefe captayne also toke Sariah the hie prest, and Sophoniah that was chefe next hym, and the thre keepers of the treasury. He toke out of the cite a chamber layne whych was a captayne of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruantes whych were founde in the cite: and Sephera captayne that vled to muster the men of warre, with threescore men of the countrey that were taken in the cite. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and carryed them to the kyng of Babilon unto Reblath and the king of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of his owne lande. The summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonozor led away captiue.

In the seventh yere of his regne, he carryed away of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the .xviij. yere Nabuchodonozor carryed awaye from Jerusalem eght hundred thirtie and two persones. In the .xxiiij. yere of Nabuchodonozor Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundred forty and fyue Jewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousand and sixe hundred.

In the .xxvii. yere after that Jehoachin the kyng of Juda was carryed awaye in the .xv. daye of the .xii. moneth. Evilmerodach kyng of Babilon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jehoachin the kyng of Juda his pardon, and let him out of prison, and spake louingly to him. And set hym stonde aboute the trones of the other kynges that were wth hym in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prisoner, yee, and he dyd eate wth hym al his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall iuyng geuen hym of the king of Babilon, euery day a certayn thyng he allowed hym all the dayes of his lyfe vntyl he dyed.

The fyrst Chapter.

It happened after y<sup>e</sup> scari was brought into captiuitie and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremyp the prophet sat weeping and sozowfull bewailed Jerusalem and syghing and howlge with an heyl and howlfull herte, sayde.

As how syttest he cylie so de solate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a widdowe * which was the lady of all nations: howe is she brought vnder tribute, that ruled al landes: she wepeth soze in the nyght, so that y<sup>e</sup> teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that giveth her any comfort * yea, her nexte frendes transgresse against her, and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, because she was despyled: & for serving so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heythen. She fyndeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, take her in strapte places, where she coude not escape. The stretes of Sion mournen, because no man cometh nomore to y<sup>e</sup> solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her prestes make lamentacion, her maydens are caretul: and she her selfe is in greate heynesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered, because the Lord hath chastened her for her great wyckednesse: her chyldren are led awaye captiue before they enemy. All the beauty of the daughter of Sion is awaye: her princes are become lyke hartes that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen awaye before they enemy, so that they haue nomore power.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience: yea, the roye & pleasure that she hath had in tymes past, seinge her people is brought downe thowowe the pow. r of they enemy, and there is nomā for to helpe her, her enemies stande loyng at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scorne. Jerusalem hath sinned euermore and more, therefore is she come in decay. All they that had her in honour despise her, for they haue sene her synfulness. Yea, she sygeth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

Her sayntes are despyled, she remembred not what wolde folowe. therefore is her fall so wondreful, & there is no man to comfort her. O Lord, conspyde my trouble, for myne enemy hath the upperhande: The enemy hath put his hande to all y<sup>e</sup> precious thynges that she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the heythen in and out of the Sanctuary: * whom thou neuertheless hast forgydden to come with in thy congregacion.

* All her people seke to fynd breed with heynesse, and loke what precyous thyng euer man hath, that giveth he for meate, to saue his lyfe. Conspyde, O Lord, and se howe vyle I am become. Haue ye no regarde, O all ye y<sup>e</sup> go far by beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and it bur-nethe them cruelly he hath layed a net for my feet and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

The poke of my transgression is come at the last, wyth his hande hath he takē it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lord hath deliuered me into those handes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lord hath destroyed al the myghty men, that were in me. He hath proclaimed a feast, to slaughter al my best men. The Lord hath troden downe the daughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

* Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush out of water. for the comforte that shoulde quicken me, is farre from me.

My chyldren are dryuen away, for why: the enemy hath gotten the upperhande.

Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man to comforte her. The Lord hath layed the enemies rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominacion in the myddest of them.

* The Lord is ryghtous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and conspyde my deuynes. O maydens and my yonge men are led away into captiuitie.

I called for my louers, but they begyled me: for my prestes and counsellers, but they pershed: euen whyle they sought for meate to saue they lyues. * Conspyde, O Lord: howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my herte turneth about in me, and I am full of heynesse: because I rebelled stubbornely. The sword hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that wyl comforte me. All myne enemies haue herd of my trouble & are glad therof, because y<sup>e</sup> hast done it: and thou hast brought forth y<sup>e</sup> tyme which thou calleddest, when they also shalbe lyke vnto me.

From the shal come all they aduersitie, thou shalt plucke them awaye euen as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wyckednesse. For my sorowe is very great, and my hert is heuy.

The ii. Chapter.

As, how hath the Lord darkened the daughter of Syon so soze in his wrath: & as for the honoure of Israel, he hath cast it downe fro beaue vnto y<sup>e</sup> earth. Howe happened it, yf he remembred not his owne * sote stole whē he was angry: The Lord hath cast downe all the habitacions of Jacob wout any fauour: al the strong places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwe the downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the horne of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hand fro the enemy yea, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, & hath consumed vp all rounde about: he hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy: he hath fastened his ryght hande as an aduersary: and euer thyng y<sup>e</sup> was pleasaunt to se, he hath smytte it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and al his palaces:

* Her tabernacle (whych was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it to passe: & the hye solempne feastes and Sabbothes in Sion are cleane forgotten. In hys heupe dyspleasure hath he made the kynge and preestes to be despyrd.

The Lorde hath forsaken hys owne aulter, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarie, and hath gyuen the wallis of theyr townes into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The Lorde thought to breake downe & walles of the doughter of Syon, he sprede out hys lyue, and dyed not in hys hade: yee he had destroyed them. Therfore moune the turrets and the broken wallis together.

Jer. vii. b

Her gates are souke downe to the ground: her barres are broken, and smytten in sondre. * her kynge and prynces are carryd awaye to & gentyles. They haue neyther lawe nor prophetes, nor yet any vyssion from the Lorde.

Jer. l. a

The senatours of the doughter of Syon sate vpon the grounde in splanse: they haue strawed althes vpon theyr beddes, and gyrded them selues wpth sackcloth. The maydens of Ierusalem haue downe their beddes to & ground. Myne eyes begyn to fayle me thowoe weeping, * my body is dysquieted, my leuer is poured vpo the earth, for the great hurt of my people, sayng & chylde and babes dyd sowne in the stretes of the cytie.

What shall I saye of the, O thou doughter Ierusalem, to whom shall I lyke the? To what shall I compare the, O thou doughter Sion, to comforte the wpyhall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see: who maye heale the?

Stand vpon, and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the nyght, poure out thynne herte lyke water before the Lorde: lyfte up thynne handes for the lyues of thy ponge chylde, that dye of hongre in the stretes. Beholde, O Lorde, and consyde, why hast thou gathered me vpon so cleane?

Shall the women then cate theyr owne frute, euen chylde of a spanne longer? Shall the preestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarie of the Lorde? Ponge & olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and ponge men are slayne wpth the swerde: whome thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yea eue thou hast put them to death, and not spared tem. My neyghbours & are roud about me, haste thou called as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye lefte behynde. Those that I haue brought and nourtysed, hath myne enemye destroyed.

The iii. Chapter:

In the man, that (thowoe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of myserye. He drew me forth, and led me vpon, into darkenesse, but not into lycht. Agaynst me onely he turned hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My fleische and my skynne hath he made olde and my bones hath he brused. He hath byploied rounde about me, and closed me in with gal and trauayle. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be deade for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed hys lynkes vpon me.

Though I crye and cal pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stoped vpon my wayes with four squared stones, and made my pathes croked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Scyre, & as a Lyon in a hole. He hath matted my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath laped me waste altogether. He hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arrowes of hys quyer hath he shot euen into my reynes.

* I am laughed to scoone of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me wpth bytternesse, and gyuen me wormewood to drinke. He hath smytten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

Jer. vii. b

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynge, I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. Remember yet my myserye, and my trouble, the wormewood and the gall.

Yea thou shalt remember them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consydre these thinges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Name ly it is of & Lordes mercyes that we are not vtterly consumed. For truly his pytyful compassion hath not ceased. Howe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the carlye in the daye sprynge, (O Lorde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

Myne eyes tume, and can not cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and conspyde?

Myne eyes breake my herte because of all the daughters of my cytie. Myne enemyes hunted me out sharply, lyke a byrde, yea, and y<sup>e</sup> with out cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O lord, out of y<sup>e</sup> depe pyt. Thou hast herd my voice & hast not turned away thyne eares from my spychynge & cryenge. Thou hast enclined thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) hast mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lord thou hast sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon the. Thou hast wel consydered howe they go aboute to do me harme, and that all theyr counsellies are agaynst me. Thou hast hearde theyr despytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea, and all theyr ymaginacions agaynst me.

Geue them an obstinate herte eue thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) wyth thyne indignacion, and rote them out from vnder the heauen.

Now the fyfth daye of the mo-neth made out the fyfth yere of mynge Ioudins captiuitie. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preast, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Cobar * where the hand of the Lord came vpon hym. And I looked, and beholde, a storme wynde came out of þe North with a great cloud full of fyre, which with his glyste lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all clere lyke the face of an Angell, and as it were the lykenesse of four beastes, and this was theyr lykenesse. They were fastyoned lyke a man: sauyng that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges.

Theyr legges were streyght, but theyr feete were lyke bullockes feete, and theyr glysted, as it had be fyre scouzed metall. Under their win-ges, vpon al the four corners they had mennes handes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were so warde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so that one euer touched an other. When they wold they turned them not aboute but eche one went streight forwarde. Furthermore this was the similitude of theyr faces. * Upon the right syde of these foure, theyr faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wyges of one touched ouer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered theyr bodie. Euery one when it went it went straight forwarde. Where as the spyrite led them, thither they wente, and * turned not about in theyr goyng.

The fastyon and countenance of the bea-burnyng cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: * (this was the vision) and the spere gaue a gly-

When the beastes went forwarde & backward, one wolde haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well consydyed the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, with foure faces also vnto the beastes.

The fastyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were iopned and made (to loke vpon) as it had ben one whele in lyues, bycause of the drouth of the wyl-dernesse.

Our syn is as it had bene byent in an ouen for very soze hungre. The wyues are rauished in Syon, and the maydens in the cyties of Iuda.

The princes are hanged vp with the hand of the enemies, they haue not spared the olde sage men they haue taken yonge mens lyues from them, & the boyes are hanged vp vpon trees. The elders syt nomore vnder the gates, & the yongmen be nomore playing of musyke. The top of our hert is gone, our mery quere is turned into mournig.

The garland of our hed is fallen: alas, that we euer synned so soze. Therefore, our hert is ful of heupnesse, and our eyes dym: bycause of the byll of Ston þe destroyed. Insomuche that þe fores ruine vpon it. But thou, O Lord, that remay-nest for euermore, and thy seate world without ende: wherfore wilt thou stil forget vs, and forsake vs so long? * O Lord turne thou vs vnto þe & so shal we be turned. Reue our dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banished vs now longe ynough, and hast bene soze displeased at vs.

The booke of the pro-phete Ezechiel.

The first Chapter:

The tyme when Ezechiel propheted and in what place his offpoyng and office. The vision of the four beastes The bysson of the wheles. The bysson of the chione and of the pmyge about the chione.

It chanced in the thyrty yere the fyfth daye of the fourth mo-neth, that I was amonge the prisoners by the ryuer of Co-bar where the heuens opened, and I sawe a vision of God.

Now the fyfth daye of the mo-
neth made out the fyfth yere of mynge Iou-mans captiuitie. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the
preast, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Cobar * where the hand of the Lord came vpon hym. And I loked, and beholde, a storme wynde came out of þe North with a great cloud
full of fyre, which with his glyste lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all clere lyke the face of an Angell, and
as it were the lykenesse of four beastes, and this was theyr lykenesse. They were fastyoned lyke
a man: sauyng that euery one had foure faces,
and foure wynges.

Their legges were streyght, but their feete were lyke bullockes feete, and they glysted, as it had be fyre scouzed metall. Under their win-
ges, vpon al the four corners they had mennes handes. Their faces and their wynges were so warde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so that one euer touched an other. When they wold they turned them not aboute but eche one went streight forward. Furthermore this was the similitude of their faces. * Upon the right syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched ouer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their bodie. Euery one when it went it went straight forward. Where as the spyrite led them, thither they wente, and * turned not about in their goyng.

The fastyon and countenance of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, enē as though burnyng cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: (this was the vision) and the spere gaue a glyster, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge.
When the beastes went forward & backward, one wolde haue thought it had lyghtened. Now
when I had well consydyed the beastes, I sawe
a worke of wheles vpon the earth, with foure
faces also vnto the beastes.

The fastyon and worke of the wheles was
lyke the see. The foure wheles were iopned and
made (to loke vpon) as it had ben one whele in an other. When one went forward, they wente all foure, and turned them not aboute in their goynge. They were large, grete and horryble to loke vpon. Their backs were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whither soeuer the spryte went, thither went they also and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them for the spryte of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheles also went, stode styll, and were lyft vp, for the breath of lyfe was in the wheles. A bove ouer the heedes of the beastes there was a firmament, which was fasten'd as it had bene of the mooste pure Ehyssal, and that was spred oute about vpon their heedes: vnder the same firmamente were their wynges layed abrode, one toward an other and two wynges couered the body of euery beaste.

And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greafe waters, as it had bene the noyse of a great God and a rushing toggyther as it were of an hoste of men. And when they stode styll, they lette downe their wynges. Now when they stode styll and had lette downe their wynges, it thundred in the firmament that was a bove their heedes. A bove the firmament that was ouer their heedes, there was the fashion of a seate, as it had ben made of Saphir. vpon the seate there sat one lyke a man. I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre within from his loynes vwarde. And beneth, when I looked vnder hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a burning fyre, that giveth lyght on euery syde. Pea, the wyne and glyster that lyghtened rounde about, was lyke a raynbow, whiche in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glory of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and hearkned vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The ii. Chapter.

The prophete is sent to call the people from their error.

And then sayd he vnto me: Stand up vpon thy feete. O thou son of man, and I wyll talke with the. And as he was communing wme the spirit came into me, and set me up vpon my feete: so that I marked the thing that he sayd vnto me. And he sayd Beholde, thou sonne of man I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people for they haue take part against me, and are runne a way frome, both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

Pea, I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomakes vnto whom thou shalt saye on this maner. This the Lord God by my selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no for it is a froward household they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neyther be afrayed of their wordes for prouokers and thornes are with the. Pea, thou dost dwell amonge scorppions: but feare not they wordes, be not abashed at their lokes, for it is a froward household. Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate.

Therefore, thou sonne of man, obeye thou all thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styf necked, lyke as they are a styf necked household. Open thy mouth, and eate that I gyue the. So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sente vnto me a hande, wherein was closed a booke, & the hande opened it before me, and it was wyrtten within and withoute full of carefull mourninges: alas, and woo.

The iii. Chapter.

The prophet being fed with the word of God and with the constant bo. onesse of the spirite is sent vnto the people that were in captiuitie. The punishment of a curate that leueth not the people their sinnes.

After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eat that, what soeuer it be. yea a rat that boke and go thy way, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel. So, I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate and sayd vnto me. Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eate, & thy bowels shall be fylled with the booke, that I gyue the. Thus the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare or heare not. With that the spirit toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a great rushing and remouynge of the moost blessed glorye of the Lord oute of his place. I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed one agaynst an other. Pea, and the ratlyng of the wheles that were by them, which rushing & noyse was very great. Nowe when the spryte toke me vp, and carryed me awaye, I wente with an heuy and sorrowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

Then take a curtseye of it and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, & burne it in the fyre: Out of the same fyre shal there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel. And so ner thus sayth the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. Is there in the myddest of the hepythen, and nacpons that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgementes more then I Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacpons that lye rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordynances, and not walked in my lawes: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: * For so moche as ye haue bene more augmented in nombre of people, then the hepythen that dwell round about you and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynances, & ye haue not lued so rightously as I hepythen I are round about you. For in the fathers * that be layne to eate theyr owne sones, and I sones theyr owne fathers. Suche a courte will I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte of the will I scatte into all the wyndes.

Wherefore, as truly as I lye (sayth the Lord God) seinge thou hast defyled my Sanctuarie, with all maner of abominacions, and with al thy shamefull offences. For this cause will I also destroye the. Wyne ye shall not ouersee the, neither will I spare the. * One thyde parte within the shall dye of the pestilence and of hungre. Another thyde parte shall be slayne downe, rounde aboute the with the swerde: The other thyde parte that remaineth will I scatte abroad toward all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I will perfourme my indignacyon, and let my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne angre agaynst them, they shal knowe that I am the Lord, whiche with a feruent gelousye haue spoken it. Moreover, I will make the waste and abhorred, before all I hepythen that dwell about the, and in the sight of all them that go by the. So that when I punish the in my wrath, in myne angre, and with the plague of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacyon, shame a gasynge and wondryng stocke, amonge the hepythen that lye about the. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and it shal come to passe, when I shote amonge them the peryllous dartes of hungre, whiche shal be but death. The. vi. Chapter.

It sheweth that the people shal be plagued for the synne of ydolatrie. He prophesieth the repentance of the remnaunt of the people, and theyr deliuerance. The destruction of the towne is prophesied.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophete vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleyes and dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I have wyl byynge a swerde ouer you, and destroye your hys places: I will cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Your slayne men will I laye before your goddes, and the deed carcasses of the chyldren of Israel will I cast before theyr ydolls, your bones will I destroye rounde aboute your aulters and dwelling places.

Jer. 1. folio. a

The cyties shal be desolate, the hyl chapels layed waste: your aulters destroyed and broken your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your temples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane rote out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, how that I am I Lord. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swerde, will I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I will scatte you amonge the nacions. And they that escape of you shal thynke vpon me among the hepythen, where they shal be in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaithfull hertes of theys, wherewith they runne awaye frome: I will breake it. yea, and put out those eyes of theys, that comyt fornicacion with theyr ydolls.

Jer. 1. folio. b

Then shal they be ashamed and displeased with theyr selues, for the wickednes and abhominacions whiche they haue done: and shal learne to knowe that I am the Lord, how that it is not in voyne, I the Lord spake, to byynge suche mysery vpon them. The Lord sayd more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyn handes togyther, & stampe with thy feet, and saye: No worth al the abhominacions and wickednes of the house of Israel, for bycause of them they shal perishe with the swerde, with hungre, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shal dye of the pestilence he that is nye at hande, shal perishe with the swerde: and the other that remaine and that are besieged, shal dye of hungre.

Jer. 1. folio. c

Thus will I satisfy my wrathful displeasure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to knowe that I am the Lord, when your slayne men lye amonge your ydolls, and about your aulters, vpon all hys hylles and toppes of mountanes, among all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes euen in the places where they byd sacrifice to al theyr ydolls. I wil stretch myne hande out vpon them, and will make I lande waste. So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Deblothah forth, thow al theyr habitacions to learne them for to knowe. I am the Lord.

Jer. 1. folio. d

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shal to agayne come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophet is comforted to shewe the summe of the synes that are at hand.

The

A he worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I call. O sone of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cometh vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verely the ende cometh vpon all the four corners of the lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, for I will sende my wrath vpon the, and will punish the according to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thyne abominacions. Myne eye shall not ouersee the, neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thyne abominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, one mysery and plage shall come after an other, the end is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is earlye come agaynst the that dwellest in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is harde by, and the crye shall not be as the soundynge agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortlye pout out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abominacions. * Myne eye shall not ouersee the neyther will I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and thyne abominacions shall be punished in the myddes of the, to lerne you to knowe how that I am the Lorde that smytheth. Behold the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is run out, the rod floppeth, pryde wareth grene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waken to a staffe. None of the shall remayne ouer, none of theyr ryches, not one of theyr seede and no lamentacion shall be made for them.

D The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye: * Whoso byeth, let hym not reioyse: he that sel- let him be sorowful: for why? * Trouble shall come in the myddes of them al: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the thyng that he solde although theyr lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophete was preached vnto all the people, none turned from theyr synne, and none took strength to hym agaynst his wyckednesse, to save his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blow, & make you all ready, but no man shall go to the batayle, for I am wroth withal the whole multitude. The sworde shall be without, pestilence and hūgre within: so that whoso is in the felde shall be slayne with the sworde: and he that is in the cite shall perishe with hūgre and pestilence. And suche as escape, and flee fro among them shall be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doves in the felde: every one shall be afrayed, because of his owne wyckednesse.

A All handes shall be let do done, and all knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gird them selues with sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon the, theyr faces shall be confounded: * and theyr heades balde: theyr syluer shall they cast forth in the stretes, and theyr golde shall be despyled: * Yea, theyr syluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satysfy theyr hūgre by soules neyther fill theyr emptye bellies therewith: For it is become theyr owne decaye thowge theyr wyckednesse. * And theyr beutyfule costly ornaments that God had ordeyned to be theyr greates gloze, in it they haue set vp abominacions vnto theyr ydoles. For this cause will I make the and it to be abhorred. Moreover, I will gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face will I turne from them, my treasury shall be despyled: for the theues shall go in to it, and sprede it. Make a chayne, for the land is whole defyled with vneyghteous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the cite is ful of vylet oppressyon.

Wherefore I will bringe the moost cruel ty- rautes from amonge the hepten, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to cease, and theyr sanctuarie shall be despyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seeke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschance and sorowe shall folowe an other, and one rumoure shall come after an other. * Then shall he seeke bylsons in vayne at theyr prophetes. The law shall be gone from the prestes, and will come from the elders. The kynges shall mourne the prynces shall be clothed with heynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after theyr owne wayes, accordynge to theyr owne iudgements: will I iudge them, to lerne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

The viii Chapter:

(An apperance of the similitude of god: Ezechiel is brought to Jerusaleme in the spirit: & the Lorde sheweth the prophet the ydolatries of the house of Israel, and chastyse of the prestes.)

A Chappened, that in the syxt yere, the xij daye of the syxt moneth, I sat in my house, and the lordes of the cou- sayl of Iuda came to me: and the hande of the Lord god fel vpon me.

And as I looked vp, * I sawe as it were a lyke- nesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes vpwarde: it shyned marvellous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. * This similitude stretched out an hande and toke me by the heere lockes of my heed, and the spyre lyfte me vp betwixt heauen and earth: and brought me in a vision to Ierusalem, into the entrie of the inner porte that lyeth towards the North there stode an ymage, with whom he hath all thynges in his power was very wroth.

And beholde, the gloze of the God of Israel was in the same place: cū as I hadde seene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sone of man, lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North. Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the North, and beholde: besyde the porte northwarde, there was an auter made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the verie entrynge in. And he sayde furthermoze vnto me: Thou sone of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abominacions that the house of Israel comitteth in this place, to dyne me from my sanctuarie? But turne the about, and thou shalt see yet greates pet greater abhominacions. And with þ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, dygge thow the wall. And when I dygged thow the wall beholde, there was a doore. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wycked abhominacions they do here. So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beastes, all poodis and abhominacions of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before the ymages. * I. lodes of the counsel of þ house of Israel, and in the myddst of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Shaphan. And euery one of the had a censour in his hand, and out of the infence there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

E Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, haste thou sene what the senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? * For they saye: Tush, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not þ world. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se pet greater abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doore of the porte of the Lordes house toward the north. And beholde, there sat women mourning for Tanius. Then sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalt se pet greater abhominacions then these are.

And so he brought me into the inward court of the Lordes house. And beholde, at the porte of the Lordes house, betwyxte the fore entre and the aulnar, there were xxv men, that tourned theyr backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces toward the East, and these worshipped the Sunne.

S And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man: thynerth the house of Juda that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacions here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me to anger? Pca and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me: Therefore wyll I also do some thyng in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouersee them, neyther wyll I spare them. * Pca, and though they crye in myne eares with a loud voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

The destruction of the temple, and the conversion of the exiles. They that have been taken are marked. They that are marked are spared. A complaint of the prophet for the destruction of the temple.

E Cried also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, heare ye rulers of þ cytie, euery mā with his weponed hād to the slaughter. Then came there fyre men out of þ strete of the vpper port toward the north, and euery man a wepon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongst them that had on hym a linnen rayment, and a wyters ynkehorne by his syde.

and was come downe to the threhold of þ house and he called the man þ had the linnen rayment vpon him, and the wyters ynkehorne by his side and the Lorde sayd vnto hym: go thy way thow rowe the cite of Ierusalem, and set a marke vpon the forehedes of them that mourne and are sorow for all the abhominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon them, se that ye touch them not: and begynne at my sanctuary. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, & fylled the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth. So they went out, and flue downe thow rowe the cytie. Nowe when they had done þ slayng, and I yet escaped, I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then destroy al the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel & Iuda is very great so that the land is full of blonde and the cytie full of vnfaythfulnesse. For they saye: * Tush, the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therefore wyll I vpon them: myne eye shall not ouersee them neyther wyll I spare them, but wyll recompence theyr wyckednesse vpon theyr bedes. The man that took the burning coles out of the temple, and the wheles of the Cherubims in taken of the burning of Ierusalem. A reburrall of the vpon the wheles, of the house of Israel, and of the Cherubims.

A And as I looked, beholde, in the firma ment that was about the Cherubims there appered þ similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: * Then said he that sat therein, to him that had þ linnen rayment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubims, and take thyne hande full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubims and cast them ouer the cite. And he crept in, that I myght se.

Job. xi. 10

Nowe the Cherubims stode vpon the ryght syde of the house when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the gloze of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubims, and came vpon the thre shelde of the house: so that þ temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the wyne of the Lordes gloze. Pca, and the sounde of the Cherubins winges was herde into the forecourte lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almyghty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubims he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth his hande from vnder the cherubims, vnto the fyre þ was betwene

Job. xi. 10

Betwene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto him that had on the linen rayment in his hande: which toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I sawe also four wheles besyde the Cherubynnes, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precyous stone of Chalsis: yet, (vnto the sight) they were all foure of one fashion, as if one whele had bene in an other.

¶ When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turnynge aboute in theyr goinge.
But where þe first went, thither went they after also, so þe they turned not about in theyr goinge.
Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr han-des and winges: yea, and the wheles also wer al full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I hearde hym say the wheles. * Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a Lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lyf-ted vp aboue. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Eobar. Now when the Cherubins went the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubins spoke theyr winges to lyfte them sel-ues upward, the wheles remayned not behinde but were with them also. Shortelye when they stode these stode also. And when they were lyf-ted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them for the spyrte of lyfe was in the wheles.

* Then the glorie of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flattered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp fro þe earth: so that I sawe when they wente and the wheles with them. And they stode at þe east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorie of the Lord was vpon the
This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Eobar. And I perceyued that it was the Cherubyns. Euerie one had four faces, and euerie one four winges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was euen as I had seene them by the water of Eobar, and so was the countenance of them. Euerie one in his gounge went stryght forwarde.

The. xi. Chapter.

E Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. I gaue these he prophesyeth, warning them how they shalbe dispersed abroad. The returning of the better roweth of God, other to see we not waite in hys commaundmentes.
He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counsaile

And heere, the spirit of the Lord lift me vp, and brought me vnto y<sup>e</sup> east porte of the Lordes house. And be-holde there were. xvj men vnder y<sup>e</sup> doore amonge whom I sawe Jaaznah the sonne of Azur, and Shelephiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of y<sup>e</sup> people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men pynagine my schefe, and a wycked counsaile take they in this cytie, sayinge: Tulse, there is no destruction at hande, let vs buyde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe.

Therefore shalte thou prophesye vnto them: yea, prophesye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lord: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymaginacions of your hertes. Many one haue ye murdered in this cite, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the citye are the flesh, and this cite is the cauldron: * But I wil bringe you out of it: ye haue feared the swerde, and I wyll bringe a swerde ouer you sayth the Lorde God. I wyll deliuer you out of this cite and deliuer you into your enemyes hand, and wyl condempne you. Ye shal be slayne in all the coastes of Israel, I wyll be auenged of you: to lette you to knowe that I am the Lord.
This cite shall not be youre cauldron, neyther shal ye be the flesh therein: but in the coastes of Israel wyl I punyssh you, that you may knowe that I am the Lord: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte hys lawes: * but haue done after the customes of y<sup>e</sup> heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Whelthiah the sonne of Bananiab dyed. Then fel I downe vpon my face and cried w a loude voyce, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then vtterly destroy all the remnant in Israel? And so the worde of the Lord came vnto me on this manner: thou sonne of mā, thy brethren, thy kynnsfolke, and y whole house of Iuda which dwell at Ierusalem, saye: Wylth drawe ye farre from the Lord, for the lande is gyuen vs in possession. Therefore tell thē: Thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll sende you far of among the Gentyles, and scattre you among the nacyons, and I wyll hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell thim also Thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and bryng you from the countreys where ye be scatred, and I wyll gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall come thither. And they shall take away all theyr ydols, and all theyr abominacions from thence. * And I wyll gyue you one herte, and I wyll plant a newe spryte within your bowels.

That stonpe herte wyl I take out of youre bodaye, and geue you a fleschly herte, that ye may walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordynauces, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I yone God. But loke whole hertes are disposed to folowe theyr abhominacions & wicked luynges those mens dedes wyl I bring vpon theyr owne heedes, sayeth the Lord God.
After this did the Cherubins lyft vp theyr win-ges, and the wheles went with them, and y glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of the Lorde went vp from the myddel of the cylie, and stode vpon the mount of the cylie, to-warde the East. * But the wynde toke me vp, & in a vyson (which came by the spirit of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vyson that I had sene banys-hed awaye from me. So I spake vnto the pryso-

And that for bycause: they haue dysceyued my people, * and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it wth loofe claye.

Therefore tell them whyche dawbe it wth vntempered morter, that it shal fall. * For there shal come a great shouer of rayne, great hayle stones shal fall vpon it, & a sore stozme of wynd shal breake it, so shal the wall come downe. Shal it not the be sayd vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it wth all: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyl breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a stozmy wind so that in myne anger there shal come a myghty shouer of rayne, and hayle stones in my wroth, to destroye wythall.

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed wth vntempered morter, I wyl breake it downe, make it euen wth the grounde: so that the foundation therof shal remoue, and it shal fall, yea and ye poure selues shal perishe in the myddest therof: to leaue you for to know, that I am the Lorde. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophesye vnto the cytie of Ierusalem, and loke out vysons of peace for them, wher as no peace is sayeth the Lorde God. Therefore, (O thou sonne of ma, set thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, which prophesy out of their owne hertes and speake thou, prophesy agaynst them and say thus.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder al arme boles, & bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and old to catche soules withal. * For whē ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe and dishonoure me to my people for an handful of barley, and for a peece of bread when ye kylle the soules of them that dye not, & promysse lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people, that belpeth your lyes.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold I wyl also vpo the pyllows, wherewith ye catche the soules in slaying them wyl I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catch slaying. Your bolsters also wyl I teare in peeces, and deliuer me people out of your hande, so that they shal come nomore in your handes to be spoyled and ye shal knowe that I am the Lord. Seyng that with your lyes ye discomforte the hertes of the ryghteous, whom I haue not dyscomforted. Agayne, for so much as ye corage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from hys wycked way and lyue, therefore shal ye spee out nomore vanitie, nor prophesye poure stonye gesynges: for I wyl deliuer my people out of

The xiiii. Chapter.

The Lorde denpeth his wroth to the people for they synnes sake. He despyseth the wroth both the Lorde for as tyme because by false prophetes. A comferte of them that fled into Babylon.

Here resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, these me beare they vnclennes in they hertes, and go purposely vpon the stomblinge blocke of they owne wyckednesse: shulde I then answere at they request? Therefore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israel, that beareth hys vnclane Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to stumbl in his owne wyckednesse and cometh to a prophet, to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe gyue answere, accordyng to the multitude of his Idolles: that the house of Israel may be shamed in they owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for they abominacions sake. Therefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your wyues from your fylthyngnesse, and turne your faces from all poure abominacions.

For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a stranger that sojourneth in Ierail, whyche departeth from me, and carpeyth Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to go styll stumbl ynge in hys owne wyckednesse, and cometh to a prophet, for to aske counceyl at me thowowe hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde gyue answere, by myne owne selfe. Accordyng to the synne of him that asketh, shal the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomore from me thowowe erreure, and be nomore despyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyl stretch out myne hande vpon it, * and destroye al the prouision of they bread and sende death vpon them, to destroy man and beast in the lande. * And though Ioc, Daniel & Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shal they in they ryghteousnesse deliuer, but theyr owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God.

If of I bypunge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thowre the lade: so that I slay downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therein: As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but onely be saued them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my soze indignacion vpon it in bloud, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therein, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neyther sonnes nor daughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr righte conuerses. Wherefore, thus sayth y lord god

Muche more when I sende my * foure troublous plagis vpon Ierusalem the swerde, hon-ger, perillous beastes and pestilence, to destroye man and beast out of it. Beholde there shall be a remnant saued therein, which shall bypunge forth theyr sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall see theyr wape, and what they take in hande; and ye shall be comforted, as touchyng all the plagis that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye see theyr wape and workes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I byd sayeth the Lorde God.

The xv Chapter.

As the prophete is wood of the bypunge tree so cast into the fyre, so sayeth he that Ierusalem shall be burnt.

In the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man: what cometh of the bypne amonge al other trees: and of the wyld bypne stocke amonge al other tymber of the groue

Do men take wood of it, to make any worke wale: Or may there a napele be made of it, to hange any thyng vpon beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be burnt, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it the myddle is burnt to ashes. Is it mete then for a ny worke? No. Sepnge then that it was mete for no worke, bypne whole much: It may then any thyng be made of it, whē the fyre hath consumed and burnt it. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast the bypne into y fyre for to be burnt, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Ierusalem and let my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume the

Treee ryle and 5. b. b. Then shall ye knowe, y I am the Lorde, when I let my face agaynst them, and make the lande wast because they haue so soze offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xvi Chapter.

The prophete intending to speake of the abhominacions of Ierusalem, both by the bypne that is cast into the fyre, and by the bypne that is cast into the fyre, so sayeth he that Ierusalem shall be burnt.

In the worde of the Lorde spake I vnto me saying. Thou sonne of man shew the cytie of Ierusalem their abhominacions, and say: thus sayeth y Lorde God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Chethite, thus was y maner of thy birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, y stryng of thy navel was not cut of: y wast not bathed in water to make y cleane: Thou wast neither rubbed w salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded y so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but y wast vtterly cast out vpon y felde: yea, despyled wast thou in the day of thy byrth. Then came I by y and saw the trodent owne in thyne owne bloud and sayde vnto the. Lyue, although thou be despyled in thyne owne bloud, yea, eue I (I tell the) sayde vnto the lyue, although thou be despyled in thyne owne bloud. So I plated the, as y blof som of y felde thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beuty, thy byests are come vp, thy brece is goodlye growe, where as y wast naked & bare afore.

Howe wyen I wente by the, and looked vpon the: behold, the tyme was come: yea, euen y tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer y to couer thy dishonestye yea I made an oth vnto y * and marped my selfe wyth the (sayth the Lorde God) & so thou becamest myne owne. The washed I the wyth water, and poured thy bloude from the I anoynted the wyth oyle, I gaue the charge of raymentes, I made the shoes of Carusleny & I gyrded the about wyth whyt spike: I clothed y wyth kercheffes, I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heade, eare rynges vpon thyne eares, & set a beutyfule crowne vpon thyne heed. Thus wast thou decked wyth syluer and gold, & thy rayment was of fyne whyte spike of needle worke, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydest eat nothyng but sumnells, honye and oyle maruelous goodly wast y and beutyfule: yea euen a very quene wast thou.

In so muche y thy beuty was spoken of amonge the bythen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty which I put vpon the, sayth y Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beuty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast comytted whoredome wyth al that wente by y, and hast fulfilled theyr despyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of diuers colours, & decked thyne altares therewith, wherupon thou myghtest fulfill thyne whoredome, & and of such a talion, as neuer was done, nor shall be. The goodly ornametes & iewels which I gaue the of myne owne gold & syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and comytted whoredome wyth hall.

Thy garmentes of dynerse colours haste thou taken, and decked them therewith myne oyle and incense haste thou sette before theym.

Thy meate wherby I gaue the, as sumnells, oyle, honye, to fede the wyth hall that hast y set before them them for a sweete sauour. And thus came also to passe sayeth the Lorde God. * Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes and daughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered by vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a smal whoredome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou sleyst my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be byrente vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominacyōs and whoredomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy yowth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and trodest downe in thyne owne blonde. After all these thy wpekednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde) (thou hast builded thy steeves and bybel houses in euery place) Thou hast buylt hye places: yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aultare.

 Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thyne whoredome. * Thou hast comytred fornicacyon with the Egyptians thy neygneours, whiche had muche fleshe. and thus hast thou encreased thine whoredome, to anger me. Behold, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer the, and dyd *myne the thy store of fode, & deli-uered the ouer into the wylls of the Philistines thyne enemyes, whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable waye.

Eze. xxiij. 17. * Thou hast played the whore also wth the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: Yea, though I slay them, with them played the harlot, and yet haddest not thou enough. Thus haste thou furthermore corrupted thy fornication fro the land of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy luste not satisfied. How obstinate is thyn heart! sayeth the Lorde God, seynge thou dost all these workes of an errant whore: buyldynge thy steeles at the heade of euery streete, and thy bzyll houses in all places? Thou hast not ben as another whore that holdeth scoone of a small rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh othe in steade of her husbande. Gyftes are gyue to al other whores, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to corrupte fornicacion with thee. It is come to passe wth the in thy whoredoms contrary to the vse of other women: yea, there hath no such fornicacion bene committed after the, seynge þ thou proferest gyftes vnto othe, and no rewarde is geuen the: thus is a contrary thinge.

Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God. For so much as thou hast sette forth thy yowth to whoredome and dyscouered thy thame, thowwst thy whoredome wpth al thy louers, and with al the ydoles of thy abhominacions in the bloude of thy chyldren, * Whome thou hast geuen them. Beholde, therefore I wyl gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy selfe come: yea and all them whome thou fauourest, & euery one that thou hatest I wyl, I saye, gather them together rounde about the: * and wyl dyscouer thy thame before the: & they they may see al thy fylthynes

210. 179. 8 * Moreover, I doe iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompence the thine owne bloud in wrath & gelousy I wil geue the ouer into theyr power, & shall breake downe thy stues, and destroye thy broadell houses: they shall strype the out of thy clothes, all thy sayre & beutyful Jewels shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked & bare. * yee, they shall byng the comen people vpon the which shall stone the and slay the downe wyth theyr swerdes. They * shall burne vp thy houses, and punyssh the in the syght of many women. Thus wyl I make thy whordom to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no more wardes. Shuld I make my wrath to be styll, take my gelousye fro the, be contente and no more to be dyspleased: seyng thou reme-berest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyl byng thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, sayth the Lord God: howbeit I neuer dyd vnto the accordyng to thy wyckednes and all thy abhomyacions. Beholde, al they p vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the suche a mother, such a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husbände and her chyldren: Yea, thou art the syster of thy sisters, which for loke theyr husbändes and theyr chyldren. Your *mother is a Cethye, and your father an Amo 230. fol. a rite Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she & her doughters shal dwel vpon thy left hande.

But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy ryght hāde is Sodomā and her daughters. Yet halte þ not walked after theyꝝ wayes, noꝝ done after theyꝝ abhominaciōs: but thou stobest a ly-tel and veyꝝ smal tyme, and in all thy wayes þ hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God: Sodomā thy syster with her daughters, hath not done so euell, as þ and thy daughters. Beholde, * the synnes of thy syster Sodomā were these: Wyꝝde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce and ydelnesse these thynges had she and her daughters. Wylfynges that they reachyd not theyꝝ hande to the poore and nedye, but were proud, and dyd abhominable thinges befoze me: theꝝfoꝝe I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Neither hath Amaria done halfe of thy synnes, * yea thou hast exceded the in wyꝝked-nesse: In so muche that in comparyson of all the abhominacions which thou hast done thou hast made thy sisters good women. Therfoꝝe thou (which didest condempne thy syster) beare thyn owne shame, foꝝ thynne owne offences, that thou hast comytted, moꝝe obhominable then they dyd which in dede are moꝝe ryghteous then thou art be thou (I say) ashamed, and beate thy shameful rebuke: sepyng that thou hast proued thy sisters in comparyson of the ryght wyse.

As for theꝝ captiuitie, namely the captiuitie of Sodoma, and her daughters: ꝑ captiuitie of Samarita & her daughters: I wyl brynge the a gayne, so wyl I also brynge agayne thy capti-uitie amonge them: that thou mayst take thine owne confusio[n] vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, & to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters Samarita and her daughters with thy self and thy daughters shalbe broughte agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and befoze thy wyckednes came to lyght: þu woldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyl the tyme that the Syrians wyth al the p<sup>r</sup>inces, and the Philistynes with all that lye rounde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusioun: that thou myghtest heare thine owne spylthines and abhominacion sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God, I shulde (by ryght) deale wyth the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyled the oth, and broken the couenaunt: Nevertheless, I wyll remember the couenaunt that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shalbe an enclaspynge couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whiche I wil make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunte. * And so wyll I reneue my couenaunt wyth the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord, that þu mayst thynke vpon it: be ashamed, & excuse thine owne confusioun no more: when I haue forgouen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

The .xvii. Chapter.

The parable of the two figes.

In the worde of þe Lorde: came vnto me sayng: Thou son of man: put forth * a parable, vnto the house of Israel, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. There came a great fige tree wth great wynges: yea, wth a myghty longe body, & full of fethers of dyuers colours vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke the hycht braunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and carped it into þe lande of Canaan, and set it in a cite of marchautes. He toke also of the seede of the lande, & planted it in a fruteful grounde, he broughte it vnto great waters, & set it as a willow tree ther by. The byrd it growe, and was a great vyne stock, but lowe by the grounde whose braunches turned into it selfe, and the rootes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossoms, & spred out braunches.

But there was another fige tree, a greete one, whiche had great wynges & many fethers: and beholde, the rootes of this vyne had an hoget after hym, & spred out hys braunches toward him: that he myght water her wyth þe orchard that he had planted. Nevertheless, it was platted vpon a good grounde besyde great waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly vyne.

Speake thou therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Shal thys vyne prosper? shal not hys rootes be plucked oute, hys frute be broken of, hys grene braunches wyther and fade awaye yea, without ether ströge arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by þe rootes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosper therfore? shal it not be dryed vp and wythered: yea, cucn in þe outpyng out of his blossoms, as one as þe east wind bloweth?

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayng: Speake to þe froward household:

knowe ye not, what these thynges do synifye? Tell them. Behold, * I kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kyng and his p<sup>r</sup>inces, and led them to Babilon. He toke of the kynges seide, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of hym: The p<sup>r</sup>inces of the lande toke he wyth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and fulfill it. But he fell from hym, and sente hys ambassytours into Egypte, that he myghte haue horses and muche people.

Shulde that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth suche thynges? Shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, he shall dye at Babilon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, & made hym kyng. whose othe he hath despyled, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neyther shall Pharao wyth hys great host and multitude of people, mayntayne hym in the war: whiche they call by dyctes, & set vp bulworkes to destroye muche people: for seynge he hath despyled the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I wyll bypunge myne othe þe hath despyled, and my couenaunt that he hath broke vpon hys owne heade. * I wyll cast my nette aboute hym, and catch hym in my parne. To Babilon wyll I carry hym, there wyll I punyssh him because of the great offence that he made me. As for those that fle from hym out of the host, they shalbe slayne wyth þe sword. The residue shal be scatered towardes al the wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyll set it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plante it, that it may bypunge forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that all manner of foules maye buyde in it, and make theyr nestes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, & set the lowe tre vp: that I haue dryed vp þe grene tree, & made the drye tre to flouryssh. Euen I the Lorde þe spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The .xviii. Chapter.

Be sheweth that euery man that keere hys shynge syn. To hym that amendeth is saluacyon promysed. For he is prophesied to the righteous, whiche turneth bakke from the right waye.

In the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: what mane ye by thys comen prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayenge. * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chyldrens tethe are set on edge. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse thys byworde no more in Israel. Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shal dye. * Yf a man be gowly, and do the

do the thyng that is equal and right, he eateth not upon the hylls: he lyftech not hys eyes vp to the foule ydols of Israel: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe: he medleth wyth no meſtrous woman: he greueth no bodie: he gyueth hys better hys pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence. * he parteth hys meat wth the hungry: he cloreth the naked: * he lendereth not vnyng upon vsury, he taketh nothyng ouer: he withdraueth his hand from doyng wronge: he dealeth faythfully betwene man and man: & walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faythfully.

¶ If he nowe get a sonne, that is a murtherer, a shedder of bloude: yf he do one of these thynges * (though he do not all) he eateth upon the hylls: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and neddy: he robbeth and spyleth: he greueth not the better hys pledge agayne, he lyftech vp hys eyes vnto ydols: and medleth wyth abhominable thynges: he ledech upon vsury, & taketh moreouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seyng he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloud shall be vpon him.

¶ Nowe yf this mā get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, whych he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not upon the mountaynes, he lyftech not his eyes vnto the ydols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vereth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spyleth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat wth the hungry: cloreth the naked: he oppressech not the poore: he receauech no vsury, nor any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for hys father, because he oppressed and spyled his brether, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is dead in his owne syn. And yet saye ye: Whether then shuld not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? Therefore, because the sonne hath done equitie and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therefore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth shall dye.

¶ * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence: neyther shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnesse of the righteous, shall be vpon hym, and the wyckednesse of the wycked shall be vpon hym selfe also. * But yf the vngodly wyll turne a waye from al hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes and do the thyng that is equal and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, & not dye. As for al hys synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in hys ryghteousnesse that he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, sayth the Lorde God, but rather yf he couerte & lyue? Agayne: yf the ryghteous turne a waye from his ryghteousnesse, and do iniquite, accordyng to al the abhominacions, that yf wycked man doth: shall he lyue? Al the ryghteousnesse that he hath done shall not be thought vpon:

but in the faute that he hath offended wythal, & in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saye. Whether the waye of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde is not indifferent. Hear therefore ye house of Israel. It is not my way ryght? Are not your waies rather wycked? * When a ryghteous man turneth a waye from his ryghteousnesse, & medleth wyth vngodlynesse: he must dye therein. Yea, for the vngodlynesse that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne, * when the wycked mā turneth a waye from his wyckednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thyng whych is equal & ryght: he shall saue hys soule alpyue. For in so muche as he remembreth hym selfe, and turneth him from al the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shall lyue and not dye.

And yet sayth the house of Israel. Whether the waye of the Lorde is not equal. Are my waies vngodly? O ye house of Israel! Are not your waies rather vnequal? As for me I wyll iudge euery mā, accordyng to hys waies. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God * Whether ye be conuerted and turne you cleane fro al your wyckednesse so that there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye from you al your vngodlynesse, yf ye haue done: * make you new hertes and a new sperte. Whether wyll ye dye. O ye house of Israel: seyng: I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The xix. Chapter.

¶ The captiuitie of Ierobabam and of Iehoachin is signified by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prospecte of the ctyte of Ierusalem that is past, and yf myerie thereof that is present.

Ilt thou sonne of mā moune thou for the pyneers of Israel, and say. Whether toze lay thy mother yf lyonelle amonge the lyons, and nourished her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon, it learned to spyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto y<sup>e</sup> lade of Egypt.

¶ Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: whych wente amonge the lyons, and became a farse lyon: learned to spyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made th<sup>em</sup> y<sup>e</sup> yeries waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thyng therein, were utterly desolate, thowrowe the very voyce of hys roaryng.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst him, layd their nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr yttre. So * they bounde hym wyth cheynes, and broughte hym to the kyng of Babylon: whych put hym in prison, that hys voyce shulde no more be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, plated by y<sup>e</sup> water syde: her frutes and brāches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so strōge that men myght haue made stauess thereof for speeres: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

The Lorde doth say that he will visit them when they praye for the offence of unkyndnesse whiche he here obiect-eth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from capti-vite. By the word that shal be deliuered, is signified the bur-ninge of Iherusalem.

In the seventh yere the tenth daye of the seventh moneth, * it happened, that certaine of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto me on thys manner: Thou son of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hither to aske any thinge at me? As trulie as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll geue you no answer. Wylte thou not reprove them (thou sonne of man) wylte thou not reprove them?
Shewe them the abominacions of theyr forefathers and tell them.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, & lyft vp myne hande vpon the seide of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, when I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, & sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to brynge them out of the lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had prouy-ded for them, which floweth with mylke and ho-ny, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other.

Then sayd I vnto them. * Cast a waye euerye man the abominaciōs that he hath before him and desyle not your selues wyth the ydolles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and wold not folowe me: to caste a waye euery man the abho-minaciōs of his eyes, and to forsake the ydolles of Egypte. Then I made hym to poure myne in-dignacion ouer them, and to satysfye my wrath vpon them: yea, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wold not do it: for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I shewed my selfe vnto them, & I wold brynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had carped them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed the my lawes, * whiche who so kepeth shal lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me & them, & therby to know that I am the Lorde, whiche halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernesse, they wold not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (whiche who so kepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indig-nacion vpon them: and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wold not do it, for my names sake, lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the whiche I had carped them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse that I wold not brynge them into the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth wyth mylke & hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabboths, for their hert was gone after their ydolles. Neuertheles, myne eye spared them, so that I wold not utterly slaye them, & consume them in the wyldernesse. Moreover, I said vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordinances, & desyle not your selues wth theyr ydolles for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, halowe my Sabbornes, * for they are a token betwixt me and you, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde your God. Notwithstandinge, they sonnes rebelled agaynst me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll them, which he that doth shal lyue in the nether halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out myne indignaci-on ouer them, & to satysfye my wrath vpon them in the wyldernesse. Neuertheles, I withdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vn-halowed amonge the heathen, before whom I had brought them forth: I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wold scatter them amonge the heathen, and strowe them amonge the nations, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabboths, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers ydolles. Wherefore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, & lawes chorowe the whiche they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes: (when I appoynted for my selfe all theyr fyfth bozne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God.) Besyde al thys your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had broughte them into the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euerye hyll and al the thicke trees they made there theyr offerpnges, and prouoked me wyth theyr oblations, makynge sweete sauour there, & poured out theyr dynner offerpnges.

Then I asked them what is the hyll altare that ye go to it? And therefore is it called the hyll place vnto thys daye. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde god ye are euen as vncleane as your forefathers, and compt whoredome also wth theyr abhominaciōs.
In all your ydolies, wherunto ye brynge your oblations, * & to whose honour ye burne your chyldezen

Is truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme and with indignacion pow-red out vpon you. and wyl bypunge you into the wyldernesse of the people, and there I wyl rea-your forefathers in the wyldernesse of Egypte, so wyl I punish you also, sayeth the Lorde God I wyl bypunge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The fors-akers also and the transgressours wil I take fro amonge you, and bypunge them out of the lande they shal not come in it: that you maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Go to nowe then (sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel. * Euery one of you folowe your ydolies, and serue them, sayng ye refuse to obey me. And my polyp name shal ye nomore viha-

I wyl accepte poure swete sauoure, when I bypunge you from the nacions, and gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye be scattered: that I may be halowed in you before the heathen and that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde whych haue brought you into the lande of Israel: yea, into the same lade, that I swore to geue vnto your forefathers. There shal ye call to re-membraunce your owne wapes and al poure p-maginacions, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and * ye shal iudge your selues worthy to be destroy-

And ye shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I entreat you after my name, not after your wicthe worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde god Beholde I wyl kindle a fyre in the, that shal consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shal be able to quenche his flame, but al that lo-keth from the south to the north, shal be brente thercin. and all flethe shal se, that I the Lorde haue kindled it, so that no man may quenche it.

Then sayde I: O Lorde, they wyl saye of me:

* Tufhe, they are but fables, that he telleth. Item 17. b.

The xxi. Chapter.

The threateneth the swerde, that is to saye, destruction to the cite of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of henge se-daiab. He is commaunded to prophete the destruction of the chyliden of Ammon. After the slaughter of othet, at the laste the Lorde threateneth death vnto Saurhodonele bym selfe.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, I sayenge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuary, and prophecy agaynst the lande of Israel, say to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl vpon the, and wyl drawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghteous and the wycked. Seyng the that I wyl rote out of the both the ryghteous & wy-ked, therfore shal my swearde go oute of my sheath agaynst all flethe from the North to the South: that al flethe may knowe how that I the Lorde haue drawen my swearde out of my sheath and it shal not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou son of man) that thy loynes cracke wthal, yea mourne bytterly for them in theyr pyssence. And yf they saye: wherfore mournest thou? Then tell them: for pyssences that cometh, at the whyche al hertes shal melte, all handes shal be lerten downe, all stomaches shal faynte, and all knees shal waxe feble. Beholde, it cometh and shal be fulfilled sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophete, and speake. Thus sayth the Lorde God, speake. The swearde, the swearde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be byght. Shal we then make myth? Agaynst the trybe of my sonne it is gone forth destroyng al trees. he hath put his swearde to the dyghtpyng, that good hold may be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened and dyghte, that it maye be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer. Crye, (O thou sonne of man and houle, for thys swearde shal smyte my people, & al the rulers in Israel,) my people shal be feared thorowe this swearde. Smyte therfore vpon thy thygh, for it is gone forth to make a tryall.

And what a tryall shal this be, when euen my scepter shal be repyoued? It shal not be sayth the Lorde God. Prophete thou sonne of man, and smyte thyne handes together. make the swearde two edged, yea, make it thre edged & manslayers swerd that swearde of the great slaughter, which shal smyte the, euen in theyr pyssence. to make them abashed & faynt at the hertes, and in al gates to make some of the fal. I haue gyuen & fearful swearde. O how byght & sharpe is it, howe well dyght and mete for the slaughter? Set the some place alone, ether vpon my right hande or on the left, whither so euer thy face turneth I wyl smyte my handes together also and satisfie my wrauthful indignacion: Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it. The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne sayng: Thou son of man, make .ii. ststrete chose out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swerde maye come towarde khabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cite of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babilon shal stande in the turnynge of the waye, at þ heade of the two stretes: * to aske counsel at the sothsayers, callynge the lottes with his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ppolle, and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothsayenge shal point to the ryght syde vppon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of watre to smyte it with a great nysle, to cpe out alarū to set battel rāmes agaynst the gotes, to graue vp dyches, and to make bulwokes.

¶ Nevertheless, as for the sothsayenge, they shal holde it but for vanite. And esteeme them as those to whome they haue often swoyne: Notwithstandynge he shal remember theyr wycked-Therefore sayth the Lorde God. For so much as ye pour selues the we pour offence, and haue opemen maye se your synnes: therefore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shalbe taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked guyde of Israel, whose dape is come: euen the tyme that wyckednesse shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. take a waye the garlande, and put of the crowne, and so is it a waye: the hūble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Dūp the pūp, h pca, pūp th them wyl I, and destrope them and that shal not be fulfylld vntyl he come, to whō the iudgemente belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) pro-phete, and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God to the chyldren of * Ammon, and to theyr blasphemmy, speake thou. The swerde, the swerde is drawen forth already to the slaughter, and scoured to consume, that it glysteth (because thou haste loked the out vanities, & propheted lyes that it maye come vpon thy necke lyke as vpon the other yngodly, which be slayne whose dape cam when theyr wy. kednesse was ful.

Shulde I put it vp agayner? Naye I wyl pu-nysh the, in the lade where thou wast noyshed and borne, and poure myne indignacion vpon þ and wyl blowe vpon the in þ fyre of my wraoth, and delouer þ vnto cruel people, whych are leaned to destrōp. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shalbe shedde in the lande, that þ mayest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for mannanghet, and denyng the honoure vnto theyr fathers & mothers, and ether wyckednesse. Of the wycked doctrine of the false prophetes and pcesse, and of theyr vncharitable couetousnesse. Of the pnyng of rulers, the wyckednesse of the people.

¶ Now, the word of the Lorde came vnto me and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprove this bloud thur-lyer? Shewe them theyr abomi-nacions, and tel them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: O thou Cytie, that shedddest bloud in the myddest of the, that thy tyme may come also: & makest the ppolles to despyle the wtrial. Thou hast made thy selfe gyltye, in the cloude þ thou hast shed: and despyed the in the ppolles, which thou hast made. Thou haste caused thy dayes to drawe nye, and made the tyme of thy peres to come. Therefore wyl I make the to be confounded amonge the heathen, and to be despyed in al the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shal laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte ful of myschefe. Beholde, þ rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloude in the. * In the haue they despyed father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the strainger, in þ haue they vered the wpydowe, and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyed my Sanctuary, and vnhalowed my Sabboth. Furtherers are there in the, that shed bloude, and eate vpon the hylls, and in the they vse abominacion.

* In the haue they dyscouered theyr fathers shame: in the haue they vered women in theyr sykenesse. Euery man hath dealete shamefully with his neyghbours wyfe, and abominably despyed his daughter in lawe. In the hath euery man forced his owne syster, eue his fathers doughter yea * gyltes haue bene receyued in the to wedde bloude: Thou hast taken vsurp and en-crease, thou haste oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I haue synpten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse, that thou hast vled, and vp-on the bloude whych hath bene shed in the.

Is thy herte able to endure it, or may thy hādes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shal brynge vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyl brynge it also to passe. * I wyl scatter the amonge the heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, and wyl cause thy fylthynesse to ceasse out of the. Yea, and thou shalt be thyne owne inheritaunce and not myne in þ syght of the heathen, that thou maist knowe, that I am the Lorde. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israel is turned to dross. Al they that shulde be brylle, tynne, yron, and leade are in þ fyre become dross. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde god

For so muche as ye al are turned into dross beholde: I wyl brynge you together vnto Jerusalem, lyke as spluer, brylle, yron, tyn, and lead are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blo-wen there vnder to melte them. Euen so wyl I gather you, put you in tegether, and melte you in my wraoth and indignacion. I wyl brynge you together, and kindle the fyre of my displeasure vnder you, that you maye be melted therin. Lyke as the spluer is melted in the fyre, so shal ye also be melted therein, that ye may know howe that I the Lorde haue powred my wraoth vpon you, and the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vncleane land, which is not rayned vpon in the day of the cruel wraoth: * thy prophetes þ

¶ The xxiii. Chapter.

¶ Of the fornicacion that is to saye of the adulterous Samaria and Iherusalem. vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibab. In comyn arisynge of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacion of Iherusalem is the feyther. And destruction of Iherusalem is prophesied. The aduocacy of both the whorres founde out. The destruction.

Ezech. xx. a

A The word of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, there were two women, that had one mother, these (whiche they were ponge) began to playe the harlottes in Egypt. There were theyr brestes brused, & the pappes of theyr maydenheede by the Egyptians destroye. The eldest of them was called Oholah, & her yonger syster Oholibab. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes & daughters. Their names were Samaria, and Iherusalem. As for Oholah she began to go a whoring when I had taken her to me. * She was set on fyre vpon her loners the Assirians as her neyghbours which had to do with her, euen the princes and lordes that were dect in costly aray, layr ponge men, lustye ryders of horses.

Ezech. xx. b

Thus thorowe her whordome, she cleued vnto al the pong men of Assiria. Psa, she was made vpon them, and desyled her selfe with all theyr ydols. Neither ceased she from the fornicacion that she vsed w the Egyptians for in her youth they lay with her, they brused the brestes of her maydenheede, and poured theyr whordome vpon her. Therefore * I deliuered her into the handes of her loners: euen y assirians whiche she so loued. These discovered her shame, toke her sonnes and daughters, & slayd her w the sword. A new name gat she of all her people, and they punished her.

Ezech. xx. c

* Her syster Oholibab sawe this, and desyred her selfe with inordinate loue, more than she, and exceeded her syster in whordome. * She loued the Assirians (whiche also laye with her) namely the princes, and greates lordes, that were clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell al lusty horsemen and fayre ponge persons.

Ezech. xxx. b

Then I sawe, that they both were desyled a-lyke. But she increased styll in whordome for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with frell colours, with fayre gyrdles about them, & goodly bonettes vpon theyr heedes, lokyng all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babylonians, and Chaldees in theyr owne lande where they were borne) immediately, as soone as she sawe them, she bzent in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and desyled her with theyr whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them * her whordome and shame was discovered and sente: then my hert forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her sister also. Nevertheless, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherein she had played the harlote in the lande of Egypte. * She bzent in luste vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses, and theyr seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast reuered the fylthynes of thy youth, when thy louers brused thy pappes, and manred thy brestes in Egypt.

Therefore (O Oholibab) thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll rayse vpon thy louers, with whome thou hast satisfied thy lust agaynst the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely, the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men and tyrauntes, with all the Assirians, all ponge and fayre louers, princes and lordes, knyghtes & gentle men, whiche be all good horsemen. These shall come vpon the with horses, charrettes, and a great multitude of people: which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde: with brest plates, shylles and helmettes: I wyll punish the before the: yea, they them selues shall punish the according to theyr owne iudgement. soeuer it be to þe botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scozne, and had as greatye in derision, as is possible. The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not reprocure Sholah and Sholibah: Shewe them theyr abhominaciōs namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, and staped theyr handes with blonde yea, euen with theyr ydolles haue they comypted aduoutry * and offred them by the fyre theyr owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had bozne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also they haue defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and haue vnhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had staped their chyldren for theyr ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it.

So, thus haue they done in my house: Besyde all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men out off farre countreys: and when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thyne eyes with colours trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spread before the, wher vpon thou hast set myne

O al ye þe loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, iudge them, punyssh them * as aduouters and murtherers, ought to be iudged and punysshed. Theyr shall slay their sonnes and doughters and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Thus wyl I destroy all suche fylthynesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your vncleynesse.

The. xliii. Chapter.

In the nyynth yere, in the teth moneth the tenth daye of the moneth came þe word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wyte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. Shewe that obstinat household * a parable and speake vnto the Thus sayth the Lorde God: Get the a * pot, set it on, and powder water into it: put all the peeces togyther in it all the good peeces: the lopne and the quidre and spl it with the best bones. Take one of þe best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therein. With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy ctyte of þe pot, where vpon the rustynesse hangeth, & is not yet seoured away. Take out the peeces that are in it one after an other: there neede no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Tyd a playne drye stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne drye stony rocke, bicause it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bring my wrathful indignacion and vengeance vpon her.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto that bloudy ctyte, for whom euen I my selfe wyl make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & spye the pot, so þe very bones shall be bzene. Moreover, I wyl set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metall shall be bzene, and molten also for heate, and the filthynesse of it shall be molten in it, and the drossle of it shall be consumed. Thou takest great payne this to defyle thy self And it wyl not be purged from the excedyng drossle in it: but thozowe fyre shall the drossle of it be purged. In thy filthynesse euen in the mischeuous dedes thou dost contynue, and bicause thy filthynesse is abhominable, for I haue clesed the but thou art not clesed. Thou shalt not be purged from thyne vncleynesse til I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpon the. Euen I þe Lord haue so deuyled. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyl do it: I wyl not goo backe, I wyl not spare, I wil not be entreated: but according to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punysshed: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man beholde, I wyl take away the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vse no dedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonnet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bzede. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mynyng, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morninge, I did as I was comaunded, and þe people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifieth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God. beholde, I wyl suspende

The worde of the Lord byen the sonnes of Ammon, which receyved at the fall of Iherusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seir. agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistines.

The word of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynst the * Ammonites, prophesy vnto them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the word of the Lord God. Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarie. Aha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl deliuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possession: they shall set theyr castles and houses in the. They shall eat thy frute, and drynke vnto thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stall for camels and of Ammon a shepfold: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord.

23 For thus sayeth the Lord God In somoche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy feet. yea, reuered in thyne heart ouer the lande of Israel with despite: beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer the, to be spoyled of the hepten, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I wyl make the to be layd wast, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For somoche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Iuda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be.

Therfore beholde, I wyl open the syde of Moab, and take away theyr strength theyr cities, and cheefe coostes of theyr lande, which are the pleasures of thy countrey. As namely, Bethieimoth, Baalmon, and Cariathaim, these wyl I open vnto them of the east, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, and wyl geue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembraunce amonge the hepten.

Euen thus wyl I punyssh Moab also that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lord God. Because that * Edom hath auenged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Iuda, & hath done great offence, and auenged hym selfe vpon them therefore thus sayth the Lord: I wyl reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Teman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shall be slayne with the swerde: & thowowe my people of Israel wyl I auenge me agayne vpon Edom, they shall handle hym accordyng to my wrath and indignaciō, so that they shall knowe my vengeance sayth the Lord God.

Thus sayth the Lord God: For somoche as the * Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeance with despitefull stomaches, and of an olde euill wyl set them selues to destroye, therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause al the remnant of the see coast to perishe. A great vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and punyssh them cruelly: that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord which haue auenged me of them.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophet is moued to bewaile the desolation of Tyre. He telleth vnto the people of Tyre for the hauyng of marchauntes there.

I The word of the Lord came vnto me saying O then son of man, make a lamentable cōplaynt vpon * Tyre and saye vnto Tyre thou which art a port of the see, that occupiest with moche people, and many ples thus speaketh the Lord God, O Tyre, thou hast sayde what I am a noble citie, thy borders are in the myddest of þe see, and thy buylders haue made the marvelous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of þe mount Sanyr. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make þe malkes, and the oaks of Balan to make the towers.

Here. xxi. a
f. viii. b

B Thy borders haue they made of puer, and of costly wood out of þe yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small needle worke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maste and thy hangynges of pelowe sylke, purple, out of the yles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Ar-nard were thy maryners, and þe wysest in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wysest at Sebal were they that amended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the see with theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundysse in the. The Perses, Libians & Phutens were in thyne host, and helped the to fyghe, these hanged vpon theyr shylde and helmettes with the, these set for the thy beautye.

They of Arnad were with thyne hoost rōnde aboute thy walles, and the Pygmians were thy watchmen vpon thy towers, these hanged vpon theyr quyers rōnde aboute the walles, and made þe marvelous goodly. Charis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne and leade, and made thy market greete. Iauan Tubal, & Mesek were thy marchauntes, which brought the men and ornaments of metall for thy occupiing. They of the house of Togarmah brought vnto the at þe tyme of thy marke, horse, horsmen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other yles that occupied with the, brought the wethers, elephant bones, and peacockes for a present. The Sittians occupied with the because of thy dyuers workes, and increased thy marchaundysse, with smaragdes with scarlet, with needle worke, with whyte linnen cloth, with sylke, and with chrystall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied with the, and brought vnto thy markettes wheat of wheat, and baneg, balm, honny, oyle, and frigate. Damascus also used marchaundysse with the in the best wyne of Hebron, and with wool because thy occupiing was so greete, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Mesek, haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron redy made, with Cassia and Calamus, according to thyne occupiing. Dedan occupied with the in saye tapestry worke and cuspyns. Arabia, and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with the, in shepe, wethers, and gootes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Kema haue occupied also with the, in all costly spyes, in all pcyous stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Haran Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Affria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occupied with the. In costlye rapmente of pelowe sylke, and needle worke ( verye pcyous, and therfore pacted and bounde togyther with ropes.) Yea, and in cedre wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shyppes of Charis were the cheefe of thy occupiing.

Thus thou art ful, and in great wozshyppe, even in the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shall bringe the into greete waters, the east wynde shall ouerbeare the in the myddest of the see, so that thy wares, thy marchaundysse, thy ryche, thy maryners, thy shypmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupiers ( that brought the thynges necessarye ) the men of war that are in the, and al the comens that percyth in the myddest of the see, in the daye of thy fall: The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of the shypmen.

All

All wher y men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botcs, and set the selues vpon the lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce bycause of the & make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr hedes, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and put sackcloth vpon them for thy sake.

E They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorrowe and heuy lamentation. yea, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundise came from the sees: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of the earth hast thou made ryche, thow we the multytude of thy wares & occuppyng. But thou art now cast downe into the drepe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perswaded with the. All they that dwell in the ples are abashed at the, and all thy kynges are afrayed: yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchautes of the nations wondze at the. In that thou arte so cleane brought to noughte and comest nomore vp.

cynt, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle and gold. The beauty and the holes be in the, were set forth in the daye of thy creation. Thou art a fayre Cherub, exalted by the annoynting, stretched wyde out for to couer. I haue set the in this dignitie vpon the holy mount of god there hast thou ben, & walked amonge the fayre glystryng stones. From the tyme of thy creatiō thou hast ben ryght excellent, till wyckednesse was founde in the. * Because of thy great malice chaundyse, thyne herte is ful of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore will I cast the fro the mount of God (thou couerynge Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glystryng stones. Thy herte was proude in thy fayre beautye, and thow thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wysdome: I will cast the downe to the grounde, and that in the syght of kynges. Thou hast defyled thy sanctuary with the great wyckednesse of thy vnryghteous occuppyng. I will byynge a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the, and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all them that loke vpon the. # The Prophecye of Egypte, I wyl upon the thou great dragon that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest, the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I wyl put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that, I wyl drawe the out of thy waters: yea, and al y fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wyl call the out of the drye lande, with the fysh of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde.

W Thou shalt not be gathered nor taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, & for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypte maye knowe: that I am the Lord. By cause thou hast ben a staffe of reed to the house of Israel: when they toke hold of the with theyr hand thou brakest and pyckedst them on euery syde and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedst the raynes of theyr backes. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: behold, I wyl byng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: yea, the lande of Egypte shall be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Because he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therefore, I wyl vpon the, and vpon thy waters. I wyl make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate and in abasement, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Morians lande: so that in forty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall it be inhabited. I wyl make the lande of Egypte to be desolate among other waste countreys, and her cyties to lye voyde forty yeres amonge other voyde cyties: And I wyl scatere the Egyptians among the hepythen and nations, and strowe them in the landes about.

Agayne thus sayeth the Lord God: when the .xl. yeres are expyred, I wyl gather the Egyptians togyther agayne, out of the nacyns, among whom they were scatred, & wyl bynge the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Batruces theyr owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shall be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues aboue the hepythen: for I wyl so mynysh them that they shall nomore rule the hepythen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them anye more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord God.

In the .xxvii. yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrste moneth came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great trouaile and labour to come before Tyre that euery heed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre gyven neyther him nor his host anye rewarde, for y great trouaile that he hath taken there. Therefore thus sayeth y Lord God: beholde, I wyl geue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, that he may take away al her substance, robbe her robes, & spoyle her spoyle to pay his host theyr wages withal. I wyl geue him the lande of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At y same tyme wyl I cause y borne of the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lord.

The .xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypte and of her cyties is beweped.

When the word of the Lord came mozeouer vnto me, sayinge thou sonne of man, prophesy & speake thus sayth the Lord God: Mourne, wo worthe this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of y Lord is come. the darke daye of y hepythe the houre is at hande. the swerde cometh vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacions are destroyed, the Morians lande shall be afrayed: yea the Morians land Libia and Libia, al theyr comen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lord: The maynteyners of the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the towre of Syenes: that they be slayne downe w the swerde sayeth the Lord God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, among other waste cyties they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go forth from me in shypes, to make the carelesse Morians afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the daye of Egypte for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon. He and his people with hym yea, and the cruell tyrantes of the hepythen shall be brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe oute theyr swerdes vpon Egypte, and fyl the lande full of slayne men. I wyl drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therein, I wyl destroye thorowe the enemies. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl destroye the ydolles, and bynge the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shall nomore be a pynce of Egypte, and a fearfullnesse wyl I sende into the Egyptians lande. As for Batruces, I wyl make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in zoan the cytie. No, I wyl punyshe and poure my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substance of Alexandria wyl I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greute heynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted out, and Noph shall haue daye of sorowe. The best men of heliopolys and Bubasto shall be slayne with the swerde, and carped awaye captiue. At Caphtis the daye shall be darke, when I breake thre the hepythe of y lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shall be ledde awaye into captiuitie. This wyll I saye vnto Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yere, vpon the seuenth day of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll brake the arme of Pharaos kynge of Egypt: and so, it shall not be bounde vnto be healed, nother shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, and bruse his strong arme, yet is it but a broken one, & wyll smyte the swerde out of his handes.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scatte them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyll strengthe the arme of the kynge of Babilon, and gyue him a swerde in his hande, but I wyll breake Pharaos arme, so that he shal hold it before him piteously like a wounded man.

Ye, I wyll stablyshe the kynge of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharaos shal fal downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde which gyue the kynge of Babilon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon the lande of Egypt, & that when I scatere the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, & strowe them in the landes about, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxi. Chapter.

A comparison of the prosperite of Pharaos with the prosperite of the King of Babilon. The prophete sayeth a lyke descencion on them both.

In the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatnes? Beholde, I was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mounte of Libanus with sayre braunches: so thyke, that he gaue shadowes, & shote out verp hye: his toppes reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde about the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde.

Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thowoe the multitude of waters that he sent fro him, he obtayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches: vnder his bowes gendred all the bestes of the felde, & vnder his shadowe dwelte al people. It was & bewtiful was he in his greatnes & in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode vnto great waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his bewty, so sayre & goodly had I made hym with the multitude of his braunches. In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuy at hym.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as he hath lyft vp hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppes into the cloudes, and seynge his harte is proude in his byghnes, I wyll deliuer him in to the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, whiche shall rote hym out. Accordynge to his wickednes wyll I cast hym away, & enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatere hym, that his braunches shall lye vpon all moūtaynes, and in all valleys: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thowoe out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shall lye vpon hym, and all the wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute amonge his braunches so that from heaforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to his byghnesse, nor reache his toppes vnto the cloudes, neyther shall any tree of the water stonde so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreover thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyll cause lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, I wyll stanche his floudes, & the great waters shall be restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorowfull for his sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyll make the heathen make at the sounde of his fall when I cast hym downe to hell, with them that descend into the pyrt. All the trees of Eden, with al the cholen and best trees of Libanus, yee, and al they are plated vpon the waters shal mouene with hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shal go downe to hel with hym, vnto them that be slayne with the swerde, whiche dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shalte thou be lykened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncirculed, with them that be slayne with the swerde. Such thus is it with Pharaos and all his people, sayth the Lorde God.

The xxxii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to denunciate Pharaos the kynge of Egypt. He is charged that he hath receyved his comynge vnto Egypte thowoe the kynge of Babilon.

In the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the second moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, & say vnto him: thou art reputed as a Lyon: & the heathen, & as a whalylke in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll sprede my net ouer the, namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my parne, for I wyll cast the vpon the lande: and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye lye vpon the. I wyll gyue all the bestes of the felde prouche of the. Thy fytthe wyll I cast vpon the hylls, and fyl the valleys with thy bygh rest. I wyll water the lande lande with the aboundance of thy blond. euen to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shalbe ful of thy bloude. When thou art put out, I wyl couer the heauē, and make his starres dymme. I wyl sprede a cloude ouer the Sonne, and the moon shall not geue her lyght. All the lyghtes of heauen wyl I put out ouer the, and brynge darkenesse vpon thy lande, sayth the Lord God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, when I brynge thy destruction amonge the heuthen and countreys, whom thou knowest not. Per, I wyl make manye people with theyr kynges so afrayed thowoe the that theyr heer hal stand vp, when I haue my swerde at theyr faces. Eshodapny shal they be astonyed, euerp in in himselfe, at the daie of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lord God, the kyng of Babylons swerde shal come vpon the, with þ swerde of the woorthyes wyl I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty among the Scutiles shal wast the proude pompe of Egypt, and brynge downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt wyl I destroye, that they shall conuenome vpon þ waters, so that neyther mans foote nor beastes clawe shall styre them any more. Then wyl I make their waters drye, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lord God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countrey which is therein, shalbe layd wast, and when I smyte all them which dwel in it that they maye knowe that I am the Lord. This is the mournynge that the daughters of the heuthen shal make. Per, a sorowe and lamentacyon shal they take vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayth the Lord God.

DIn the xii yere, the. xv. daie of the moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man Take vp a lamentation vnto the people of Egypt, & cast the downe. Per, them I say, & the myghty people of the heuthen also euen to them that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe into þ graue. Downe how fast so euer thou be, & lay the with þ vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye. To the swerde is he already deliuered: therefore plucke downe to the grounde, he & all her multitude. The myghty woorthyes shal speake to hym out of the hel & to his helpers that are gone downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

EAsur is there also with his companye, and theyr graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fell all with the swerde, whose graues lye besyde hym in the lowe pytte. His countreys are buryed rounde aboute his graue, all togother wounded and slayne with the swerde, whiche men afore tyme broughthe feare into the lande of the lyupnge.

EThere is Elam also with all his people, & theyr graues round about. Whiche al bring wounde & slayne with the swerde are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuer thelesse somtyme broughthe feare into the lande of the lyupnge, for þ whiche they beate theyr shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is gyven them, and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde about all them whiche be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thowoe the swerde: for seinge that in tymes past, they made the lande of the lyupnge afrayed, they must nowe beate theyr owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesek also and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swerde, bycause afore tyme they made the lande of the lyupnge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also among þ woorthyes & vncircumcised gyauntes, whiche with theyr weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder theyr herdes, whose wickednes is vpon theyr bones: bycause that as woorthyes they haue broughthe feare into the lande of the lyupnge. Per, among the vncircumcised shal thou be bestrored, and slepe with them that perished thowoe the swerde.

There is þ lande of Edom with her kynges and princes also, which with theyr strength are layed by them that were slayne with þ swerde. Per, among the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreover, there be al the princes of the north, with all the Sydonians, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircumcised among those that be slayne with the swerde, and beate theyr owne shame, with them þ be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Pharao seeth this, he shalbe comforted ouer al his people, that is slayne with the swerde, both Pharao and al his host, sayth þ Lord God. For I haue gyven my feare in the lande of the lyupnge. But Pharao and al his people shal lye amonge the vncircumcised and amonge them that be slayne with þ swerde, sayth the Lord God.

The xxvii Chapter.

He setteth out the word of a seer that preacheth the word of the Lord. He strengthech them that dispaire and doth search them with the promise of a seer. The word of the Lord agaynst the remnant of the people. Agaynst the makers of the woordes of the prophete.

Esaie, the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man I sprake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swerde vpon a lande, of the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrey, and set hym to be theyr watchman, the same man (when he seeth the swerde come vpon the land) shal blowe the trompet and warne the people. If a man nee heare the noyse of the trompet & wyl not be warned, and the swerde come and take hym away, his blond shalbe vpon his owne heed: for he heede the sounde of the trompet, and wolde not take heede, therefore his blond be vpon hym. But if he wyl receyue warnynge, he shal saue his lyfe.

Agayne, of the watchman se the swerde come and shewe it not with the trompette, so that the people people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them. the same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wyl I requyre of the watchmans hande.

Ezech. iiii. 2

* And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that wheare as thou hearest any thyng out of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye, and I geue him not warning, that he may beware of his vngodly way: then shal the wycked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles, if thou warne the wycked of hys way, to tounne from it, where as he yet wyl not be turned from it, then shal he dye because of his synne but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

C Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yee, say thus. Our offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them, howe shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe? Tell them: * As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but much rather that the wycked turne from hys waye, and lyue. Turne pou, turne pou from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the house of Israel. Wherfore wyl ye dye?

Ezech. iiii. 2

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of the people: * The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shal not saue him, when soeuer he turneth a way vnsaythfull. Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shal not hurte hym, when soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlines.

And the ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shal not saue his lyfe, when soeuer he synneth. If I say vnto the ryghteous, that he shal surely lyue and so he trust to his owne righteousnes, and do synne, then shal hys ryghteousnes be no more thought vpon, but in the wyckednes that he hath done he shal dye. * Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from hys synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: In so much that the same wycked man geueth a pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong. Then shal he surely lyue, and not dye. Yee, the synnes that he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in so much as he doth now the thing that is lawfull and ryght, he shal lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Cuth, the wape of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as they owne wape is rather vngight.

When the ryghteous turneth from his ryghteousnes and doth the thyng that is wycked he shal dye therfore. But if the wycked turne from his wyckednes, doing the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he shal lyue therfore. Yet ye say: * the way of the Lord is not equal. O ye house of Israel

Ezech. iiii. 2

* I wyl iudge every one of you after his wayes. In the twelue yere, the fyfth daye of the tenth moneth of our captiuitie, it hapened, that one whiche was fled out of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cite is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euenyng afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntill the morninge that he cam to me: yee, he opened my mouth, so that I was nowore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israel, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: nowe are we many and the lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp to ydolles, * and haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ezech. iiii. 2

Deut. iiii. 2

Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abominacions, every one defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: and shal he then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wyldernes, shalbe slayne with the sweard: what so euer is vpon thy felde, I wyl geue vnto the bestes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and dennes, shal dye of the pestilence. For I wyl make the land so desolate and waste and the pompe of her strengthe shal come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shalbe so wast that no man shal trauaile therby.

* Then shal they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande wast and desolate because of all theyr abominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayenge one to an other. Come lette vs heare what worde is gone forth from the Lord. These come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: yee, as who sayeth they were my people, they lyt downe befoze the, and here thy wordes, but they do not thereafter: for in theyr mouthes they make a rest of them, and theyr harte goeth after theyr owne covetous lucre, and as a balet that hath a sweet tune, and is pleasaunt to singe, so shalte thou be vnto them thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do thereafter. Whā this cometh to passe (for so: it cometh in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Agayne I shal shewe and curate that despiteth the flocke of Israel, and leaue theyr owne: The Lorde sayeth that he wyl bylyte the despiteth flocke, and gather them to gether. He reproveth the malice of certain of the flocke he promyseth the same shepherde Israel, and wyl bylyte theyr:

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of man, prophesy agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophesy and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. * Woe vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that fede the selues. Shuld not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

1 Pet. 5.2. pe not sought, but * churlyshly & cruelly haue pe ruled them. Thus are they scattered here and there without a shepherde: yee, all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they go a straye.

B My shepe go wandyrng vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hyll yee, they be scattered abroad in all feldeg, and ther is no man that careth for them, or seeketh after them. Therefore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, for so moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the felde, haung no shepherde: & seynge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayth the

Lorde God: Beholde, I my selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and requyre my shepe from theyr handes, and make them cease from fedynge of my shepe. yee, the shepherdes shall fede them selues no more. For I wyll deliuer my shepe out of theyr mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayth the Lorde God:

* Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Aske as a shepherde among the flocke seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abroad, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them togyther out of al places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloude and darke daye. I wyll bypunge them out from all people, and gather them togyther out of all landes. I wyll bypunge them in to their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyll fede them in ryght good pastures, & vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall theyr foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, & bypunge them to theyr rest, sayth the Lorde God. * Suche as be lost, wyll I seke: suche as go a straye, wyll I bypunge agayne: suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp such as be weak, wyll I make stronge suche as be fat & stronge, those wyll I roote out, and fede them with the thyng that is lawfull.

And as for you (O my shepe) sayth the Lorde God. * I wyll put a difference among the shepe, amonge the withers and the goates. Was it not ynough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe & resydue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleere water, but ye must trouble the resydue also with your fete?

Thus my shepe muste be sayne to eate the thyng, that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue despyled. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatte shepe from the leane: for so moche as ye haue shot the weak shepe vpon the sydes and shouldeys, and runne vpon them with your hornes, so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered them abroad. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall no more be spoyled: yee, I wyll discern one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shep- herde, euen my seruaunt * David, he shall & fede them, and he shall be theyr shepherde. I the Lorde wyll be theyr God, and my seruaunt * David shall be theyr prince. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Moreover, I wyll make a couenaunt of peace with them, and dyue all euill beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperite wyll I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll. * I prosperous wyll be and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde may bypunge forth theyr frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their pocke, and deliuered them out of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall no more be spoyled of & heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall scape them. I wyll set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reproche of the heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke & ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayth the Lorde God.

The xxxv Chapter.

The destruction that shall come vnto the hylls Sepz, that is on the ydumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreover, the word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying. Thou son of man, turne thy face toward the mounte * Sepz, prophete vpon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde (O thou mount Sepz) I wyll vpon the. I wyll reache out my hande over the, yee, waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cyties wyll I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For so moche as thou bearest an olde enemyte agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast drawen the chyldren of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punysched for theyr synne: Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll prepare the vnto bloude, yee, bloude shall folowe vpon the: * seynge thou layest waste for bloude, therefore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wyll I make the mount Sepz desolate and waste, and bypunge to passe, that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wyll I fyll with his slayne men: thy hylls, valleys, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetual wyldernes, so that thy cyties shall not returne to theyr former estate, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

And because thou hast sayde: what, bothe these nacjons, and bothe these landes, muste be myne, & I wyll haue them in possession * where as the Lorde was there. Therefore, thus sayth the

the Lord God: as truly as I lyue, I wyl handle the according to thy wrath and gelousy like as thou hast dealt cruelly with them that I may be known among the, howe I haue punished the Pcc, and if thou also maist be sure, that I y Lord haue herd al thy despyteful wordes, which thou haste spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel sayeng: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to denoure. Thus wylth your mouthes ye haue made your host agaynst me, yec, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whych I haue hearde altogether. Whereunto, thus sayeth the Lord God: to the iope of all the worlde wyl I make the waste. * And lyke as thou (O mounte Sepi) wast glad, because the hecrtage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, and knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter

He promyseth the help and grace of the Gentys vnto Israel. The benefices done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their deservings: God renueth our hartes that we may walke in his commaundmentes.

E thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel and speake: * Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God because your enemy hath sayde vpon you: I ha, the hys euerlasting places are now become oures, prophesye therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lord God. Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde and become a possession vnto the resydue of the Gentys: which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euill name amonge the people. Therefore heare the worde of the Lord God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the resydue of the heathen: Yec, euen thus sayeth the Lord God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuice agaynst the resydue of the Gentys, and agaynst all * Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioyced from theyr whole harte wylth a despytefull stomacke, to waste it, and to spoylle it.

Prophesye therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, thus haue I dressed in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffered reproofe of the heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God. I haue sworne that the Gentyles which lye aboute you, shall beare theyr confusion theselues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel, ye shall shote out your bzaunches, & byngge forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I tourne me, that ye maye be tyllid and sowed.

I wyl sende you much people, whych shall be of all the house of Israel, the cities shall be inhated, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne: I wyl proude you wylth much people and cattel, which shall encrease and byngge frute: I wyl restore you also to your olde estate and thetse you more kindnes then ouer ye had before wherby ye shall knowe that I am the Lord: Yec people wyl I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the inpossession, and y shall be theyr enheritaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be wylth them. I gaue thus sayeth the Lord God: For so muche as they say vnto you, thou arte an eater vp of me, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no more men, neyther destroy thy people any more sayth the Lord God. And I wyl not suffre the: for to heare thyne owne confusyon, amonge the Gentyles from hence forth. Thou shalt not beare the reproche of the nations, nor caste oute thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God.

Moreouer the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: O thou sonne of man, when I house of Israel dwelte vpon theyr owne grounde, they despyled the selues wylth theyr owne wayes and ymaginacions: so that in my syght theyr wayes was like the uncleannes of a menstruous woman. Wherefore, I poured my wrathfull dyspleasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and because of theyr ydoles, wherwylth they had despyled themselves. I scattered them also among the heathen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordyng to theyr wayes and after theyr owne inuencion, so byd I punyssh them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the heathen, and come in amonge them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was layde of them. Are these the people of God, and must go out of theyr owne lande? Then spared I my holy name whych the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentys, to whom they came. Therefore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: I do not thys for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured among the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore, I wyl halowe my great name agayne whych among the Gentys is euill spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it amonge them. And the Gentys shall know that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before theyr eyes, sayeth the Lord God.

As for you, I wyl take you from among the heathen and gather you to gether out of al countrees, and byngge you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wyl I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane pcc, from all your uncleannes and fro all your ydols shall I cleanse you. A newe herte also wyl I geue you, and a newe sprete wyl I put into you. As for that stony harte, I wyl take it out of your bodye, and geue you a fleshy hert. I wyl geue my sprete among you * and cause you to walke in my commaundmentes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyl be your God. I wyl healepe you out of all your vncleannes. I will call for the corne, and will increase it, and let you haue no hunger. I will multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beate no more reproche of hunger among the heathen. Then shall ye remembre your owne wycked wayes, and your ymagynacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacions.

G But I will not do this for your sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be yefure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayth y<sup>e</sup> Lord God. What tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cyties to be occupied agayne, & will repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be buylded agayn, which afore tyme laye waste in y<sup>e</sup> syght of all them that went by. Then shall it be sayd, this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now stronge and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken downe, and plant agayne that, that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Jerem. l. 10

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will yet once be founde agayn of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shall increase them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in y<sup>e</sup> hys solempne feastes: so shall also the wyld waste cyties be fylled with flockes of men: & they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophesye of the byngynge agayne of the people of iuda in captiuitie. By wherewith the unyon of the ten tribes with the twyn.

I The hande of the Lord came vpon me and carped me out in the spyte of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he ledde me rounde aboute by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and merueylous dyde also. Then sayd he vnto me, Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones may lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me, Prophecy thou vpon these bones: and speake vnto them. Ye dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Behold, I will put bryth vnto you, that ye may lyue. I will geue you synowes and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: & so geue you * bryth, that ye may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

Jerem. l. 11

So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophesying, there came a noyle and a great mocyon, so that the bones ran euery one to another. Now when I had looked, behold, they had synowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with saynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayd he vnto me, Thou sonne of man, prophecy thou toward the wynde: prophecy: and speake to the wynde. Thus sayth y<sup>e</sup> Lorde God. Come (O thou wynde) from the four wyndes, and blowe vpon these saynne, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied as he had commaunded me: then came the bryth in to them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vp vpon they<sup>r</sup> fete, a merueylous great sorte.

Moreover, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dyed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therefore D prophesye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, and brynge you in to the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, and brynge you out of them. My spyte also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde whiche haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge. thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wypte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take another stycke and wypte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his companions. And then take bothe these together in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Nowe ys the chyldren of the people saye vnto the, wyte thou not wher we ys what thou meanest by these? Then gyue them this answer: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, * I will take the stocke of Joseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, and will put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my hande. And the two styckes where vpon thou wyptest, walte thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and walt saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lorde God. beholde, I will take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whome they be gone, & will gather them together on euery syde, and brynge them agayne in to they<sup>r</sup> owne lande yee, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shall haue but one kynge. They shall no more be two peoples from hence forth, neyther be deuyled in to two kyngdomes: they shall also desyle them selues no more with they<sup>r</sup> abhominacions, Idols, and all they<sup>r</sup> wycked doynges. I will helpe them out of all they<sup>r</sup> dwellinge places, wherin they haue synned: and will so cleanse them, that they shall be my people, and I they<sup>r</sup> God.

Dauid my seruaunt shall be their kynge, and they al shall haue one shepherde only. They shall walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shall they bothe kepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt: yee, euen in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, and they<sup>r</sup> chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shall be their euerylasting prync. Moreover, I wil make a bond of peace

peace wyth them, whychē shalbe vnto them an euertlastyng couenaunt. I wyl settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarie wyl I set amonge the for euermore. * And dwellynge shal be with them: yee, I wyl be theyr God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the heathen also shal knowe, that I the Lorde am the holymaker of Israel, when my sanctuarie shalbe among them for euermore.

The xxxviii Chapter.

C De prophetheth that Gog and Magog shall come wth an appointed host into the lande of promys. And certeynlye he shal be the compage of Gog was before prophethed of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

A And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward Gog the lande of Magog whychē is the chiefe prince at Mesech and Tubal. prophete agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou chiefe prince of Mesech and Tubal. behold, I wyl vpon the, and wyl turne the aboute and put a byt in thy chawes. I wyl bring the forth and al thy host, both horse and horsemen, which be all weapened of the best saltpoon, a great people, that handle altogether speares, sheldes, and wearde the Perses, Medians and wyth them the Libians, whychē all beare sheldes and belmettes. Somer and all his hostes the house of Togorma out of the north quarters, & all his hostes, yee, and muche people wyth the.

B Therefore prepare the, let thy selfe in arape wyth all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visyted, and in the latter yerres thou shalt come into þe lande that hath bene destroyed wyth the swearde, and nowe is replenyshed agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, whychē haue longe lpen waste: yee, they be brought out of the nacions, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vpon the as a cōmyng wether, to couer the land, and as it were a darcke cloude, thou wyth all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

C Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shal many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mischefe, and saye: I wyl vp to ponder playne lande, sepyge theyr syt at ease, & dwell so safely for they dwell all without any walles they haue nether barres nor doores) to spyle them, to robbe them to lape hande vpon theyr so well inhabited wyldernes agaynst that people, that is gathered together from amonge the heathen, whychē haue gotten cattell and good and dwell in the myddell of the lande. Then shal Saba, & Dedan, and the marchantes of Tharsis with al theyr worthies saye vnto the: Arte thou come to robbe? Haste thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spyle: to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye cattell and good, and to haue a greate pray?

E Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophete, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of þe north partes. thou and muche people wyth the, whychē ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yee, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the land. Thus shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyl bring the vpon my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

E Thus sayeth the Lorde God. Thou arte he of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruantes the prophetes of Israel, which propheted in those dayes and yerres, that I woulde bring the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog cometh vpon the lande of Israel sayeth the Lorde God, that my indignaciō go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote dyspleasure I haue deuyled that there shalbe a great trouble in the lande of Israel at that tyme. The very fythes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the bestes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

G The hylls also shalbe turned vpon side downe the stapies of stone shal fall, and al walles shal synke to the grounde. I wyl call for a swearde vpon them in al my mountaynes sayeth þe Lorde God so that euerye mans swearde shalbe vpon an other. Wylth pestilence and bloude wyl I punyssh the hym. For my rapne and hable stones, fyre and byrnstone wyl I cause to rapne vpon hym and all his heape, yee, and vpon all that greute people that is wyth hym. Thus wyl I be magnifyed, honoured, and known amonge the heathen that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxix Chapter.

C De the with the destruction of Gog and Magog. The great of Gog and his host. He prophetheth that Gog, and his company shall be deuoured of fyres and beastes, wherfore þe house of Israel is warned: Theyr byrnynge agayne from captiuitie is promysed.

I herfore, O thou sonne of man, prophete agaynst Gog, & speake thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, * O Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesech & Tubal, I wyl vpon the, & punyssh the wyth dyuerse plagges and lead the from the north partes, & bring the vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyl smyte it out of thy lyfte hand, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy right hande. Thou wyth all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyl I geue the vnto foules & wyld beastes of the felde, to be deuoured there muste thou lye vpon the felde: for curm I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

B Into Magog, and amonge them that syt so careles in the pyes wyl I sende a fyre, and they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, I wyl make also þe name of my holines to be known among my people of Israel: and I wyl not let my holy name be euil spoken of anye more: but the very heathen also shal knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israel: Beholde, it cometh, and shal be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde, God. Thus is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

Am. iii. Theyr

The prophete

They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them: shylles and speares, bowes and arrows, bylles & clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burninge therof, so that they shall elles burne no thynges from the felde, neither haue nede to be we downe out of y<sup>e</sup> wodde. For they shall haue weapens ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoiled them, sayth the Lorde God. At the same tyme will I gyue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley, where thorow men go from the east to y<sup>e</sup> see ward. Those that trauaile therby, shall stopp the y<sup>e</sup> noses for stynche. There shall Gog & all his people be buried & it shall be called the valley of y<sup>e</sup> people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryng of them, that they may cleanse the lande. Yee, all the people of y<sup>e</sup> lande shall bury them, & it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be dead buryers, euer goynge thorow the lande, and appoynt them certeyn places to bury those in, which remaine vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they selle, and that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyll the dead buryers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytie shall be called hamonah: that is a multitude. Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

E And thou sonne of man thus sayth the Lorde God, Speake vnto all the foules & euery byrde, yee, & to all the wyld beasts of the felde, heape you togyther & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate fleshe, and drynke bloude. Ye shall eate the fleshe of the worshypes, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of y<sup>e</sup> lande. of the wetters, of the lambes, of the goates and of the oren that be all slayne at Balam. Eate the fatte pour belly full, and drynke bloude, tyll ye be drunken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. I fill you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captaynes and men of warre, sayth the Lorde God.

I I will burne my glory also among the gentyles, that all the heathen may se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde in to captiuitie: it was for theyr wyckednes sake, because they offended me.

For the whyche cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them in to the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swerde. Accordynge to theyr vncleynesse and vnfaithfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them:

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God Now will I burne agayne the captiues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, & be glorious for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye. and so safely shall they dwell in theyr lande, that no man shall make them afraid. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr enemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many heathen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whiche suffered them to be ledde in to captiuitie amonge the heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne into theyr owne lande, and not leste one of them ponder.

After that will I hyde my face no more from them, & but will powre out my spyrte vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God.

The .xl. Chapter.

The restoring of the cities and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth daye of the moneth: that is the .xiii. yere after that the cytie was synnten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and carryd me forth: euen in to the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a meuelous hye mountayne, where vpon there was a buyldynge (as it had ben of a cytie) toward the north.

Whether he carryd me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, whiche had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a metrodd also he stode in the doore, and sayd vnto me thou sonne of man, marke well with thyne eyes, hearken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyn herte, what soeuer I shall shewe the, for to y<sup>e</sup> extent that they myght be shewed the, therefore art thou brought hyther. And what soeuer y<sup>e</sup> seest, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Behold, there was a wall on the outspide rounde aboute the house: the metrodde that he had in his hande, was syxe cubytes longe and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, whiche was a metrodde, and the heght also a metrodde. Then came he vnto y<sup>e</sup> east doore, and wente vp the staires, & measured the postes of the doore, wherof euery one was a metrodde thycke. Euery chambze was a metrodde longe & brode: but wene the chambzes were syue cubites. The post of the doore within the porche, was one metrodde. He measured also the porche of the innermost doore, whiche containyd a metrodde. Then measured he the entry of the doore, that containyd egypt cubytes, & his pylles two cubites: and this entre stode inward.

The chambzes of the doore eastwarde, were the on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylles also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doore, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heght of the doore thirtene cubytes. The edge before the chambzes was one cubyte brode vpon bothe the sydes, and the chambzes syxe cubytes wyde of euyer syde. He measured the doze from the rydye of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was .xxv. cubites, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylles also .l. cubytes hie, rounde aboute the court doze. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entrie of the innermore doze, were fiftie cubites. The chambers & theyr pylles wpythin, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had þe fore entrees also, whose wyndowes went round about win. And vpon the pylles there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into þe fore court where as were chambers and paueid workes, made in the fore court round about .xxx. chambers vpon one paueid worke. Now the paueid worke was a longe beside þe dozes and þe was the lower paueid worke. After thys he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the innermore court of the outsyde, whiche had an hundred cubytes vpon the east and the north parte. And the doze in the uttermost court towarde the north, measured he after the length and bredth. þys thre chambers also on ether syde with his pylles and fore entrees which had euen the measure of the fyrst doze. his heygth was .l. cubites, the bredth .xxv. cubites, þys wyndowes, and porches w his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze toward the east. there were seven steppes to go vp vpon and theyr porche before them. Nowe the doze of the inner court stode streyght ouer agaynst the doze, that was towarde the North east. From one doze to another he measured: .l. cubytes.

D After that, he brought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward þe south: whose pylles and porches he measured, these hadde the fyrst measure, and wpyth theyr porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyrste wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wpyth steppes to go vp vpon. þys porch stode before with his pylles and date trees on ether syde. And þe doze of the inner court stode toward the southe, and he measured from one doze to another an hundred cubytes. So he brought me into the innermore court, thowowt the doze of the southsyde whiche he measured: and it had the measure aforesayde. In lyke maner, þys chambers, pylles and fore entrees, had euen the foresayd measure also. And he had with þys porches rounde aboute wyndowes of .l. cubites heygth, and .xxv. cubytes brode. The porches rounde aboute were .xxv. cubytes longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the uttermost court vpon his pylles, there were date trees and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

E He brought me also into the innermost court vpon the east syde, and measured the doze accordynge to the measure aforesayd, þys chambers, pylles and porches had euen the same measure, as the fyrste had: and wpyth þys porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes, þys porch reached vnto the uttermost court. þys pylles also had date trees on ether syde, and .viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doze, and measured it, whiche also had the foresayd measure. þys chambers, pylles and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute whose heygth was .l. cubytes and the bredth .xxv. þys pylles stode toward the utmost court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, and .viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose entraunce was at the doze pylles, and there the burnt offeringes were washed.

In the doze porch, there stode on ether syde two tables for the slaughtynge to slay the burnt offeringes: synofferinges and trespassofferinges therupon. And on the outsyde as men go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. foure tables stode on ether syde of the doze that is .viii. tables: wherupon they slaughted. foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offeringes, of a cubite and a halfe longe & brode and one cubyte hie, wherupon were layed the vesselles and ornaments whiche were used to the burnt & slayne offeringes: when they were slaughted. And wpythin, there were hooks foure syngers brode, fastened rounde aboute to hange fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layde the offeringe fleshe. On the outside of the innermore doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde court besyde the north doze ouer agaynst the southe. There stode one also besyde the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: Thys chambze on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytacyon and thys toward the north, * is the prestes that wapte vpon the aulter whiche be the sonnes of * Gad och that do seruite before the Lorde in steade of the chyldzen of Leui. So he measured the fore court, whiche had in length an hundred cubytes, and as muche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entrie of the house, and measured the walles by the entrie doze whiche were fyue cubytes longe on ether syde. The thychenes also of the doze on ether syde, was thre cubytes. The length of the porch was .xx. cubytes: the bredth .xi. cubytes and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pylles on ether syde one.

After thys, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes whiche were of both sydes six cubytes thicke, accordynge to the wydenes of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the doze on ether syde fyue cubytes. He measured the length thereof, whiche conteyned forty cubytes, and the bredth twenty. Then wente he in and measured the doze postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was fyue cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was seven cubytes. He measured the length & bredth thereof, which were euery one twenty cubites, before þe temple. And he sayd vnto me this is the holpest of all he measured also the wall of the house, whiche was fyue cubytes. The chambers þe stode rounde

aboute the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde: and one stode hard vpon another, wherof there were xxiii. there stode postes benethe by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thowoe them rounde aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyest by the myddel chambres. I sawe also that þ house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacion of þ syde chambres was a metrodde, that is. vi. cubytes brode. The thycknesse of the syde wall without, contayned. v. cubytes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Set wene the chambres was the wydnes. xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambres doores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one doore was towarde the north, the other towarde the south: and the thycknes of the out wall was v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was seperated towarde the west, was. lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldynge was v. cubytes thycke rounde about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an. c. cubytes longe, and the seperated buyldynge with the wall, were an. c. cubytes longe also. The wydnes before þ house, and of it that was seperated towarde the east, was an. c. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buyldynge before & behynde with the chambres vpon bothe the sydes, and it contayned an. c. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wth boordes: and thus was it aboute the doore vnto the inmost house, & without also. Pee, the whole wall on euery syde, bothe within & without was syled ouer w great boordes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixte two Cherubins. One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde towarde the date tree, & a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all þ house. Pee, the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboute the doore, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hye postes of the temple were four square, & the fashyon of the Sanctuary was * euen as it appered vnto me afore in the vision. & The table was of woode. iii. cubytes hye, and. ii. cubytes longe. his corners the length & the wales were of wood. And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before þ Lorde. The temple and the holpest of all had cyther of them two doores, and euery doore had two lytle wyckets which were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the wales: and a great thycke balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Vpon bothe the sydes of the walles of þ porche, there were made depe wyndowes & date trees, hauynge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the priestes and the holy thynges.

Then carped he me out in to the fore court towarde the north, & brought me in to the chambere that stode ouer agaynst þ back buylding northward whiche had the length of an. c. cubytes, whose doore turned towarde the north. The wydnesse contayned l. cubytes: ouer agaynst the. xx. cubytes of the innermer court & agaynst the paved worke that was in the court, besyde al these thre there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst another. And before this chambere there was a walkynge place of x. cubytes wyde, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and they doores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddlemost of the buylding, for they bare chambere vpon chambere, and stode thre together one vpon an other, not hauing pylers lyke the fore court: therefore were they smaller then those benethe & in the myddelst to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall wout that stode by the chambres towarde the vtermost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe, for the length of þ vtermost chambres in the fore court was. l. cubytes also but the length therof before the temple was an. c. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intrance of þ east syde, wherby a man myght go into the out of the fore court thowoe the thicke wall of the fore court towarde the east, ryght ouer agaynst the seperated buyldynge. Before the same buyldynge vpon this syde there were chambres also, whiche had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambere of the north syde of the same length and wydnesse.

They intrance, fashyon, and doores were also of the same maner. Pee, euen lyke as the other chambere doores were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a doore to go in at. Then sayd he vnto me: The chambres towarde the north & the south whiche stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the priestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, must eate the moost holy offerpnynges: and there must they laye the moost holy offerpnynges: meate offerpnynges, synne offerpnynges, and trespace offerpnynges: for it is an holy place. When the priestes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore court: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracyon, & put on other garmentes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thowoe the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with the metrodde, whiche rounde aboute contayned. v. c. metroddeg. And the north syde measured he, which contayned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west, whiche he measured, conteyned cyther of them fyue hundred metroddeg. So he measured all þe foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde about fyue hundred metroddeg longe, & as brode also whych separated the holy from the unholy.

The. xliiij. Chapter.

¶ He seeth the glorie of God goinge into the Temple from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the phylatry of the chylde of Israel, for the which they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentance.

3

He brought me to the doze that turneth towarde the east. Beholde, then came the glorie of the God of Israel, from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters and the earth was lychtened with his glorie. His syght to loken vpon was * lyke the fyrste that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the citey shuld haue bene destroyed: & and lyke the visyon that I sawe by the water of Eobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the glorie of the Lorde came into the house, thowowe the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermost court, & beholde the house was ful of the glorie of þe Lord.

Ezech. i. 28

I hearde one speakyng vnto me out of the house and there stode one by me, that sayd vnto me: O thou sonne of mā, * thus come is my seat and the place of my fote steps, where as I will dwell amonge the chylde of Israel for evermore: so that the house of Israel shal nomore despyle my holy name: neyther they, nor they kpynges thowowe they: whordome, thowowe theye hye places, and thowowe þe dead bodyes of theye kpynges: whiche haue buylded theye thresholds in maner harde vpon my thresholds, and theye postes almost at my postes: and a wal betwixt me and them. Thus haue they despyled my holy name with theye abhominacions. þe they haue comitted. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But nowe they shal put away theye whordome, and the deade bodyes of theye kpynges out of my syght, that I maye dwell among them for evermore. * Therefore O thou sonne of man shewe thou the householde of Israel a temple that they maye be ashamed of theye wyckednesse and measure the selues an example therat.

Ezech. i. 28

And when they be ashamed of al theye doozes, then shewe them the fourme and fashon of the temple, the compynge in, the goynge oute, all the maner and descripcyon therof. See, all the vles and ordynances of it, that they maye kepe & fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.

This is the descripcyon of the house. A boue vpon the mount rounde about all the corners, it shalbe the holiest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashon of the house. This is the measur of the altare, after þe true cubyte which is a spanne longer then another cubyte. his bottom in the myddst was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that went rounde aboute it, was a spanne brode. This is the hyghth of the altare. From the ground to the lower steps, the length is two cubytes: and the bredthe one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the hygher, are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

* The altare was foure cubytes hye, & from the altare vwarde stode foure hornes, and it was twelue cubytes longe, and twelue cubytes brode vpon the four corners the couerynge of þe altare was fourtene cubytes longe and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute had halfe a cubyte, and the bottom therof rounde aboute one cubyte his streys stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God these are þe ordynances and lawes of the altare in the daye when it is made to offer burnt offerings, and to spraye bloude thereupon. To þe prestes, to the Leuites that be of the seide of Sadoch * and treade before me to do me scrupce, sayeth the Lord God. Vnto these geue thou a pong bulloke for a synne offering. and take þe bloude of hym, and spraye his foure hornes withal: & the foure corners of the altare couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute, herewith walte thou cleane it. & reconyle it. * Thou shalt take the bulloke also of the synne offering, and burne hym in a seuerall place without the Sanctuary. The nexte daye, take a goat bucke, with out blemyshe for a synne offering, to reconyle the Altare wythall, lyke as it was reconyled wyth the bulloke.

Ezech. i. 28

Nowe when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a pong bulloke * without blemyshe, and a ramme oute of the flocke without blemyshe also. Offer them before the Lorde, and let þe Priest cast & salte thereupon, and geue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offering. Seuen dayes walt thou bynne euery daye a goat bucke for synne. A pong bulloke and a ram of the flocke, without blemyshe, walt they offer. Seuen dayes walt they reconyle and cleane the altare, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are crypyed, then vpon the eyghte daye and so forth the Priestes shal offer theye burnt offerings and helythofferynges vpon the altare: so I will be merciful vnto you, sayth the Lorde God.

The. xliiij. Chapter.

¶ He sheweth what doze of the temple is shut. He commaunded to shew the people wyth theye offence. The circumstance in here, and in the felle. Who are to be admitted to the service of the temple and who to be refused. He sheweth what prestes be wold haue admitted into the holy place, and also theye office.

After this he brought me agayne to the outwarde doze of the Sanctuarye on the east syde: & that was shut. Then sayde the Lord vnto me this doze shalbe shut and not opened for any man to go thowowe it: but onely for the Lorde God of Israel. yea he shal go thowow it, elles shal it be shut. The Prince hym selfe shal come thowowe it, that he maye cate breade before the Lorde. At the portche shal he come in, and there shal he goo oute agayne. Then broughte he me to the doze vpon the north syde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde * the glorie of the Lorde fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face.

So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne harte: beholde, and take take diligent hede to all that I wyl saye vnto the concernynge all the ordynaunces of þe Lorde and all his lawes: ponder well with thyne herte the comynge in of the house and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary and tell that obstinate house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe done ynoughe w all your abhominacions, saynge that ye haue broughte into my Sanctuarie straungers, harynge vncircumcised hartes and fleshe, where thowme my Sanctuarie is despyled, when ye offer me breade, fat, and bloude.

E Thus with al your abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kept the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuarie: but let keepers of my Sanctuarie, even after your owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God of all the strangers that dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel, no straunger whose harte and fleshe is not circumcised, shall come within my Sanctuarie: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe from me and haue discaued þe people of Israel with all errours goynge after theyr Idols: therefore shall they beate theyr owne wychednes. Shuld they be set and ordeyned to minister vnder the doores of the house of my Sanctuarie? And to do scrupce in the house: to slaye burnt offerynges & sacrifices for the people to stande before them, and to serue them, saynge the scrupce that they do them, is before theyr ydols, & cause the house of Israel to stumble thowme theyr wychednes.

D For the which cause I haue plucked out mine hande ouer them, sayeth the Lord God so that nowe they must beate theyr owne iniquyte, and not to come nye me to serue me with theyr presthode in my Sanctuarie, and most holpest of all, that they may beate theyr owne shame and abhominacions, which they haue done. Shulde I use them to be porters of the house, and to al the scrupce that is done therein? But the prestes, the Leuites, the sonne of * Sadock, that kepte þe holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuarie, when þe chyldren of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me to do me scrupce, to stande before me, and to offer me the fat and the bloude sayeth the Lorde.

E They shall go into my Sanctuarie, & treade before my table, to do me scrupce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Nowe when they go in at the doores of the innermost court they shall put on linnen clothes, so that no wulleyne come vpon them whyle they do scrupce vnder þe doores of the innermost court and within. They shall haue lappe linnen bonettes vpon theyr heades, & linnen byches vpon theyr loynes, which in their labour they shall not put about them. And whyle they go forth to the people into þe outward court they shall put of the clothes, wherein they haue ministered, and lape them in the habitacion of þe Sanctuarie, and put on other appaill, lest they vnhalowe the people with theyr clothes.

I They shall not haue theyr heades, nor norse the butte of theyr heare, but rounde theyr heades onely. * All the prestes that go into the innermost court, shall dyncke no wyne. * They shall marie no wydowe, neyther one that is put from her husbände: but a mayde of the seide of þe house of Israel, or a wydow þe hath had a prest before.

* They shall shewe my people the difference betwene the holy and unholy, betwixte þe cleane and vnclean. If any discorde aryse they shall discern it: and geue sentence after my iudgements. My solempne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shall they kepe, and halowe my Sabbothes. * They shall come at no deade person to despyle them selues, except it be father or mother sonne or daughter, brother or syster, that hath had yet no husbände, in such may they be despyled.

And when he is cleansed, there shall be reckened vnto hym seuen dayes: and if he go into þe Sanctuarie agayne to do scrupce, he shall bring a syn offeryng, sayeth the Lord God. * They shall haue an heritagage pee, I my self wyl be theyr heritage elles shall ye geue them no possession in Israel, for I am theyr possession. The meat offeryng, synne offeryng, and trespass offeryng shall they eate, and every dedicate thyng in Israel, shall be theyr. The fyrstfrutes of all the fyrstfrutes, and all the frewyl offerynges shall be the prestes.

Ye shall geue vnto the prest also all the fyrstfrute of your fyrst borne, all I saye, and all that is seperated vnto God all your beue offerynges (I saye) shall be the prestes, and also the fyrstfrutes of your dough, that God maye prospere the celybue. * But no deade carpon shall be the prest eate, nor such as is deuoured of wyld beastes, foules, or castell.

The xlvi. Chapter.

Of the lande of promys are there seuerall fourtye pors, of which the fyrst is geuen to the prestes & to the temple, the second to the Leuites, the thyrde to the cyte, & fourth to the prince. An other portion vnto the house of Israel: Of wylde beastes & meales. Of the fyrstfrutes, &c.

When ye deuide the lande by plot, ye shall put asyd one * part for þe Lorde to be holy from other landes name. It shal be xxv. meterods longe, & x. meterods brode. This shall be holy, as wide as it is round about. Of this part there shall belong vnto the Sanctuarie, v. meterods in all the four corners, and fyfty cubites wyde round about to the suburbs. And from this measurement of xxv. meterods longe, and ten. meterods thou shalt measure wher in the Sanctuarie and the holpest of all maye stande.

The celybue of that holy ground shall be the prestes whiche do scrupce in the Sanctuarie of the Lorde, and go in before þe Lorde to serue him that they maye haue rowme to dwell in. As for the Sanctuarie, it shall stande for it selfe, and to the Leuites that serue in the house there shall be geuen twenty habitacyons, of the xxv. thousand length, and ten thousand bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the cyte a possession of fyue thousand meterods brode, and xxv. thousand longe, be- syde the part of the Sanctuarie that shall be for the whole house of Israel. * Vpon bothe the sydes of the Sanctuarie part, and by the cyte, there shall be geuen vnto the prince what soeuer lyeth ouer agaynst the cyte: as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde, whiche shall be as longe as one parte, from the west vnto the east.

And such as yet remayneth ouer in the lande shalbe genen to the house of Israel accordyng to theyr trybes. Thus sayth the Lorde God. One bath shal contayne the tenth parte of an homer, and so shal one Ephah be: every measure shalbe after the homer. And one syckle maketh twenty eareas. So twenty syckles, and xxv. & xv. syckles make a ponde. This is the heue offering that ye shal geue to be heaued: namely, the syrtene parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of wheate, and the xvi. parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of barley. For the meat offerings he shal geue euery an Ephah to a bullock, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hyne of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the xv. dave of the seuenth moneth, he shal kepe the seven dayes holy, one after another, euē as the other seven dayes: with the syn offering, burnt offering, meat offering, and with oyle.

But when the people of  $\frac{1}{2}$  lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the north dore to do workyng, shal go out agayn at the south dore. And they y come in at the south dore, shal go forth agayne at the north dore. There shal none go out at the dore, where he came in, but shal go ryghte forth ouer on the other syde, and the pynce shal go in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes this shalbe the meat offering.

An Ephah to a bullocke, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wyl: but euery an hyne of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the pynce byngeth a burnt offering, or an helth offering with a frewyl vnto the Lorde, the east dore shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do wth his burnt and helth offerings, as he doth vpon  $\frac{1}{2}$  Sabbath, & when he goeth forth, the dore shal be shut after hym agayne. He shal dayly byng vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde wthout blemyshe for a burnt offering: thys shal he do euery moonyng.

And for a meat offering, he shal geue  $\frac{1}{2}$  syrtene parte of an Ephah, and  $\frac{1}{2}$  thyrde parte of an hyne of oyle, to myngle wth  $\frac{1}{2}$  cakes euery moonyng. I \* The pynce also shall take none of the people in herptance nor put them from the pynce possession but to his owne ionnes shall he geue his possession, & my people be not scattered abroad, but that euery man maye haue hys owne. And he brought me thowwe the entraunce at the syde of the dore to the habitacyon of the Sanctuary th it belongeth to the prestes and stode towarde the north, and behold, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me.

S This is the place where the prestes shall dryght the trespass and synofferpynges, and bake the meatofferpynges, that they nebe not beate the into the outwarde courte, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost courte rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde in euery corner of the courte, there was yet a lytle courte. Yea, in al four corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of forty cubytes longe, and thirtie cubytes wyde: these four lytle courttes were of one lyke mesure, and there wente a rydge wall rounde aboute them all four, vnder the which they were hartes made round about. Then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the mynisters of the house shall dryght the clayne offerpynges of the people.

The xliii Chapter.

The disyon of the waters that came out of the temple. The courses of the land of promysse, and the dwylling places of the tribes.

After this he brought me agayn before the dore of the house and beholde there gushyd out waters from vnder the postes of the house inward, for the house stode towarde the east that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the altar southwarde. Then carried he me out to the northdore, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vtmost dore & turneth eastwarde. * Beholde, there came forth the water vpon the ryght syde. Nowe when the man that had the mehod in his hande went vnto the east dore, he measured a thousand cubytes and then he brought me thowwe the water, euen to the ancles. So he measured yet a thousand and brought me thowwe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thowwe the water vnto the loynes.

B After this he measured a thousande agayne then was it luche a ryuer, & I myght not wade thowwe it. The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me. haste thou fene this, O thou son of man: and wyth that he brought me to the ryuer banke agayne. Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the see and from the see it runneth out and maketh the waters whole. Yea, all that lyue and inoue, wperunto this ryuer commeth shall ceouer. * And wher this water commeth there shall be muche fow. For all that cometh to this water shall be lusty and whole. By this ryuer shall the tyfishers stande from Engaddi vnto to En Eglaim, and there spredde out theyr nettes for there shall be greute heapes of fysh lyke as in the mapne see. As for his clape and pyttes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shall be occupied for salte.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the house there shall growe all maner of fruitefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall they fruite perishe: but euery tyme at theyr moneths for theyr water runneth out of the Sanctuaries. His frute is good to eat, and his leafe prouyde table for medecyne. Thus sayth the Lorde God Let this be the border wherinye shall deuyde the land vnto the twelue trybes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: * of the which lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it shoulde fall to your inherptance.

This is the border of the lande vpon the north syde, from the mapne see, as men go to zabada: namely, hemah, keretha, Sabarim, from the borders of Damascus and hemah vnto hazar, Echon, and that lyeth vpon the costes of haue ran. Thus the borders from the see forth, shalbe Pazar, Euan the border of Damascus, & north and the borders of hemah, & is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from haue ran and Damascus, from Salead and the lande of Israel by Iordane and so forth, from the see coast, that lyeth eastwarde: & this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Hamar forth to the waters of Iryse vnto Cadeg, the ryuer to the mapne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte namely the great see from the borders therof, tyll a man come vnto hemah this is the west parte.

* This lande shal be parte amonge you, accordyng to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an herptage for you: and for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and beget chyldren.

For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of your owne householde, and countrey, and they shall haue herptage with you amonge the chyldren of Israel. Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth in the same trybe shal ye geue hym his herptage sayeth the Lorde God.

The ende of the prophete of Ezechiel.

The booke of the Prophet Danuell.
The fyrste Chapter.

¶ The prophet foretold the capture of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babel. Of the sunnes that were in captivite, the king commaunded to chose which of them shoulde be taught the letters and language of the Chaldees. They are showne the kinges troope Daniel abseparately from the meane of the kinges of Babel.

At the thirde yere of þe reygne of of Jehoakim kyng of Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Ierusalem and beseged it: and þe Lorde deliuered Jehoakim þe kyng of Iuda into his hande, with certayn ornametes of his house of God, whiche he caried awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of his god, and there he brought them into his goddes treasury. And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz the chefe chamber-layne that he shulde bypunge hym certayne of the chylidren of Isræll, that were come of þe kynges sede and of prynces, yonge spryngales without any blemyshe, but fayre & wel fauoured, instruct in all wysdome, conyng and vnderstandyng whiche were able to stande in the kynges palace to reade and to learne for to speake Chalythe.

The Prophecy.

Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcion of hys owne meate. and of the wyne, whiche he dranke hym selfe, so to nourish them thre yere that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldeyn of Iuda namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chiefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Baltaszar Ananias, Sidrach Misael, Misach and Azarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he wolde not be defyled thowhe the kynges meate nor the wyne whiche he dranke. And this he despyred of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am a strayde of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted pon your meate & drynke: lest he spyte poure faces to be worse lykenge then the other spryngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto þe kynge.

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chiefe chamberlayn had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O prync but ten dayes with thy seruantes, & let vs haue pottage to eat, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and they shal be that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale wth vs thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them 10. dayes. And after þe ten dayes, they faces were better lykynge and fatter then all þe ponge spryngaldes, which opb rate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melassar toke a way they meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these four spryngaldes conyng and lea-nyng in all scrypture and wysdome. but vnto Danyel specially, he gaue vnderstandyng of al wysons and dreames. Nowe when þe tyme was cerryed, that the kynge had appoynted to bring in these ponge spryngaldes vnto hym, the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the kynge comuned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therefore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of them, found them ten tymes better, then all the soothsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode still, vnto the fyrst yere of kynge Cyrus.

The seconde Chapter.

The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He called vnto him soothsayers, and requyred of them both the dreame and the interpretacyon thereof. They answered that they can not shew it. The kynge commaunded all the wyse men of Babylon, to be slayne. Daniel requyred tyme to solute the questyon. The lord opened þe myght vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, and sheweth hym his dreame & the interpretacyon thereof. Of the trespasage kyngdome of Chalde.

In the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thowhe hys spiryte was veyed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kynge commaunded to call together all the soothsayers, charmers wylches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my sprete was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in þe Syrians speche: O kynge God save thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answer and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wth the interpretacyon thereof, ye shal dye, and your houses shal be pyrfed.

But if ye tell me the dreame & the meanyng thereof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the significacyon of it. They answered agayne and sayde, the kynge must shewe his seruantes the dreame and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge. I perceyue of a truth, that ye do but poulouge þe tyme for so much as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therefore if ye wyl not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therefore tell me þe dreame, and so shall I knowe, if ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Vpon this, the Chaldees gaue answer before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thyng, whiche the saynge speaketh of. yea, there is neyther kynge prync nor Lorde, that euer asked such thynges at a soothsayer, charmer or Chaldey for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requy-

For the whiche cause the kynge was wroth with greute indignacyon, and commaunded to destoye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacyon went forth, & the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel wth hys companions. Then Danyel enquired of Arioch the kynges steward, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth already to kill suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch bringe then the kynges deputye. Why hath the kynge proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Vpon this went Daniel vp, and bespyed the kynge that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge þe interpretacyon, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions & they shuld beseech the God of heuen for grace in this secret. Daniel and his fellows wth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perswyed not. Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a visy on by nyghte. And Danyel prayed the God of heauen. Daniel also crept lowe, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdom and strength at his owne * he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandyng to those to those that vnderstand, he openeth the depe secrettes he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in dark-nesse, for the lychte dwelleth wth hym.

I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste sente me wysedome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thyng, that we desyred of the, for thou haste opened the kynge's matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Danyel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wylde at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wylde in Babylon, but hrynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Danyel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man among the prysoners of Iuda, that shal shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Danyel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacyon therof? Danyel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As for this secret for the which the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wylde, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuyl cou-ner that can certifye the kynge of it. * Onely God in Heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kynge, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shuld come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries tellethe the, what is for to come. As for me, thy secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other kynge, but onely that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte. Thou kynge sawest, & beholde, there stode before the a greete ymage whose figure was maruelouse greete, and hys bysage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne golde his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Thy thou sawest tyll the tyme, that with-oute any handes, there was beuene of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that was both of yron and earth, and brake them to poudres: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all together in pe-ces, and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth away from the sonne's floure, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greete mountayne, whiche fulfilleth the whole earth. This is the dreame. And now we shal shewe before the kynge what it meaneth.

* O kynge, thou arte a kynge of kynges.
For the God of heuen hath geuen y a kyngdom ryches, strength, and maiesty: and hath deliue-red the all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men, the beastes of the felde and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominyon ouer them all. Thou art that golden heade. After that there shal aryse another kyngdomme, which shal be lesse then thyne. The thyrd kyngdomme shal be lyke copper, and haue dominacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdomme shal be as strong as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh all thynges: yea, enen as yron beatech eu-ery thyng downe: so shal it beate downe and de-stroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdomme, whiche neuer thelesse shal haue some of the yron grounde myxt wth it, for so muche as thou hast sene the yron myxt wth claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of y-ron and parte of claye, signyfeth: that it shal be a kyngdomme, partly stronge & partly weake.

And where as thou sawest yron myxt wth clay they shal myngle them selues wth the sede of synple people, and yet not contynue one wth another lyke as yron wyll not be souldered wth a potte shearde.

In the dayes of these kynge's, shall the God of heauen set vp an euerylastyng kyngdomme which shal not perishe, and his kyngdomme shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yea, y same shal breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes but it shal endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of the mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, & earth the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greete God shewed the kynge, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Then y kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Danyel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meat offerynges and swete oboures vnto hym. The kynge answered Danyel, and sayde: yee, of a trouth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kynge's, and an opener of secrettes: seynge thou canst discouer this mysterie. So y kynge made Danyel a great man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.

* He made hym ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Danyel intreated the kynge for Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offycers in y land of Babylon: But Danyel hym selfe remayned styl in the courte by the kynge.

The .iiij. Chapter.

The kynge sette vp a golden ymage, whiche he commaunded to be worshipped. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednago refused because they despyred the kynge's commaundment.
They were brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worship the ymage, they refused to do it, and were put into a burnyng furnace. God then appeared to them and they were deli-uered. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the light of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, whiche was forty cubytes hie, and fyre cu-bites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Bura in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together y dukes lordes and nobles, y iudges and offycers, the debytes and byzness: w all the rulers of the lande that they might come to the dedicacyon of the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp. So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, Judges and officers, debytes and threues with all the rulers of þe lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatyng of the ymage, þe Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp the bedel cryed out with all his myght. O ye people, kynnedes and tonges, to you he it sayde: þe when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and all maner of musike ye fall downe and worshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe shall euen þe same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therefore when all the folke hearde the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies, and all kynnde of melody, then all þe people kynnedes and nacjons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, þe Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went euē then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor. O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kynge hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies, and all the other melodies shall fall downe and bow them selues, towarde the golden ymage. Who so then fell not downe and worshipped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Now are there certayne Jewes & whome thou hast set ouer the officers of the lande of Babilon namely, Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundement, yee they wyll not ierue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that þe hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wythe and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde, what? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, wyll not you serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be redy here after. When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and all the other melodies that ye fall downe, and worshyppe the ymage whiche I haue made. But if ye worshyppe it not, ye shall be cast immediatly into an hote burnyng ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye delpue you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered þe king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? our God whome we serue & is able to kepe vs from the hote burnyng ouen (O kynge) I can ryght well delpue vs out of thy handes.

And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou know (O kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whiche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthiest that were in his hoste, for to bynd Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyre cotes, hosen, shoes, with theyre other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnyng ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strypte, and the ouen was exceedyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach and Abednago þe flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men, Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnyng ouen, beynge faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge marueled and stode vp in all haste he spake vnto his counsaile, and sayde, dyd not you caste these thre men bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayd vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. he answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men going loule in the myddst of the fyre, and not byng corrupte, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnyng ouen, he spake also and sayde. O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago ye seruautes of the hye god, go forth, and come hither. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsaile came together to se these men, & vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodyes. In so muche that the very heare of theyre heade was not burnte, and theyr clothes vntchaunged: yea, there was no smell of fyre felte vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: & whiche hath sent his aungell, and defended his seruautes, that put theyr truste in him that hath altered the kynges commaundement and reoparde theyr bodyes there vpon, rather then they woulde serue or worshyppe any other God: excepte theyr owne God only.

Therefore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynnedes, and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie agaynst þe God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and theyr houses shall be pyled. Because there is no God þe maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach, Misach and Abednago in þe lande of Babilon.

The iii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor is named agayne Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put ouer of his reame: and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored vnto his kyngdome.

Nabuchodonosor & kynge vnto al people, kynnedes, and tonges þe dwell vpon þe whole earth peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens & maruelouse workes, þe hye god hath wrought vpon me.

Dani. ii. a.

I Nabuchodonozor beinge at rest in myne house, and flopyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whych made me afrayed: & the thoughttes that I had vpon my bed, with the visyons of myne heade, troubled me. * Then sente I out a commission, that all they whych were of wyle dome at Babylon shulde be brought before me to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sorlapers, charmers, Caldees, & conuincers of deuils: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they could not shewe me: till at the last, there came one Daniel otherwise called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God: whych hath the sprete of the holye goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayenge: O Balthazar, thou prince of sorlapers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou hast the sprete of the holye goddes, and no secreete is hyd fro the:
tell me therefore, what the visyon of my dreame (that I haue sene, maye signifye. I sawe a vis-on in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verpe hye, great and myghty the heygh reached vnto heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were sayre, he had very much frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The bestes of the feld had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I saw in my heade a visyon vpon my bed and beholde, a watcher and a holye one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayenge Hewe downe the tree, breake of hys bzaunches, shake of hys leaues, and scatce hys frute abroad: that all the bestes maye get them awaye from vnder hym and the foules from hys bzaunches. Neuer the-lesse, leaue the groude of hys roote styll in y<sup>e</sup> earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne feld, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the groude with other wyld beastes.

That mans harte of hys shall be taken from hym, and the bestes harte shall be gyuen him till scuen yeres be come and gone vpon hym.

Thys carande of the watcher, is a commaun-dement grounded and sought out in the counsell of hym, that is moost holye to learne men for to vnderstande, that the best hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyue them, to whom it lyketh hym, and byngeth the verpe outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonozor haue sene. Therefore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth for so muche as all the wyle men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meane. But thou canst do it, for the sprete of y<sup>e</sup> holye goddes is in the. Then Daniel, whose name was Balthazar held hys peace by the space of one houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So y<sup>e</sup> kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretation therof feare the. Balthazar answered sayeng: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretacio to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest whych was so great and myghty, whose heygh reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth into all the world, whose leaues were sayre, and the frute muche, vnder the whiche the bestes of the feld had theyr habitation, and vpon whose bzaunches the foules of the ayre dyd sit.

Euen thou: O kyng arte the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnes increaseth and reacheth vnto heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of y<sup>e</sup> earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holye angell, that came downe from heauen, and sayd, hewe downe the tree, and best rope it: yet leaue the groude of the roote in the earth and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron & stele. He shall be wet with the dewe of heauen and his part shall be with the bestes of the feld, till vii. yeres be come and gone vpon hym: Thys (O kyng) is y<sup>e</sup> interpretacion, yea, it is the very deuyce of him, that is best of all & it toucheth my lorde the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from me, & thy dwel-lyng shall be with the bestes of the feld, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an ore. Thou muste be wet with the dewe of the heauen: yea, scuen yeres shall come, and go vpon the, till y<sup>e</sup> knowe * that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyue them to whome he lyst.
Moreouer, where as it was sayd, y<sup>e</sup> the roote of the tree shulde be lefte styll in the groude: it betokeneth, y<sup>e</sup> thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherefore O kyng be contente with my counsell, that thou mayest redeme thy synnes with almes: & thyne offences with merce to poore people: for thys shall be an healyng of thyne erreure. All these thynges touch the kyng Nabuchodonozor.

So after .xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde: Thys is the greates cite of Babylon, whiche I my selfe (with my power and strengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my maiesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voyce from heauen, sayenge O kyng Nabuchodonozor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens companye: thy dwellinge shall be with the bestes of the feld, so that thou shalt eate grasse as an ore, till scuen yeres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he maye gyue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The verpe same houre wasthys matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonozor: so that he was caste out of mens companye, and dyd eate grasse lyke an ore. hys bodye was wet with the dewe of heauen, till hys heeres were as great as Eagles fethers, and his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When thys tyme was past, I Nabuchodo-

The v. Chapter.

Balthazar king of Baby. on. abuſyng the beſtite of the temple, ſeeth an hant worſhyng in the wal. He ſeeth ſapers, called of the kyng, can not expounde the wyſe: ſo is Daniel called, which readeth it & interpreteth it al. Balthazar, he ſayng ſhaper: Darius ſuccedeth in hys rowne.

King Balthazar made a great banquet to hys thouſande lordes: with al thoſe thouſande he made great chere, & whē he was dronken with wine, he comaū- ded to bypnye hym the golden & ſyluer beſſels * which his father Nabuchodonozor had taken out of the temple at Jeruſalem: that the kyng & his lordes with his queene and concubynes myght drynke therout.

1. p. cxxvi. c

So they brought the golden beſſel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes houſe at Jeruſalem. Then the kyng and hys Lordes with his queene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne and prayſed they: Idols of golde, ſyluer, copper, yron, wodde and ſtone.

In the very ſame houre there appeared ſyn- gers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyrtynge, ryght ouer agaynſt the candleſtycke vpon the playne wal in the kinges palace, and the kyng ſawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * The chawnged the kyng hys countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, ſo that the ropes of hys bodye ſhoke, & his knees ſmote one agaynſt the other. * Wherefore the kyng cryed myghte- ly, that they ſhulde bypnye hym the charmers, Caldees, and conurers of deuils. The kyng ſpake alſo to the wyſemen of Babylon, & ſayd: Who ſo can reade thys wyrtynge, and ſhewe me the playne meanyng therof ſhal be clothed with purple haue a chepne of golde aboute hys necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Item. 1. a

Dan. ii. b

Upon thys, came all the kynges wyſemen: but they coude neyther reade the wyrtynge, nor ſhewe the kyng what it ſignified. Then was the kyng ſore aſtayed, in ſo muche, that hys co- lour chawnged, and hys lordes were ſore vexed

So by reaſon of this matter, that had happened to the kyng and hys Lordes, the Quene wente vpon her ſelfe in the banquet houſe, and ſpake vnto the kyng, ſayng: O kyng, God ſaue thy ſelfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chawged. For wher there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the ſpyete of the holye goddes wthin hym, * as it was ſene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnder- ſtandynge and wyſedome lyke the goddes. Yea the kyng Nabuchodonozor thy father made thys ma. cheſe of the ſothſayers, charmers, Cal- dees, and readers of deſtenes. becauſe that ſuch an aboundant ſpyete, knowlege and wyſedome (to expounde dreames, to open ſecretes, and to declare harde doubtes) was founde in hym. yea, euen in Daniell, whom the kyng named Bal- thazar. Let thys ſame Daniell be ſent for, and he ſhall tell what it meaneth.

Dan. ii. a

Then was Daniell brought before the king. So the kyng ſpake vnto Daniell, and ſayde: Art thou that Daniell: one of the prſoners of Iuda, whome my father the kyng brought out of Jewry? I haue herde ſpeake of the, that thou haſt the ſpyete of the holye goddes experience and vnderſtandynge, and that there hath bene great wyſedome founde in the. Nowe haue there bene broughte me, wyſe and conynge charmes, to reade thys wyrtynge and to ſhewe me the mea- nyng therof. But they coude not tell me, what thys matter ſignified. Then harde I ſaye, that thou canſt expounde darke thinges, and declare harde doubtes. Well, then yf thou canſt reade thys wyrtynge, and ſhewe me the meaning ther- of, thou ſhalt be clothed w purple, haue a chepne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and ſayd before the kyng: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy ſelfe, or gyue thy ryche gyftes to another: yet not the leſſe, I wyll rede the wyrtynge vnto the kyng and ſhewe hym the interpretation therof. * O kyng heare. God the hyeſt gaue vnto Nabucho- donozor thy father, the dignite of a kinge wyth worſhypp and honoure, ſo that all people, kyn- redes and tonges ſtoode in awe and feare of hym by reaſon of the hys eſtate, that he had lente hym. For why, he ſhewe whome he wolde: he ſmote, whom it pleaſed hym. Agayne: whom he wolde he ſet vp and whom he lyſt he put down. * But becauſe hys harte was ſo proude, & hys ſtomack ſet ſo faſt vnto wyſfulneſſe: he was depoled fro hys kyngly trone, and hys maieſtye was taken fro hym. He was ſhut out fro amonge men, hys harte was lyke a beaſtes harte, and hys dwell- yng was wyth the wyldre aſſes: he was ſayne to eate graſſe lyke an oxe, & hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of the heauen, tyl he knewe, that the hyeſt had power vpon the kyngdomes of me and ſetteth other them, whom he lyſt.

Dan. ii. c

Dan. iii. b

And thou hys ſonne (O Balthazar) for all thys, haſte not ſubmytted thyne harte, though he thou kneweſt al theſe thynges: but haſt magni- fied thyſelfe aboue the Lord of heauen, ſo that the beſſels of hys houſe were brought before the

that thou, and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene and thy concubynes, myghte drynke wyne therout. And hast prayed the Idoles of syluer and golde copper and yron, of wood and stone, whych nether se, heare nor vnderstande. As for the God in whose hande consisteth thy breath, & all thy wayes thou hast not loved hym.

Therefore is the palme of thyng hande sente hyther from hym, to token vpon thyng wyrtynge. And thys is the scripture, that is wyrtynen vpon: Mene, Chetel, Phares. Now the interpretaciō of the thinge is this Mene, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Chetel, thou arte wayed in the balauce, and arte founde to lyght Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to clothe Daniell wyth purple, to hange a chapne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion concerning hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyng part of hys kyngdome. & The verpe same nyght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, & Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngdome, beyng. lxxij. yere of age.

The vi. Chapter.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The magnificence of an act agaynst Daniell. The proclamation of the acte wherof Daniell is accusid vnto the kyng as a traitor. Daniell is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng: He is deliuered by sayth in God: Daniells accusers are put into a Lyons denne to be consumed. Darius by the proclamation of a decree, maynetyth the God of Daniell.

Unpleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdom an C and xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all hys kyngdom about. About these he set thre prynces (of whome Daniell was one, that the Lordes might gyne accōptes vnto them, & the kyng to be vnderseald. But Daniell excused all these prynces and lordes, for the sperite of God was plente in him, so that the kyng was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the prynces & lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniell some quarrell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coude they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For wher he was so saythfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestye founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we can get no quarrell agaynst thys Daniell, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Vpon thys, went the prynces and lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayd thus vnto hym: Kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greute estates of the realme, as the prynces, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determind to put out a commaundement of thyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so despyeth any petition, ether of any God or man (wythin these xxx. dayes) excepte it be oulp of thyng, O kyng: the same person may be caste into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, confirme thyng statute, and make a wyrtynge: of the thyng whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wyrtynge & confirmed it. Nowe when Daniell vnderstode that thyng wyrtynge was made, he went into his house and the wyndowes of hys wall toward Jerusaleme stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys petition, & prayed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniell makynge hys petition, and prayenge vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng, and spake before hym concerning his commaundement, sayenge. O kyng, halfe thou not subscribed the statute: that wythin xxx. dayes who so requyeth hys petition of anye God or man but onely of thyng selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into thyng denne of the Lyons. The kyng answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniell one of the prisoners of Iuda, O kyng, regardeth nether the, nor thyng statute, & thou hast made but in vain: his petition thre tymes a daye. When the kyng herd these wordes he was sore grieved, and wolde haue excused Daniell, to deliuer him, and put of thyng matter, vntill the sunne wente downe to the intente that he myghte saue hym.

These men perceyvinge the kynges mynde sayde vnto hym, knowe thys: O kyng, that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute whiche the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. & Then the kyng bad them byng Daniell, and they cast him into the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniell, and sayde thyng God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euen he shal defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of thyng denne, thys the kyng sealed wyth hys owne rynge, & wyth the sygnet of hys prynces: that the kynges commaundement concerning Daniell shulde not be broken.

So the kyng went vnto his palace, and ate no meate that nyght nether was there any myscellie brought in before hym, nether coude he take any slepe. But by tymes in the nyght at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and went in all hast vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cryed wyth a piteous voyce vnto Daniell, peace kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniell: O Daniell, thou seruante of the lyuynge God, is not thyng God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniell sayd vnto the kyng. O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. & My God hath sent hys angell whych hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For wher myne vngyltynesse is founde oute before hym And as for me, O kyng, I neuer offēded the.

Then was the kyng exceedingly glad, and commaunded to take Daniell out of the denne. So Daniell was brought out of the denne, & no manner of hurt, was founde vpon him. For he put his trust in hys god. And as for those men which had accused Daniell, the kyng commaunded to byng them.

them, and to cast them in the Lyons denne: them, they: chydre and they: wpues. * So the Lyons had the maistrp of them, and brake all they: bones asunder, or ever they came at the grounde.

Dan. xii. 1. * After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people, kyngdomes, and tonges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied wpthyon. Up com- maundemente is, in all my dominion and kyng- dome, that men feare and stande in awe of Da- niels God.

The vii. Chapter.

Ca. A vision of four beasts is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of four kyngdomes of the world. Of the power and increase of Antichrist. Of the euill as- sault of the goode of Christ.

At the fyrst yere of Baltazar kynge of Babilon, sawe Daniell a dreame. & a vision was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniell spake and sayd: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and be- holde: the four wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and four great beasts came vpon the see one lyke another.

Jer. xli. 1. b The fyrst was as a lion, and yet had he eagle- wings wpnges. I sawe, that hys wpnges were plucked from hym, and he taken away: from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans harte.

Jer. xli. 1. b Beholde, the second beast was like a * Beere, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge hys teeth in hys mouth he had. iii. greete longe teeth and it was sayde vnto hym: Arise: rate vp muche feike. Then I looked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leopard, this had wpnges as a foule, * even foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, & there was power gy- uen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greete pzon teeth it deuoured and destroyed, & stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. It was farre vni- like the other beasts that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

Jer. xli. 1. b And beholde, there came vpon amonge them another lytle borne, before whome there were thre of the fyrst hornes plucked away. Beholde this borne had eyes lyke a man: and mouth speaking presumptuous thynge. * I looked tyl the seates were prepared, and tyl the olde aged sat hym downe. Hys clothynge was as whyte as snow, and the heetes of hys head lyke pure wall. Hys throne was lyke the fyre flame, and hys wy. lcs as the burninge fyre. There drewe forth a fyre streame: and wentd oute from hym.

Jer. xli. 1. b * A thousande tymes a thousande setured him. A. thousande tymes a thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, & the bones opened. Then toke I hede therevnto, because of the hope of the proude wordes: which the borne spake. I be- holde tyl the beast was slayne, and his body de- stroyed, * geuen ouer to be byente in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beasts also it was taken awaye, but they: lyues were pro- longed for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a ma, whych wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regal, that al people, tribes and tonges shulde serue hym. * Hys power is an euerlasting power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hart was vexed, * & I Daniell had a troubled spete with. in me, & the visions of my heade made me as- tayed, tyl I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth, concernynge all these thyn- ges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thynge.

These foure great beasts, are foure kynges whych shall aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truth, concerning the fourth beast, whych was so farre vni- like the other beasts, and so horrible, whose teeth were of pzon, & hys nayles of brasse whych deuoured and destroyed and stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. I desy- red also to knowe the truth, as touchynge * ten hornes that he had vpon hys heade and this o- ther whych came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which borne had eyes & a mouth that spake presumptuous thynge, and looked wpth a grymme vpsage then hys fe- lowes. I behelde, and the same borne made ba- tell agaynst the sayntes, yea, and gat the victo- ry of them vntyl the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the che- ffe sayntes: and tyl the tyme that the sayntes had hys kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer. That fourth beast shalbe the fourth kyngdome vpon earth it shalbe more then al o- ther kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

* The ten hornes, are ten kynges, that shall arise out of the kyngdome, after whome there shall stande by another, whych shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kynges, and shall speake wordes agaynst the best of all he shall destroye the sayntes of the most hest, * & shalbe gyuen vnder, vs power, * vntyl a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that hys power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be de- stroyed, & pershe at the last. As for hys kyngdom, power, and al myghte that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe gyuen to the holy people of the mooste hest, * whose kyngdome is euerlastynge: yea, al powers shal serue and obeye him. Thus farre extende the wordes. Amertheles. I Daniell was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged changed * but þ wordes I kept styl in my hart

The viii. Chapter.

A visyon of a strete betwene a ramme and an hegoate The vnderstanding of the visyon is of the battel betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the thames kynge Antiochus.

In the thyrde yere of þe raigne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a visyon vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyrst, I sawe in a visyon (and when I saw it, I was at Susis in the chiefe cite, whych lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the visyon, me thought I was by the ryuer of Alai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two horne: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp be hynde. I sawe that thys ramme pulshed wth hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and agaynst the south: so that no beastes myght stande before hym, nor defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & wared great lye. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wyethorne betwixte hys eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearclly vpon hym wth hys myght. I sawe hym drawe nye, vnto the Ramme, beyng verie feare vpon hym: pea, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. After that had the Ramme so much strenght as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder hys fete, and no man was able to deliuer the Ramme out of hys power.

The goate wared excedyng greete, & when he was at the strongeste, hys greete horne was broken also. * Then grew there ocher foure such lyke in the steade, towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. Pea, oute of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam pet vp another, whych wared maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and toward the * prynciple pleasaunt lande. It grew vnto the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the star-res also, and trode them vnder fete.

Pea, it grew vnto the prync of the hoost from whom the dayly offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offryng (because of wickednes, that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, & so to prospere in al thynges, that it went about.

Upon thys I harde one of the sayntes speakinge, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked hys question. Howe longe shall thys visyon of the dayly sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the powre shall so be troden vnder fete? And he answered hym: Vnto the eueryng and the morn-ynge, euen two thousande and thre hundred dayes: than shall the Sanctuary be desed agayn.

Nowe when I Daniel had sene thys visyon and sought for the vnderstanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thyng lyke vnto a man.

And I harde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Alai whych cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make thys man to vnderstande the visyon. So he came and stode by me. But I was afraied at hys com-pyng, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of ma-marcke well, for in the last tyme shall thys visyon be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakinge vnto me, I wared saynt, so that I sank downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge. Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last wyth: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfilled.

The Ramme whych thou sawest wth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Persians: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greete horne that stode betwixte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure ocher rose vp in the steade. It signyfeth, that out of thys people shall stand vp * foure kynngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kynngdomes, whyle vngodlynes is a growyng, there shall arise a kynge of an vnchamefast face, whych shall be wylde in darcke speakinges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere he shall shewe the stronge and holpe people. And thorowe hys chastynes, falschod shall prospere in hys hande, his herte shall be proude, and many one shall be put to death in hys welthynesse. He shall stande vp agaynst the prync of prynces, * but he shall be destroyed without hande. And thys visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the eueryng and the mornynge. * Therefore wyte thou vnto thys syghte, for it shall be longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very saynt, so that I laye syke many dayes but when I rose vp I wente aboute the kynnges busynesse, and mar-uelled at þ visyon, neuer theles, no man knew of it

The Prophecy.

Marc. 1. d. * We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene dysobediente and gone backe yea, we haue departed fro al thy preceptes and iudgements.

13 We wolde neuer folowe thy seruantes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges & princes, to oure forfathers and to al the people of the lande. * Exeno. 1. d. O Lorde, ryghteousnes belongeth vnto the, vnto vs petepneth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe thys daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nye, thowowe out al the landes. Wherein thou haste throwed them, because of the offences, that they had done agaynst the.

C Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kynges, & princes, to oure forfathers, euen to vs all, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, pertapneth merce and forgiveness. As for vs, we are gone backe fro hym and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in hys lawes, * psal. cxi. a. which he layd before vs by hys seruantes the prophetes yea, al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe fro thy lawe, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce.

Deu. xxiij. Wherefore, the curse and oth * that is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses the seruante of God * agaynst whom we haue offended is powred vpo vs. * and. 1. b. 1. c. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our iudges & iudged vs to brynge vpo vs such a great plage as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all thys plage, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wickednes, & to be learned in thy veritie. Therefore hath the Lord made hast, to brynge thys plage vpon vs, for the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, in all hys workes which he doth for wyse: we wolde not hearken vnto hys voyce.

14 * And now, O Lorde our God: that wyth a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy selfe a name whiche remapneth this daye, we haue sinned O Lorde, & done wyckedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the, from thy cite of Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why: for oure synnes sake, and for thy wyckednesse of oure forfathers, is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Howe therefore, O oure God, heare thy prayer of thy seruante, and his intercession. O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast: for the Lordes sake.

O my God: for thy cite, and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowlegynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, manye so myne intercession before the Lorde my God, for the holy hill sake of my God yea, while I was yet speakinge in my prayer beholde, the man Sabriel. (* who I had sene before in the visyon, came sypenge to me, and touched me aboute the offrynge tyme in the eueninge. He informed me, and spake vnto me. O Daniell sayd he: I am now come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou beganest to make thy prayer, it was so deuysed, and therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? * For thou arte a man greatly beloued.

Wherefore, ponde the matter wel, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the visyon. Ixx. weekes are determined ouer the people and ouer the holy cite that the wyckednesse maye be consumed, that thy synne maye haue an ende that the offence maye be reconciled, and to brynge in euery lastynge ryghteousnesse to fulfill the visyon & the prophetes and announce the moost holy one vnderstande thys then, and marke it well that from the tyme it shalbe concluded * to go and re-payre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ or the annointed) prince there shalbe seuen weekes. The wall the stretes and wallis be buylded agayne Ixx. weekes but wyth harde troublous tyme. After these Ixx. weekes, shall Christ be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. The wall there come a people wyth the prince, & destroye the cite and the Sanctuary and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde wyth many for the space of a weake. and when the weake is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meat offrynge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacio, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shall continue to the ende.

The .x. Chapter.

There appeared vnto Daniell a man clothed in lynen whiche sheweth hym wherefore he is sent.

D the thyrde yere of kyng Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwise called Balthazer) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what his visyon was. At the same tyme, I Daniell moued for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for fleshe & wyne there came none wpythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once annoynte my selfe, tyll the whole thre weekes were out.

Elpon the .xxiiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greete floud, called * Tygris I lyft vp myne eyes, and looked and beholde a man clothed in lynen, whose loynes were girded wpyth fyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, hys face (to lōke vpon) was lyke lychtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and fete were lyke fayre glysternynge metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the * Daniell alone sawe thys visyon, & the men that were with me, sawe it not but a great fear fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe thys greete visyon, so longe tyl there remayned nomoze strength wpythin me. Pea, I lost my coloure cleane I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet harde I þ voice of thys wordes, and as soone as I harde it, faynt nesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche let me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto me: * O Daniell, thou well beloued man take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente.

Dan. iii. c. 12

And when he had sayd these wordes, I fode vntrembling. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniel for why: sence þ fyrst day that þ dydest set thyn hart to vnderstande, and dydest cha- sten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begynest to speake, had not þ prince ouer þ king dome of the Perses wythstande me xii. dayes. But lo, * Michaell one of þ chiefe prynces, came to helpe me, & I was left to continue ther wyth þ kynges of Persia. & am come to shewe the what shall happen vnto thy people in the later dayes. For it wylbe lōge yet or the visyon be fulfilled.

Howe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the groude and helde my tounge. Beholde, there touched my lyp- pes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that fode before me, O my Lorde, my ioyntes are loosed in þ vy- syon and there is nomoz strength wpythin me. Howe may my Lordes seruante the talke wpyth a Lorde seyng there is no strengthe in me, so that I can not take my breath: vpon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man: and comforted me, sayenge: O thou man so well be- loued feare not be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the: nowe wyl I go to fyght wpyth the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grecklande shall come. Neuerthe- lesse I wyl shewe the that thyng, that is faste noted in the scripture of truth. And as for pon- der matters, there is none that helped me in the, but Michaell your prince.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ A prophete of the knyghts of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Egypt, and of the bonde ther of, and of the battell wpyth the kyngdome of Spya. Of the prynces that fye vnto the kyng of Egypt, whome Antiochus the kyng of Spya persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto the Antichrist. The prync of Antiochus.

In the fyrste yere of Darius of Media I fode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strengthe hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shall stande vpyt thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre ry cher then they all. And when he is in the cheefste power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke euery mā agaynst the realme of Grecklande. * Then shall there arysen yet a myghty kyng, that shall rule wpyth greete dominion, and do what hym lyst. * And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shall be destroyed, and deuyded toward the four wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue suche power and dominion as he: but hys kyngdome shall be scattered, yea, euery amonge other then those. And the kyng of the south shall be myghty, then hys other prynces. And one shall be stronger then he, and shall rule hys dominion wpyth great power.

And in the ende of peaces, they shall be toynd together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kyng of þ North, for to make frendshyp, but he shall not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shall he be able to endure tho- rowe hys myght. but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shall be deliuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vpyth in hys steade whiche wpyth power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to hys strength. As for they: Idols and prynces, wpyth they: costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shall cary them awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall raygne moze peaces then the kyng of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of þ South, he shall be fayne to turne agayn into his owne land. Wherfore his sones shall be displeased, & shall ga- ther together a myghty great host of people: & one of them shall come, & go thorowe lyke a wa- ter floude: then shall he retorne, & go forth wpyth despayre and boastynge vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shall be angrye and shall come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north yea, he shall bypunge a greete mul- tude of people together, and a greete heape shall be geuen into hys hāde: these shall he cary away wpyth great pryde, for so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousandes, neuerthelesse, he shall not preuaile. For the kyng of the north shall ga- ther (of the newe, a greater heape of people then afore, and come forth, after a certayne tyme and peaces) wpyth a myghty host, and exceeding greete good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vpyth agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shall craue them selues: to fulfill the visyon, and then fall. So the kyng of þ north shall come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced cityes: And þ po- wer of them of the south shall not be able to a- byde hym, & the beste men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resist hym. Shortly whē he cometh, he shall handle hym as he lyst, & no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasaunt countre, whiche tho- rowe hym shall be destroyed: he shall set hys face wpyth all hys power to obtayne hys kyngdome, & to be lyk it. Yea, that shall he do, & gyue hym unto the daughters amonge women, to destroy hym. But he shall saye, neither shall he optayne hys purpose. After this shall he set hys face vnto the Iles & take many of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, besyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, to combe and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vnto hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, nor in battell. In hys steade there shall arise a vyle persone, not hoiden worthy of a kynge's dignitie: this shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wryth fayre wordes. he shall fight agaynst the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the prince of the couenaunt.

D So after that he hath taken truce wryth him he shall handle dyscreetfully that he may get vnto ouercome hym wryth a small flocke: & so wryth certynnesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale other wyse, then ether hys fathers or grandfather dyd. For he shall destroye the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all theyr substance, pryncypally thoughtes agaynst the stroge holdes, & that for a tyme. hys power & harte shall be stered vnto a great army agaynst the kyng of the south where thorow the kyng of the south shall be moued then vnto battell, wryth a greates myghtye host also. Neuertheles he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shall hurt him so that his host shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kynges shall be minded to do mischief, and talke of dyscreete at one table: but they shall not prospere, for wher the ende shall not come yet vnto the tyme appoynted * then shall he go home agayne into hys owne lande wryth great good, and set hys harte agaynst the holpe couenaunt, he shall busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, & go towarde the south. So shall it happen other wyse then at the fyrste, yet once agayne. And wher * the shippes wryth Italias shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea he shall turne him, and drawe such vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

I He shall set myghtye men to vnbalowe the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offering, and to set vp the abhominable desolation. And such as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wryth fayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe theyr God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shall enfourme the multitude and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wryth swerde, wryth fyre, wryth captiuitie and wryth the takinge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp wryth a lytle helpe: but manye shall cleaue vnto them saynedlye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstandinge shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purified and clenched, tyl the tyme be out. for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what him lyst * he shall exalte and magnifie him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thynges agaynst the God of all goddes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is decayed already. He shall not regard the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women. Yea, he shall not care for anye God, for he shall magnifie him selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worship the myghtye stout God and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall he honoure wryth gold and syluer, wryth precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels.

Thus shall he do, thorow his stronge fenced places, settinge vp his straunge God whom he confelleth and encreasing his gloire. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, he shall geue them great worship & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande wryth rewarde. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south strue wryth him, and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst him wryth charrettes, horsemen and wryth a great number of shippes. He shall come into the landes, destroy & go thorow he shall enter also into a fayre pleasaunt lande: Many cities and countreys shall decaye * except Edom, Moab, & the best of the children of Ammon, which shall escape fro his hand. He shall stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypt shall not escape him. For thorow his goyng in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia. * Neuertheles, the tidings out of the East & the north shall trouble him, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude. The tetes of his palace shall be pitched betwixt the two sees, vpon the hil of the noble Sanctuary, for he shall come to his death * and then shall no man helpe him.

The xlii. Chapter:

He propheseth the resurrection of the dead. The darknesse of the prophete of Daniel.

In the tyme wyl come also, that the great prince * Michael, wher he shall seth on thy peoples syde, shall arise vp, for * there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there began to be any people vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be deliuered, yea, all those that be founde wryten in the booke * Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shall awake some to the euill, & some to perpetual shame and reproche * the wylle (such as haue taught other) shall glasse, as the shynnyng of heauen & those that haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shall be as the starres, worlde wrythout ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and scale the booke tyl the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here & there, and then shall knowledge increase

And one of them sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in linnen, and stode about vpon the waters of the floude: howe longe shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes?

E Then herde I the man with the linnen clothes, which stode about vpon the waters of y floude, when he helde vp his right and left hand vnto heauen, and swore by hym which lyueth for ever, * that it shall tarpe for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of y holy people is cleane scattered abroad, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

D I hearde it wel but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my Lorde, what shall happen after that? He answered: So thy wape Daniel, for these wordes shall be closed vp, and sealed, til the last tyme: and many shall be purged, cleansed and tryed (as it were with fyre.) But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly, * and those wycked, as many of them as they be, shall haue no vnderstanding. As for such as haue vnderstanding, they shall regarde it. And from the tyme forth that y dayly offering shall be put downe, and the abominable desolatyon set vp, there shall be a. 1270. dayes. * I will is hym that wapteth and cometh to the. 1270. dayes. She conceived yet agayne, and bare a doughter: And he sayd vnto hym. Call her name Lozhamah that is, not obtaining mercie. * For I will haue no pitye vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembrance. * Neuerthelesse, I will haue mercie vpon the house of Iuda, and will saue them euen thowge the Lorde theyr God. But I will not deliuer them thowge any bowe, sword, battayle, horses, and horsemen.

Now when she had waped Lozhamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayd he. call his name Loamp. For why? ye are not my people: therefore will I not be your God. and though the nombre of the chyldren of Israel be as the lande of the see, whiche can neyther be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayd vnto them, * ye be not my people: eue there shall it be thus reported of them * they be y chyldren of the luyng God. * Then shall y chyldren of Iuda, and the chyldren of Israel, be gathered together agayne, and chosse them selues one hed, and then departe out of the land. for great shall be the daye of Israel.

The people is called to repentance.

I El your brethren, that they are my people and your sisters, that they haue obtained mercie. As for your mother ye shall chide with her, and reprove her, * for she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband: onles she put away her whoredome out of my syght, & her aduouty from her breasts. If no, I shall strip her naked, and set her * euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wyldecnes, and slaye her for thyrs. I shall haue no pitye also vpon her chyldren: * for they be the chyldren of fornicacyon.

Thy mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them * is come to confusyon. For she sayde. I will go after my louers that gyue me my water and my bread, my woll and flaxe, myne oyle and my dyrnye. But I will hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her fore steppes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shall seeke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye. wel, I will go turne agayne to my first husbände. for at that tyme was I better at ease then now. But this wold she not knowe where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, and golde, * whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore now will I take my corne and wyne agayne in theyr season, and set agayne my woll and my flaxe which I gaue her to coner her shame. * And now will I discover her folpshenes euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of myne handes. Moreover, I will take awaye all her myrrour * her holy dayes her newe moones, her Sabbothes, and al her solemne feastes: I will destroye her vyneyardes and figtrees, though she sayth. lo, here at my rewardest that my louers haue gyuen me. I This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Deas the sonne of Neery * in the dayes of Deas Joathan, Ahas, and Iezekias kynges of Iuda, and in the tyme of Ieroboam the sonne of Joas kyng of Israel. First when the Lorde spake vnto Deas, he sayd vnto hym. * So thy way, take an hart lotte to thy wyfe, and gette chyldren by her, for the land hath committed great whordom against the Lord. So he went & toke Gomert, the doughter of Deblaim, which conceived and brought forth a son. And the Lord sayd vnto hym call his name Jezrael, for * I will shortly auenge the bloud of Jezrael vpon the house of Iehu. * I will bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then will I breake the bow of Jezrael in the valley of Jezrael.

The.iii. Chapter.

A complaynt agaynſt the people and the preaſtes of Iſrael.

Hear the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Iſrael. For ſ Lord muſt punyſh them ſ dwel in the laide. And whye there is no trueth, there is no mercey, there is no knowledge of god in the lande: but ſwearyng, lypng, manſlaugh ter, thefte and aduoutry haue gotten the vpper hande: and one gyltynelle foloweth another.

 Therefore ſhall the lande be in a miſerable caſe, & all they that dwell therein ſhall be rooted oute.
 The beaſtes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the ſpythes in the ſee ſhall dye: Yet is there none that wyl chaſten noz reprove an other. For * thy people rebuketh the preaſtes, which ſhuld reſourme other men.

Therefore ſtombleſt thou in the daye tyme, & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wyl bypnyng thy mother to ſcylence: and whye * my people pe ryſh, bycauſe they haue no knowledge. Seynge then that ſ haſt reſuſed vnderſtandynge, ther fore wyl I reſuſe the alſo. ſo that thou ſhalt no more be my preſt. And for ſo much as thou haſt forgotten the lawe of thy God, I wyl alſo for get thy chyldren. The more they increaſed in ſ multrytude, the more they ſpynned agaynſt me, therefore wyl I chaunge theyre honoure in to ſhame. * They cate vp the ſpynnes of my people and courage them in theyre wyckednes. * Thus the preaſte is become lyke the people. Therefore I wyl punyſhe them for theyre wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordynge to theyre owne p imaginacyons. * They ſhall ate, and not haue ynough. They haue vſed whozdomme, therefore ſhall they not proſpere: and whye they haue for ſaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whozdomme, wyne, and dronkenneſſe taketh the heart awaye. * My people aſke counſayle at theyre ſtookes, theyre ſtaffe muſt tell them. For a whozphym pnd hath deceyued them ſo that they commit fornicacion agaynſt their God. * They make ſacrifyces vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne theyre incenſe vpon the hylls: pea among the okes, groues, and buſhes, for there are good ſhadowes. Therefore your daughters are becom harlottes, and your ſpouſes haue broken theyre wedlok I wyl not punyſh your daughters for beynge deſpoyled, and your bypdes ſ became who res: * ſeynge ſ fatherg them ſelues haue medled with harlots, and offered vnthyſtes. but ſ peo ple that wyl not vnderſtand, muſt be punyſhed.

Though thou Iſrael arte diſpoſed to playe the harlot, yet ſhuldeſt not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou ſhouldeſt not haue runned vnto Gilgal, * noz haue gone vp to Bethauem: noz haue ſwozne, the Lorde ſpuech. For Iſrael is gone backe lyke a wanton cow. The Lord ther fore ſhal make her fede as the lambe that goeth aſtrape. And where as Ephraim is become par taker of ydols: well, let hym go, theyre dronken neſſe hath put them back, and brought them to whozdomme. Theyre rulers loue rewarde, bypnyng ſaye they to theyre owne ſhame. I wynde ſhal take holde of theyre fetters: and they ſhal be con founded in theyre offrynges.

The.v. Chapter.

A ſonnet for preaſtes and rulers of Iſrael.

Re preaſtes, heare thys, take hede, O thou houſhold of Iſrael: gyue eare, O thou kynglye houſe, for it were your e part to ſe iudgement done. but you are become become a snare vnto Mizpah, and a spread net vnto the mount of Thabor. They shall sacrifice by heapes: and turne farre from the Lorde, and I haue bene a rebuker of them al. * I know Ephraim well ynough, and Israel is not hidde from me, for Ephraim is now become an harlot, and Israel is despised. They are not minded to turne vnto the Lord, for they haue an whorish harte, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

* But the pryde of Israel wyl be rewarded hym in his face: yea bothe Israel and Ephraim shall fall for theyr wyckednesse, and Juda with them also. * They shall come with theyr shepe & bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and broughte by bastarde chyldren: a moneth therfore shall dehouse them with theyr porcyons. Blowe with the shawmes at Gibeon, and with y trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethanien vpon the ponde- syde of Ben Iann. In the tyme of y plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I sayth- fully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are y prin- ces of Juda become lyke them: that remoue the lande markes: Therfore wyl I poure oute my wrath vpon them lyke water. Ephraim is op- pressed, & can haue no rpyght of the law: for why they folowed the doctrynes of vngodlye men. Therfore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Juda a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his specknes and Juda his discafe. * Ephraim went vnto Asur, & sente vnto kynge Jareb: yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of your payne: I am vnto Ephra- im as a lyon, and as a lyons whelp to the house of Juda. Euen I wyl spoyle them, and goo my waye. I wyl take them wyth me, and no man shall rescue them. I wyl go, and retourne to my place, tyll they knowledg that they haue syn- ned, and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

Of Asur, upon causeth a man to turne to God. The wyckednesse of the preachers.

As theyr aduersyte, they shall earlie seke me, and saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde. * for he hath smytten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynd vs by agayne after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye shall raise vs vp, so that we shall lue in his syghte. Then shall we daue vnderstandyng, and endeuor our selues to know the Lorde. he shall go forth as the sprynge of the dawe, and come vnto vs: as the euening and moonyng rayne vpon the earthe.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, how shall I entreat the? seing your loue is lyke a moonyng cloude, and lyke a dewe that goth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, & let them be slayne for my wo: des sake so that thy punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasur in louyng kynednes, and not in offeryng yea in y knowledge of God more then in burnt sacrifice: But euen lyke as Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Silad is a cite of wycked doers of malicious people, and bloude shed- ders. And as they are armed, wayte for hym that passeth by the waye. Suche is the counsaile of y priestes, which with oute a grede counsaile, mur- der cruellelye suche as kepe the waye yea, they darre do all vnspeakable myschefe. I haue yll thynge haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is de- fyled yea, and thou Juda kepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I retorne the captiuitie of my people.

Of the byres and wantonnes of the people.

When I undertake to make Israel hole then the vngodlynes of Ephraim and the wyckednesse of Samaria, cometh to lyght: then go they aboute with lyces therfore the thefe robbers wythin: without the spoyler destroyeth. They consydre not in theyr hartes, that I remembre all theyr wyckednesse. Nowe theyr owne mynchions haue be set them, whiche I se well ynough. * They make the kynge and the dynners, to haue plea- sure in theyr wyckednesse, as a lyce. All these be in aduoucyte, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth when he hath left kneading, tyll ydowe be leached. Euen so goth this daye with oute kynge and dynners, for they begyn to be wood drunken thow we wyne, they vse familiarite with suche as deceyue them. They with the ymaginacion of theyr hart are lyke an ouen, there slepe is all the nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the moonyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges all theyr kynge are fallen, yet is there none of the that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mist amonge y heaten. Ephraim is become lyke a cake that no man turneth. Strangers haue deuoured his strength: yet, he regardeth it not. He wareth full of graue heeres, yet wyl he not know it. * and the pryde of Israel is cast downe before theyr face, yet wyl they not turne to the Lorde theyr God, nor seke hym for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a dowe y begyled, and hath no hart. * Now call they vpon the Egyptians now go they to the Assyrians but while they be going here & there, I wyl spread my net ouer the, and drawe them downe as the fowles of y ayre: and accorde yng as they haue bene warned, so wyl I punysh them. * No be vnto the, for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. * I am he that rede- med them, and yet they dissemble with me. * They call not vpon me with theyr hartes, but lye pou- lyng vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and drynke, and me they wyl not obeye: I haue taughte them, and defended theyr acme: yet do they ymagine my chafe agaynst me. They turne them selues, but not to the moost hyest, and are become as a bro- ken bowe. Theyr dynners shall be slayne with y sword, for the malice of theyr tonges, suche sco- res shall they haue in the lande of Egypt.

The

The vii. Chapter.

The destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of their idolatry.

Et the horne to thy mouth, and blowe swiftly, as an Eagle: shall the enemy come agaynst the house of the Lord: for they haue broken my * couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel shoulde haue sayde vnto me thou art my God, we knowe the but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shall the enemy folow vpon hym. * They haue ordeyned kynge, but not thowme they haue made prynces, and I must not knowe of it. * Of theyr syluer and golde haue they made the ymages, to byngne them selues to destruction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the. how longe wyl it be, or they can be censed. For the calfe came from Israel, the workman made it, therfore can it be no god but euen in peces shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowed wynde, therfore shall they reape a storme.

Theyr sede shall beare no corne, there shall no meale be made of theyr increase: though they reape, yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perishe, the Gentyles shall increate hym as a foule vessel. Spys they went vnto the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyldc Ass in the deserte.

* Ephraim geth rewardes to get louers, though they byze them amonge the hethen, yet now wyl I gather them vp. They shall begyn to be werped wth the burthen of kynge and prynces. Ephraim hath made many altars to do wyckednesse, his altars (I saye:) he had to his synne. Though I shewe them my lawe neuer so moch, they count it but straunge doctrine. Where as they do sacrifice, offering the fleshe, and eatyng it, the Lord wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre theyr wyckednesse, and punishe theyr synnes. * Israel turneth agayn into Egypt they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyld fayre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cityes: * therfore wyl I sende a fyre into theyr cityes, and it shall consume theyr palaces.

The ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Not thou triumphe, O Israel, make no boasting ouer ioyous thynges as do the heathen: for thou hast commytted aduouty agaynst thy God: wherfore rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the corne floozes.

* Therfore shall they nomore enioye the corne floozes and wyne presses, and theyr sweete wyne shall faile them. They wyl not dwell in the Lordes lande: * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypt, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a drinke offering vnto the Lord, neither geue they hym theyr sayne offerings but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that ate them are despyled. For the bread that they haue such lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lord. What wyl ye do then in the solempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lord? Lo they shall get them away for the destruction. Egypt shall receyue them, & Asshe shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe theyr pleasant goodes, and burrees shall be in theyr tabernacles. Bewe sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande: And then shall Israel know, that they were deceyved by a prophet foolyshe and mad, in a transye, for the multitude of thyne iniquitye, God shall multiplye enemies agaynst the Ephraim hath made hym selfe a watchman of my God a prophet that is become a snare to do hurt in euery strete, and abhominacion in the house of bys God. They be gone to far, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore tyme * at Sa baa: * therfore theyr wyckednesse shall be remembred, and theyr synnes punished.

I found Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes and sawe theyr fathers as the spytt * spygges in the toppe of the spygge tree. * But they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye from me to that shameful ydoll, and are become as abhominable as theyr louers. Ephraim sheweth lyke a byrde, so shall theyr glozpe also: Inlomuch that they shall neyther beget, conceiue, nor beare chyldre. And though they byngne vp anye, yet wyl I make them chyldles amonge men. Yea, who shall come to them, when I departe from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is planted in welthyngnesse, lyke as Tyus: but now we must the byngne her owne chyldren forth to the mans fear.

O Lord thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them: geue them an vnfruteful wybe and dyce bycastes. All their wyckednes is done at Gilgal, there do I abhor them. For the vngreatousnesse of theyr owne inuencions: I wyl byrue them oute of my house. I wyl lone them nomore, for all theyr prynces are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, theyr roote is dried vp, so that they shall byngne nomore frute: yea, and though they byngne forth anye, yet wyl I slaye euen the best beloued frute of theyr bodye. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedyent vnto hym: therfore shall they go astraye amonge the heathen.

The x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israel and the ydolles.

Irael was a goodly, * blye, but he hath brought forth vnprofytable frute: yea, the more frute he had, the more altars he made: the more good I byd to their lade the more trendshyp sheweth they to theyr ymages. Their heart is deuided, therfore wyl they be destroyed. The Lord shall breake downe theyr ymages, he shall destroye theyr altars. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge, for why? we haue not feared the Lord. And what shall then the kynge do to vs? They comynne together, and sweare vayne othes. they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment as fwydes in the floozes of the lade.

They

W They that dwell in Samaria have worshipped the calf of Bethanien therefore shall the people mourne ouer them. Yea, and the prestes also that in theyr welthynesse reioyced wpyth them: and whyt it shall passe awaye from them.

It shall be brought to the Assirpan, for a present vnto kynge Iarob. Ephraim that receyueful punishment. Israel shall be confounded for his owne ymaginacions. Samaria with his kynge shall banyshe awaye as the scowme in the water.

The hye palaces of Iuen where Israel do lanne shall be caste downe: theylles and thornes shall growe vpon theyr alters. * Then shall they say to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

Apoc. vi. c.

E Israel, thou hast sinned as * Gabaab dore afoze tyme where they remayned shoulde not y battayle then come vpon y wycked chyldezen as well as vpon the Sabaonites: I wyl chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre: the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punish them for theyr great wyckednesse. Ephraim was vntome, as a come that is bled to go to plowe, therefore I loued hym, and fell vpon his sayre necke: I droue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, & Jacob played the husbanded man. Howe vnto e pyghtousnesse, and reape the frutes of welldoing plowe vpon your frend lande, for it is tyme to seke the Lorde, tpyl he come and rapne rightousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynesse, ye haue reaped iniquitie, you haue eaten y frute of lyes. Scynge thou puttest thy confydence in thyne owne wayes, and lenest to the multitude of thy woorthyes: there shall growe a sedicion amonge thy people. All thy stronge cityes shall be layde waste, euen as Salinana was destroyed with his familyers thozow hym that was auenged of Arbel, in the daye of battayle, where the mother perished with her chyldezen. Eue so shall it go with you (O Bethel) because of poure malicious wyckednes. Lye as the morning goth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

I learned Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me that wolde haue helped them. I led them wpyth cordes of frendshyp, and wpyth bandes of loue. I was euen he that layd the poke vpon theyr neckes. * I gaue them fodder my selfe, & they shuld not go agayne into Egypte. And now is Assur theyr kynge: for they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shall the swerde begyn in theyr cityes the floze that they haue layde vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that bycause of theyr owne ymaginacions: and my people shall stande in a doubt whpyther to turne them, for when the prophets called them to the most hyest, not one yet wolde geue hym his gloze.

The fyrste Chapter.

The propheete agaynst the Jews. He exhorteth the people to praye and fastinge for the pestilence that was come vpon them at that tyme.

This is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O ye elders: yndure thes well, all ye that dwell in the lande: For euer there hapened suche a thyng in poure dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your chyldren of it, and let them shew it vnto theirowne chyldren, and so they to certifie your posteritye thereof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath the greshopper eaten vpon: what the greshopper left that hath the locust eaten vpon and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed.

Take vpon ye dyonardes & wepe: moune at ye wyne suppers, because of your sweet wyne: for it shalbe taken awaye from your mouth. Yea a myghty and an innumerable people shal come vpon into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, & chaw bones lyke the lionesses. They shal make my vyneyardes waste, they shal pyl of the barkes of my fygetrees, stryppen bare, cast them awaye, & make the braunches whyte.

Make thy mane as a virgin doth that gyrdeth her selfe wyth sacke, because of her byde-gone. For the meate and drynke offryng shalbe taken ¶ Taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and the prestes the Lordes mynsters shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a myserable case: for the corne shall be destroyed, & swete wyne shall come to confusyon, and & oyle utterly desolate. The husbandmen and & wyne gardeners shall loke piteously, and make lamentacion for the wheate, wyne, and barley, and because the harvest upon the felde is so cleene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make great mone, when the vyneyards and figgtrees be so utterly wasted. Yea all the pomgranates, palm trees, apple trees, and other trees of & felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery chere of the chyl dren of men shall come to confusyon.

¶ Gyrde you, and make your mone, O ye prestes, mourne ye mynsters of the altar: go your waye in, and slepe in sackcloth, O ye officers of my God: for the meate and drynk offering shall be taken awaye from the house of your God. Proclapine a fastyng, call the congregacyon, gather the elders, * and all the inhabytours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lord: alas, alas for this dape. And why the dape of the Lorde is at hand, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before our eyes, the myrrh also and ioye from the house of our God? The scde shall perishe in the ground, the garners shall be waste, the fozes shall be broken downe, for the corne shall be destroyed. What a syghyng make the kyne: the bullockes are in verpe euell lyknyng, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are scampeth awaye.

¶ Lorde, to the wyl I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness and the flambe hath burnt vp al the trees of the felde. Yea, the wilde beastes crye also vnto the for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wylde nesse.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ The propheteth the commynge and trectys of theyr raimys. An exhortacyon to moue them to conuerse.

¶ Lowe out a trompet in Syon, and crye vpon my holpe hyl, that all suche as dwell in the lande, shall tremble at it: * for the dape of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande. a darke dape, a glomyng dape, a cloude dape: yea and as a stormy dape, lyke as the moynyng spredeth out vpon & hylles. Namely, a great and myghtye people. suche as haue not bene sence the begynnyng, neyther shall be after them for evermoze. Before him shall be a consumyng fyre, and behynde hym a burnyng flamme. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before hym: but behynde hym shall it be a verpe waste wylde nesse, and there is no man that shall escape him. They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horsmen. They shalpe vp vpon the hylles as it were the sound of charettes: as the flamme of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghtye people redy to the battayle.

¶ The folke shall be asfayde of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pottre. They shall run lyke

gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Every man in his going shall kepe his arape, and not go out of his path. There shall not one dysure an other, but each shall kepe his owne way. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte. They shall come into the cite, and runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and shalpe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before him: yea the heuens shall be moued. * The Sunne and the moone shall be darkened, and the starrs shall withdrawe theyr shyne. The Lord shall shewe his veyce before his hooste, for his hoost is greace, stronge and myghtye, to fulfill his commaundement. This is that great and maruapulous fearful dape of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

¶ Now therfore sayth the Lorde: * Turne you vnto me with all your hartes, with fastyng, wepyng and mournyng: rent your hartes and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is gracys and mercyfull, longe suffryng, and of great compassyon and ready to pardon wyckednesse. Then no doubte he also shall turne, and forgve, & after his chastenynge he shall let your encrease remayne for meate and drynk offeringes vnto the Lorde your God.

* Blow out with the trompet in Syon, proclapine a fastyng, call the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, bynng the chyl dren and sucklynges togyther. Lette the bydegrome go forth of his chambze, and the byde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwyt the porche and the altar, wepyng, and sayyng be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thine heritage be brought to such confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes thereof.

¶ Then shall the Lorde be gelouse ouer his land and spare his people yea, the Lord shall answer and saye vnto his people. Beholde, I wyl sende you corne, wyne, and oyle, so that ye shall haue plente of them: and I wyl nomore gryue you out, to be a reprofe amonge & brethren. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dryue hym farre from you and shalpe hym out into a drye & waste lande, his face toward the east see, and his byn der partes toward & uttermost see. The stynke of hym shall goo vp, and his fylthy corrupcyon shall fall vpon hym selfe, because he hath dealt so proude. Feare not, O lande, but be glad, and reioyce for the Lorde wyl do greace thynges. Be not ye asfayde neyther O ye beastes of the felde: for the pastures shall be grene, and & trees shall beare theyr frute: the figgtrees and vyne yards shall gyue theyr increase.

¶ Be glad then O ye chyl dren of Syon and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath giuen you a teacher of ryghtousnesse: * and he it is that shall sende you downe founres of rayne, earlye and late in the first moneth so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. grefhopper, locust, blastyng, and caterpyller, my great host whych I sent amonge you, haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne, so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satysfied and prayse the name of the Lord your God that so maruaylously hath dealt with you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall wel knowe, that I am in the myddell of Israel, and that I am y<sup>e</sup> Lord your God yea, and that there is none other: and my people shall no more be brought to confusyon.

G Mail no more be brought to confusyon. * After this wyl I poure out my spyte vpon all fleshe and your sonnes and daughters shall prophecie your olde men shall dreame dreames and your yong men shall se vylpous yea in those dayes I wyl poure out my spyte vpon seruautes and maydens. I wyl shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the erth beneth bloud and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shall be turned into darkenesse, and the moone into bloude before the great and notable daye of y<sup>e</sup> Lord come. And the tyme shall come, that whosoener callith on the name of the Lord, shall be saved. For vpon the mount Syon, and at Jerusalem, there shall be a saluacyon, lyke as the Lord hath promysed yea, and amonge y<sup>e</sup> other remmaunt, whome the Lord shall call.

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgment of God agaynst the enemies of his people.

Take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayn the captiuitie of Juda and Jerusalem: I shall gather all people together, and bringe them in the valley of Jorapont, and there wyl I reason with them because of my people & heritage of Israel, who they haue scatred about in the nations, & parted my lande: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the younge men haue they set in the byrdell house, and solde the damels for wyne, that they myght haue to drinke. * Thou Tyrus and Sydon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me: Wyl ye despyse me: well yf ye wyl nedes despyse me, I wyl recompence you euen vpon your heade, and that ryght shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my sayre and goodlye iewels, & brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Jerusalem haue I solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bringe them farre from the borders of theyr owne countreys.

Beholde therfore, I wyl raple them out of the place where ye haue solde them, * and wyl rewarde you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your daughters wyl I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lord hym self hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge y<sup>e</sup> Gentyles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyautes let them drawe nye, let them come by all the luster of warryours of them. * Make you swordes of your plowshares, and speares of youre speckles and sytches Let the weake man say: I am stronge Mustre you and come, all ye heathen rounde about gather you together. there shall the Lord laye all thy gyautes to the grounde. Lette the people aryle, and get them to the valley of Jorapont, for there wyl I syt, and iudge all heathen rounde about. * Laye to your sythes, for y<sup>e</sup> barne is ripe: come get you downe: the wynepresse is full: yea, the wynepresses runne ouer, for theyr wyckednesse is waxen great.

In the valley appoynted there shall be many people. for the daye of the Lord is nye, in the valley appoynted. * The sunne and moone shall be darkned, and the stars shall withdraue theyr lyght. * The Lord shall roze out of Syon, and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withal. But the Lord shall be a defence vnto his owne people, & a refuge for y<sup>e</sup> chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe that I the Lord your God dwell vpon my holy mount of Syon. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more.

* Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, and the hylls shall flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynough, and oute of the Lordes house there shall flowe a springe, to water the brooke of * Sitim: but Egypt shall be layde waste and Edom shall be desolate: because they haue dealt so cruelly wth the chyldren of Juda, and shed innocent bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Juda shall be inhabited for euer more, and Jerusalem from generacyon to generacyon: for I wyl not leaue theyr bloude vnauenged. And the Lord shall dwell in Syon.

The booke of the prophet Amos.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophecye of Amos. The wyse of the Lord agaynst Tyre, agaynst Tyre agaynst them, and agaynst the house of Ammon.

These are the sermons that were shewed vnto Amos, (whiche was one of the shepheardes at Thecua) vpon Israell in y<sup>e</sup> tyme of * Osiab kynge of Juda, and in the tyme of * Jeroboam y<sup>e</sup> son of Ioah kynge of Israel, two yeres before y<sup>e</sup> earth quake. And he sayde: * The Lord shall roze out of Syon, and shewe his voyce from Jerusalem so that the pastures of y<sup>e</sup> shepherdes shall be in a myserable case, and the top of Carmel dryed vp. Thus sayeth the Lord: for thye and fourc wyckednesses of * Damascus, I wyl not spare her: because they haue chesitid Galaad wth yron flayles. But I wyl sende a fyre into y<sup>e</sup> house of Hazael, the same shall consume y<sup>e</sup> palaces of Benadab. Thus wyl I breake y<sup>e</sup> barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiters from the felde of Auen: And hym that holdeth the scepter out of y<sup>e</sup> pleasaunte house: so that the people shall be dryuen out of sayre Sirpa: sayth the Lord. saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of *Gaza, I wyl not spare her because they make the prysoners yet more captiue, and haue dreuen them into the lande of Edom. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into the wals of Gaza, which shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote out them that dwell at Asdod, and hym that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shall perishe, sayth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of the Citie of *Tyre, I wyl not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuitie of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into þ walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of *Edom I wyl not spare hym, because he persecuted his brother with the sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kept indignacion alway by hym. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into Theban, which shall deuoure the palaces of Bosta.

Thus sayth the Lorde for thre and foure wickednesses of the children of *Ammon, I wyl not spare them because they cryt by þ women great wyth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of the landes the wyder. Therefore I wyl kindle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the daye of battaile, in tempest and in the daye of storme so that they kyng shall go into captiuitie he and his prynces together, sayth the Lorde.

The ii. Chapter.

Agayne Moab, Iuda, and Israel.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wyl not spare hym: because he burnt þ bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therefore, wyl I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth so that Moab shall perishe with noise and the sounde of a shawme. I wyl rote out the Judge from among them, and slay all his prynces with hym, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of *Iuda I wyl not spare hym, because he hath cast asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes, for why? they wolde nedes be discerued with the lyest that they: for fathers followed. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into Iuda, which shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wyl not spare hym, because he hath sold the ryghteous for money, and the poore for woos. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the dust of the carthe, and croke the wayes of the meke. The son and the father go to þ harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, they lye besyde euery aultare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in þ house of they gods they drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amozites before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, as stronge as the oke: not withstanding I destroyed his frute from about and bys rote from under. *Agayne, I thought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you forth by the thowse the wyldernes, that ye myght haue the Amozites landes in possession. I raised vp prophetes amonge your chylde, and absteyners amonge your yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chylde of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue þ absteyners wyne to drynke: yee, ye commaunded the prophetes saying. Prophecy not. Beholde I wyl crashe you in sonder, lyke as a wayne craseth that is full of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neither the stronge be able to do any thyng: no, the Gyaunte shall not saue his owne lyfe. The archer shall not abyde, and the swyfte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a gyaunt, shall in that daye be fayne to runne his waye naked, sayth the Lorde.

The iii. Chapter.

Agayne: ouer the route of Israel of wickednesses.

Behold, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you O ye chylde of Israel (name-ly, vnto all þ tribes, who brought out of Egypt, and sayde: *you onely haue I receyted from all the generacions of the earth therefore wyl I visit you in all your wickednesses. shalpe I wayne walke together, except they be agreed amonge them selues? *Doth a lyon crie in the wode, except he haue a praye? Or cryeth a Lyons whelp out of his den, except he haue gotten somthyng? Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth wyere no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare by from the ground afore he catch somwhat? Crye they out A latum with the trompet in the cite, and the people not afrayde? Commeth there any plage in a Citie, without it be the Lordes doyng? Nowe doth the Lorde God no maner of thyng but he telleth his secret before vnto his seruautes the prophetes. When a Lyon roareth who wyl not be afrayd? Hearing then that the Lorde God hym selfe speaketh, who wyl not prophete.

Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se greates murther and violent oppression amonge them, for why? they regarde not the thyng that is ryght, sayth the Lorde. they gather together euell gotten goodes, and laye vp robbery in they houses.

Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde God. This lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde aboute, thy strength shall be plucke from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth the Lorde, lyke as an heardman taketh two legges, or a peece of an eare oute of the Lyons mouth: Euen so the chylde of Israel (that dwell in Samaria) haupnge they couches in the corner, theye beddes at Damascus, shall be plucke awaye.

*Heare and beare recorde in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of Hostes) that when I begynne to vylet the wickednesse of Israel, I wyl vylette the Aultares at Bethell also: so that the hornes of the Aultare shall be broken of and fall to the ground.

Of. Asfor

The prophete.

As for the wynter house and sommer house, I wyll smyte them downe: and the houses of puerp: pee, and many other houses shal perishe, & be destroyed, sayth the Lorde.

The.iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the gouernours of Samaria.

Hearke this worde ye sat kynne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that dooze men wronge, and oppresse the neyde, ye that saye to your lordes: bypunge byther let vs drynke. Therefore, the Lorde hath sworne by his holynesse. The dayes shall come vpon you, that the enemies shal carpe you a way in shyppe, and your posterite shal be carped awaye vpon fyshers hokes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, euen the kynnges palace shall you ouerthrow, to make a way to escape, sayth the Lorde.

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vnglaciousnes, & haue encreased your synnes at Silgal ye brought your sacrifices in the mornyng, & your tythes vnto the thyrde daye. Ye made a thank-offeryng of leuen, ye promysed fre wyll offerynges and proclaymed them. Suche lust had ye, O pe chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lorde God. Therefore haue I geuen you yble teeth in all your cities, and scarcenesse of bread in all your palaces yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. When there were but thye monethes vnto this daye, I withhelde the rayne from you ye, I rayned vpon one cite: and not vpon another, one pece of ground was moysted with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Wherefore wo pee thre cityes came vnto one, to drynke water: but they were not satisfied, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde.

I haue smyten you with drouth and blastynge and loke howe many orchardes, vyneyardes, figgtrees and olyue trees ye had. the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Despiene haue I sent amonge you, as I dyd in Egypte: your yonge men haue I slayne with the swerde, and caused your hozles to be taken captiue: I made synnynge lauoure of your tentes, to come vp into your nostrils. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen as I ouerthrewe Sodome and Gomorre so ye were as a vrande plucked oute of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde.

Therefore, thus wyll I handle the agayne, O Israel pee, euen thus wyll I handle the. Make the reed then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountayns, he ordeyneth the wynd he wetheth man what he is aboute to do. he maketh the mornyng and the darkenesse, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth. the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

The.v. Chapter.

A complaine of the captiues of Israel.

Hearke this worde, O ye house of Israel, & why I muste make thys mone for you. The brigyn Israel shal fall, & neuer ryse vp agayn. We shal be cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shal helpe her vp. For this sayth the Lorde God: Where as ther was a thousande in one cite, there shal be lefte scarce an hundred therein: and where there dwelt an hundred there shal scarce ten be left in the house of Israel. Reuerbelles thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Silgal, and gonot to Bersaba: for Silgal shall be carped awaye captiue, and Bethel shall come to nought. Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench the Bethel.

Ye turne the lawe to wormewood, and cast doowne ryghteousnesse vnto the grounde. Ye forsake the Lorde that maketh the seven sters & the Orions, that turneth the nyghte into day, & of the daye he maketh darknes. Ye calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde. The Lorde is his name. He rayseth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bypungegeth downe the stronge holde. But they owe hym euell wyll, that reproche them openly: & who so telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre hym. It is so much then as ye oppresse the poore, & rob him of his best sustenance: therefore wher as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwel in them. Watelous pleasant vyndes shal you plant, but the wyne of them shal ye not drynke and why: as for the multitude of your wyckednesse & your stoute synnes, I know the ryght well. Enemyes are ye of the ryghteous, ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therefore the wyse must nowe be saynt to holde his tynge, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thyng that is good, and not euell, so shal ye lyue: pee, the Lorde God of hostes shal be with you, accordyng to your owne desyre. I hate the euell, and loue the good: I set vp ryght agayne in the porte. & no doute, the Lorde God of hostes shal be mercyfull vnto the remnant of Joseph. If no (sayth the Lorde God of hostes) ther shal be mournyng in all stretes pee, they shal say in every strete alas, alas. They shal cal the husbandman to lamentacyon, & such as can mourne to mournyng. In all vyneyardes there shal be heynesse, for I wyll come amonge you, sayth the Lorde. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde. Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for the daye of the Lorde, it shal be darke and not clere.

Yee, lyke as when a man runneth from a lion and a Beer meteth with hym. or when he cometh into the house, and leanteth his hande vpon the wall, a serpent byteth hym. Shal not the daye of the Lorde be darke & not clere? Shall it not be cloudy, and no syne in it? I hate and abhorre your holp dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together, I wyll not accept it. And though ye offer me brent offerynges & meat-offerynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your fatte thank-offerynges, I wyll not loke vpon them: A waye with that noyle of thy songes. I wyll not heare thy playes of musycke: but se that equyte flowe as the water, and ryghteousnesse, as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, I gaue ye me offerynges and sacrifices those Moreover he shewed me this vision: behold, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wall, and a masons trowell in his hande.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou, I answered a masons trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: behold, I wyl laye the trowell amonge my people of Israel, and wyl nomore ouerle them, but the pylchapels of Isaac must be layde waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate, *and as for y house of Jeroboam, I wyl stande vp agaynst it with the swearde. For Amos sayth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swearde, and Israel shalbe led awaye captiue out of theyr owne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos, Set the hence: (thou that canst se so wel) and fle into the lande of Iuda, get the there thy luyng and prophete ther: & prophete nomore at Bethel for it is the kynges chappel, & the kynges court.

The prophete.

But the Lorde prepared a great fysh: to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fysh thre dayes & thre nyghtes: And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fyshes belly, & sayd: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me out of the belly of hell. I cryed, & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddel of the see, & the floudes compassed me aboute: yee, all the wayes & routes of water went ouer me, I thought that I had ben cast away out of thy sight. But I wil yet agayne loke toward the thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule. the depe laye aboute me, & the webes were wyapte about myne head. I went downe to the botome of the hylles, & was barred in with earth for euer. But the Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of the ryppon. When my soule faynted within me, I thought vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanities, wyl forsake his mercy. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thanksgyving, and wyl pay that that I haue vowed, for why? saluacion cometh of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysh, and it caste out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The. lii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentance of the kynge of Ninue.

When came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp & get the to Ninue that grete Cytie, and preache vnto them the preachynge, whiche I bad the. So Jonas arose & went to Ninue at the Lordes comaundement. Ninue was a grete cytye vnto God, namely of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entered into the cytye: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed sayinge: There are yet forty dayes, and then shall Ninue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninue beleued God, & proclaymed fastynge, & arrayed them selues in sacke cloth, as well the great as the small of them. And the tidynge came vnto the kynge of Ninue, whiche rose out of his seate, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sacke cloth, and sat hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and comaunded in Ninue, by the auctorite of the kynge and his lordes, sayinge: * se that neyther man, nor beast, ore, or shepe taste ought at all: & that they neyther fede nor drynke water. but put on sackcloth both man & beast: & crye myghtely vnto God. * Yee, se that euery man turne from his euill waye, and from the wycked. & that he hath in hande.

Who can tell? God may turne, and repent, & cease from his fierce wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe theyr wycked howe they turned from theyr wycked wayes. * he repented on the euill, whiche he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and dyd it not.

The. liii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was sore discontent & angry. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my country: therfore I balled rather to flee vnto Tharsis. * For I knowe well enough, that thou arte a mercifull God, full of compassion, long suffering, & of great kyndnes, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And nowe * O Lorde, take my lyfe from me (I beseech the, for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayd the Lorde: art thou so angry? And Jonas gat hym out of the cytye, and sat downe on the east syde thereof: & there made hym a booth, and sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se what shulde chaunce vnto the cytye.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyldc vyne, whiche sprang vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his head, to deliuer hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceeding glad of the wyldc vyne. But vpon the nexte morowe agaynst the spring of the daye, the Lorde bydened a worme, whiche smote the wyldc vyne, so that it withered awaye. And when the sonne was vp, God prepared a scruct east wynde: and the sonne bette ouer the head of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, and wysshed vnto his soule that he myght dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Arte thou so angry for the wyldc vyne? And he sayd yee, very angry am I, euen vnto the deathe. And the Lorde sayd: I had compassion vpon a wyldc vyne, wheron thou bestowdest no labour: nor madest it growe, which sprang vp in one night, and perished in another: And shulde not I then haue compassion vpon Ninue that grete cytye, wherein there are aboute an hundred and. x. thousand persons, that knowe not theyr ryght hand from the left, besydes moche cattell?

In the latter dayes it wyl come to passe, that the hyl of the Lordes house shall be sette vpon byer then any mountayns or hilles. Pec. y people shall pzeace vnto it, and y multitude of the Gentyles shall haste them thither, saying: Come, & let vs go vpon to the hyl of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may teache vs his wayes, and that we may walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Syon: and the worde of God from Jerusalem, & shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heathen, and reforme y people of farre countreys: so that of theyr swarthes they shall make plough shares, and speches of theyr speares.

* One people shall not lyfte by a swearde agaynst another: pec, they shall no more learne to fyght: but every man shall sit vnder his vyne parde, and vnder his figtre, and no man to fray hym a way. for the mouth of the Lord of hostes hath spoken it. Therefore where as al the people haue walked every man in the name of his owne God, we wyl walke in the name of our God for euer & euer. * At the same tyme, sayth the Lord, wyl I gather vp the lame and y out castes, and suche as I haue chastened, and wyl geue yssue vnto the lame, and make of y outcastes a great people: * and the Lord hym selfe shall be theyr kynge vpon the mount Syon, from this tyme forth for euermore.

And now (O y daughter Syon) be soyr, let it grene the as a wyfe labouryng with chylde: for now must thou get the out of the ctye, and dwell vpon y playne felde: Pec, vnto Babylon shalte thou go, there shalte thou be deliuered, & there the Lord shall loose the from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Nowe also are there many people gathered togyther agaynst the sayinge: what, Syon is curled, we shall se our lust vpon her. But they knowe not * the thoughtes of the Lord, they vnderstande not his counsaile, that shall gather them togyther as the shepes in the barne. Therefore get y vp, O thou daughter Syon, & threwe out the corne: For I wyl make thy horne yron: and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayst grynde many people: theyr goodes shalte thou appropriate vnto the Lord, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The v. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

After that shalte thou be robbed thy selfe, O thou robbers daughter, they shall laye siege agaynst vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. * And then Bethleem Ephrata, art lytle amonge the thousandes of Iuda, Out of the shall come vnto me whiche shall be the gouernour in Israel: whose outgoynge hath ben from the begynnyng and from everlastynge. In the meane whyle he plgeth them for a season, vntyll the tyme that she (whiche shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethren be conuerted vnto the chyldren of Israel. He shall stande fast, & and geue fode in the & strength of y Lord, and in the victory of the name of the Lord his God, and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the furthest parte of the worlde.

Then shal there be pzeace, so that the Assirian may come into your laude, & treade in your houses. We shall byng vp. vii. shepherdes and. vii. prynces vpon them these shall subdue y lande of Assar with the swearde, & the lande of * Nimrod with theyr naked weapons. * Thus shal he deliuer vs fro the Assiran, when he cometh within our lande, & setteth his fote within our borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shal be amonge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lord and as the drops vpon y grasie, that raryeth for no man, & wayteth of no body. * Pec, the residue of Jacob shal be amonge the Gentyles & the multitude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes of the wood, and as the Lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of shepe: whiche (when he goeth thorow) treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shal be lyft vp vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduersaries shall perishe. The tyme shal come also, sayth the Lord, that I wyl take thy horses from the, and destroye thy charrets. I wyl breake downe the ctyes of thy lande, & ouerthrowe al thy stronge holdes. * Al witherawes wil I rote out of thyne hande, there shall no mo sothsayinges be withyn the. * Thyne ydols & thyne ymages wyl I destroye out of the: so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vnto y workes of thyne owne handes. Thy groues wil I pluck vp by y rootes, & breake downe the ctyes. Thus wyl I be auenged also, vpon all the heathen that wyl not heare.

C Oshal I geue my first borne for mine offences, and the frute of my body for the synne of my soule: I wyl shewe the, O man, what is good, & what y<sup>e</sup> Lord requireth of y<sup>e</sup>, namely, to do ryght to haue pleasure in louynge kyndnes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God. * The Lordes voyce cryeth vnto the cite, and the man y<sup>e</sup> shall be laued consydereth thy name: O Lord. ) herken what is your rodde, and heare him that warneth you. * Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnrpyghteous good in the houses of the wycked, and bycause the measure is minyshed: O shuld I iustyspe the false balaunces, and the bag of deceitfull weyghtes, amonge those that be full of ryches vnrpyghtuously gotten. where y<sup>e</sup> cytelys deale with falshe, speake lyes, & haue discrept-full tonges in theyr mouthes.

D Therefore I wyl take in hande to punyshe the, and to make the desolate, bycause of thy syn-nes. * Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynoughe: yee, thou shalt bynge thy selfe downe. Thou shalt flee, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, wyl I deliuer to the sword. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse out olyues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade oute swete must, but shalt drynke no wyne. Ye kepe the ordynances of Amri and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe theyr pleasures, therefore wyl I make the waste, & cause thy inhaby-tets to be abhorred. O my people: & thus shalt thou heare thyne owne shame.

The vii. Chapter.

A complaine of the isle of Iherusalem, & how she is brought to this pass.

D is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleanynge in the harueste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wold I sayne (with al my hart) haue of y<sup>e</sup> best frute. * There is not a god-ly vpon earth, there is not one righteous among men. They labour all to speche bloud, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do wel when they do euyl. As y<sup>e</sup> prynce wyl so sayth the Iudge, y<sup>e</sup> he maye do by a pleasure agayne. The great man speaketh what his hart desyret, and the hearers allowe hym. The best of them is but as a thysle, and the most ryghteous of them is but as a breer in the hedge. But when y<sup>e</sup> daye of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be vnipted, then shall they be wasted away. * Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother. Kepe y<sup>e</sup> porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, & for y<sup>e</sup> sonne shall put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shall sle agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe and a mans foes shall be euen they of his owne housholde.

Nevertheless I wyl lye vnto the Lord I wyl patiently abyde God my sauyoure: my God shall heare me: O thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get vp agayne: and though I lyt in darknesse, yet the Lord is my lyght. I wyl beare the punishment of the Lord: for why, I haue offended hym, tyll he lyt in iudgement vpon my cause and se that I haue ryght. he wyl bynge me forth to the lyght, and I shall se his ryghteousnesse.

She that is myne enemye shall lye vpon it and be confounded, which now she sayth: * Where is thy Lord God: & y<sup>e</sup> eyes shall beholde her when she shall be troden downe as the clare in y<sup>e</sup> strettes. * The tyme wyl come, that thy gaynes shall be made vp, and the lawe shall go abroad: and at that tyme shall they come vnto the front Aflur vnto the stronge cities, & from the strong cities vpon the ruer. from the one see to y<sup>e</sup> other from the one mountayne to the other.

Notwithstanding, the lande must be wasted bycause of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of theyr owne ymaginations. Therefore fede thy people with thy rod, the flocke of thyne herptage, which dwell desolate in the wood y<sup>e</sup> they may be fed vpon the mount of Carmel, Zafan, and Galaad, as afore tyme. Wretched thynges wyl I shewe them, & lyke as when they came out of Egypte.

This shall be breathen se, and be ashamed for all theyr power, & so that they shall lye theyr hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. * They shall lyke the duste lyke a serpente, and as the wormes of the earth, that tremble in theyr holes. They shall be a frayde of the Lord our God, and they shall feare the.

There is there such a God as thou: that pardoneth wyckednes, and forgiveth the offences of the remnant of thyne herptage: he kepeth not his wrath for euer. & why? bys delyte is to haue compassion. * he shall turne agayne, and be merciful to vs he shall put downe our wickednes, and cast al our synnes into the botome of the see. Thou shalt kepe thy trewth wyth Jacob, & thy mercye for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sowne vnto our fathers longe ago.

The Lord goeth forth in tempest and storme wether, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. When he repro-

Who wyl haue pytie vpon the: where shall I seke one to comfote the? Art thou better then the great cite of * Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it: which was strongly fenced and walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strenght and that excedyng great, aboue measure. Aphyca and Libya were her helpers, yet was she dryuen a waye, and brought into captiuite, her yonge chyliden were smytten downe at the head of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the most auntyent men in her, and all her myghtye men were bound in cheynes. Euen so shalt thou also be dryuen, and hyde thy selfe, & seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemy. All thy stronge cityes shall be lyke frgetrees with rype fyggys: whych when a man shaketh, they shall fall into the mouth of þ eater.

The fyrst Chapter.

A complayne agaynst Arael.

This is the heuy burthen, which the Prophete Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how longe shall I crye & thou wylt not heare: howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wronge, & thou wylt not helpe: why lettest þe me se weyrynesse and labour?

* Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is tozned in peces. and there can not ryght iudgement go forth. And why the vngodlye is moze set by then the rygh-tuous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement procedeth. Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thyng in your tyme, whiche though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. For lo, I wyl raise vp the Caldees, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wynde as the lande is, to take posselsion of dwellynge places, that be not theyr owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement & punyche.
Theyr horsys are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sozer then the wolues in the cuckyng. Theyr horsemen come by greute henyes from farre, they flye hastily to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all to spoylle, oute of them cometh an east wynde, whiche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as þe lande They shall mocke the kynges, and laugh þe pry-nces to scozne. They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynance agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freche corage vnto them: to go forth and to do moze euill, and so aserpe the power vnto the God.

But thou O Lorde my God my holy one, thou arte frome the begynnyng, therefore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned them for a punymente, and set them to reprove the myghty. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se euill, thou canst not beholde the thyng that is wycked. Wherefore then dost thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tounge when þe wycked deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest men as the fysh in the see, and lyke as the crespynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angie, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyr parue: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therefore offere they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifice vnto theyr parue: because that thow wilt theyr poyson is become so fat, and theyr meat so plenteous. Wherefore, they cast out theyr net agayne and neuer cease to slaye the people.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the visyon of the prophete. Agaynst polleng, reuelous & for the visyon is yet farre off for a tyme, but at þe last it shall come to passe, and not fayle. And though he tarp, yet wryte þe for hym, for in very dede he wyl come, and not be slacke.

Behold, the vnrightheous thynketh hym self in sauegarde, as in a stronge holde. But the iust teaueth the bronkarde, euen so the proude shall fayle, & not endure. He openeth his desyre wynde

All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeþ

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe avery stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and

Lorde, when I hearde speake of the, I was astrapde. The worke þe thou hast taken in hande, shalt thou performe in his tyme, O Lord. & when thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thyntest vpon merce, God cometh from Theiman, and the holy ouer from the mounte of Pharan. Selah.

His glorie couereth the heauens, and þe earth is full of his prayse. His syne is as the sunne, & beames of lyght go oute of hys handes, there is his power byd. Destruction goeth before hym, and a pestilent spycknelle goeth from hys sete.

I sawe that the pauplyngs of the Morians, and the tentes of þe lande of Madian were vexed for weepnesse. Wast thou not angry, O Lord in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes and thy displeasure in the see? yea, when thou satest vpon thy horse, and when thy charrettes had the victorie. Thou shewdest thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

sure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smorest downe þe hed of the house of the vngodly, and discourtest hys foundacyons, euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah.

Thou dydest stryke thozowe with his sceptre the heades of his playne people, whiche come as a stormy wynde to scatter me abroad, and are glad when they maye cate by the poore secretly. Thou makest a wape for thyne horses in the see euen in the myddest of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voice therof, my bones corrupte, I am astrapde where I stande. O that I myght rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vnto our people, which all are ready prepared.

For the great * daye of the Lorde is at hande, it is harde by and cometh on apace. Therefore, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shall be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dye thorne hedges, salt pyttes, and a perpetuall wyldernes: The resydue of my folke shall spyle them, the remnaunte of my people shall haue them in possession. * This shall happen vnto them for theyr pride, bycause they haue delt so shamefully with the Lord of hostes people, and magnified them selues aboue them. I sayd vnto them: * feare me, and be content to be reformed. But neuertheles, they stande vpearly, to folowe the fylthynges of their owne ymaginations. The fyrst Chapter.

At the moneth the people to returne to the Lande, and escape the wickednesse of theyr fathers. He prayes for the church and his apostles.

In the eighth moneth of the seconde year of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the prophete, sayinge: The Lorde hath ben sore displeased at your forefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Turne ye vnto me (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and I will turne me vnto you, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Be ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto whome the prophetes cryed afore tyme, sayinge. Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: Turne you from your euyl wayes, and from your wicked synes. But they wolde not heare nor regard me, sayth the Lorde. What is now come of your forefathers, and the prophetes? are they yett styll a lyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes (whiche I commaunded by my seruantes the prophetes, touche your forefathers? Upon this, they gaue answer and sayd: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuyled to do vnto vs, accordyng to our owne wayes and ymaginations, euen so hath he delt with vs.

Upon the xiiii. day of the xi. moneth, which is the moneth Sebat, in the seconde yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayinge, I sawe by nyght, and lo, there stode one vpon a redde horse, and stode vpon the myrre trees, that were benethe vpon the grounde, and behynde hym were there redde speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayd I, O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked with me, sayd vnto me. I will shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myrre trees answered and sayde: These are they whome the Lorde hath sente to go thorow the world. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, that stode amonge the myrre trees, and sayde. We haue gone thorow the world: and beholde, all the world dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungel gaue answer and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how longe wylt thou be vnnerefull to Jerusalem, and to the cyties of Iuda: with whome thou hast ben displeased nowe these thre score and ten yeres. So the Lorde gaue a launge and a comfortable answer vnto the aungel that talked wth me. And the aungel that comened with me, sayd vnto me: Crye thou & speake. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. I am excedyng gelous ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathen: for where as I was but a lytle angry, they dyd ther best that I myght destroye them. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde: I will came out of the lande of Egypte: and my spyte shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I will once more wyl I make heauen & earth, the see, and the drye lande, yee, & I will moue all heathen, and the coforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house with honour, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Thus the gloze of the last house shal be greater then the fyrst, sayth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyl I gyue peace, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The xxiii. daye of the nynt moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the prophete Aggeus, sayinge. Thus saith the Lorde God of hostes. Like the prestes concernyng the lawe, & saye. If one beare holy flesh in his cote lap, & with his lap do touche the breade, potage, wyne, oyle, or any othere meate, shall he be holp also? The prestes answered & said No. Then sayd Aggeus. Now if one beyng defyled wth a dead carcase touch any of these. Shall it also be vncleane? The prestes gaue answer, & sayd: yee, it shall be vncleane. Then Aggeus answered & sayd: euen so is this people & this nation before me, sayth the Lorde: and so are all the workes of theyr handes, yee, and all that they offre, is vncleane.

And nowe (I praye you) consydre from this daye forth, and how it hath gone with you afore or euer there was layde one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde that when ye came to a cozne heape of. xx. busshelles, there were scarce ten: & and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to powre out l. pottes of wyne, there were scarce xx. for I smote you with hate, blasting and byle stones, in all the labours of your handes. yett was there none of you, that wold turne vnto me sayth the Lorde. Consydre then from this daye forth & afore namely, from the xxiii. daye of the nynt moneth, vnto the day that the foundacyon of the Lordes temple was layde: make it well, & is not the sede yett in the barnes haue not the vyues, the fygtrees, the pomgranates, & olyue trees ben yett vnfertill, but from this day forth, I will make them to prospeere.

Afore ouer the xxiii. day of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge. Speake to zorobabell the prynte of Iuda, and saye: I wyl make both heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kynngdomes, yee and destroye the myghty kynngdome of the heathen. I wyl ouerthrowe scharettes, and those that spt vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thorow his neyghbours swerde, and as for the, zorobabell (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Sabathiel my seruante: I wyl take the sayth the Lorde, at the same tyme, and make the as a scale, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The ende of the prophete of Aggeus.

Of the lawe and hys estate of Chyſt, under the figure of Iſraels the preſt. A prophecye of Chyſt.

And he ſhewed me Ieſua the hys preſt ſtandynge before the aungell of the Lorde: and Satan ſtoode at his ryght hande to reſpſt him. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan. The Lorde repproue the (thou Satan) pec, the Lorde that hath choſen Jeruſalem, re-proue the. Is not this a brande taken out of the tye? Nowe Ieſua was clothed in vncleane rayment, and ſtoode before the aungell which answered and ſayde vnto thoſe that ſtoode before hym, take away the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he ſayde. And * two olpue trees therby, one vpon the ryghte ſyde of the boule, and the other vpon the lefte ſyde. So I answered, and ſpake to the aungell that talked with me ſayinge, O my Lorde what are theſe: the aungell that tal-ked with me answered and ſayde vnto me: knoweſt thou not what theſe be? and I ſayde: No my Lorde. He answered & ſayde vnto me: Theſe is the worde of the Lorde vnto zoro-babel, ſay-inge: * Neither thoro-we an hoſte of men, nor tho-rome ſtrength, but thoro-we my ſpyete, ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes. I turned me, lyftynge vp myne eyes and looked, and beholde, a synginge booke. And he sayde vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a synginge booke of twentye cubytes longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theuys shalbe iudged after this booke, and all swearers shalbe iudged accordynge to the same, and I wyl bring it forth (sayth the Lorde of hostes:) so that it shal come to the house of the thefe, and to the house of hym that falsely sweareth by my name: and shal remayne in his house, and consume it, with the tymbre and stones thereof. D Then lyft I vp myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, there came out two women, and y<sup>e</sup> wynde was in theyr wynges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a stork) and they lift vp the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whither wyl these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buyde them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The corne shall make the ponge men cherful, and the newe wyne the maydens.

The .x. Chapter.

The people moued to requyre the destruction of the temple. The Lorde promyseth to byld and comforte the house of Ierusalem.

Hap the Lord then by tymes to gyue the latter rayne, * so shall the Lorde make byghte cloudes, and gyue you rayne pnowgh for all the encrease of the felde. For vayne is the answer of ydols. The sothsayers se lyes, and tell but vayne dreames, the comfort that they gyue is nothyng worth. Therefore go they astraye lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no * shepherde. My wrathfull displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyll vspyte the gootes. For the Lorde of hostes wyll graciously vspyte his flocke the house of Juda, and holde them in a goodly fayre hoise in the battayle. * Out of Juda shall come the helmet: the naple, the battayl-bowe, and all the princes togyther. They shall be as the gyauntes, whiche in the battayle treade downe the myze vpon the stretes. They shall fyghte, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the horsemen shall be confounded.

I wyll comfort the house of Juda, and preserve the house of Ioseph. I wyll turne them also, for I pytie them, and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lorde am theyr God, and wyll heare them. Ephraim shall be as a gyaunt, and theyr hert shall be chearefull as thowowe wyne: yea, theyr chyl-dren shall se it, and be glad: and theyr herte shall reioyse in the Lorde. I wyll blowe for them and gather them togyther: for I wyll redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe them amonge the people, that they maye thynke vpon me in farre countreys: they shall lye with theyr chyl-dren, and turne agayne I wyll bynge them agayne also out of the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria. I will carry them into the lande of Silcad, and to Libanus, and they shall want nothyng. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the see waues so that all the floudes shall be dryed vp. The proude boistynge of Assur shall be cast downe, and the sceptre of * Egypte shall be taken awaye. I wyll comforte them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name: sayth the Lorde.

The .xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The case of the synners is commpted to chyl-dren by the father. A greuous bysion agaynst Ierusalem and Juda.

When thy doxys, O Libanus, & the fire shall make colume thy Cedretrees. Houle pe synners, for the cedre is falle: yea all the proude are wasted away. Houle O pe oketrees of Balan, for the myghty stog wood is cut downe. When maye heare the shepherdes mourne, for theyr gloze is destroyed. When maye heare the Lyons whelpes roze, for the pryde of Jordan is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: flete the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shall be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them, saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am ryche: yea, theyr owne shepherdes spare them not. Therefore wyll I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lorde) but lo, I wyll delyuer the people, euerye man into his neyghbours hande, and in to the hande of his kynge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of theyr handes I wyll not delyuer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) and toke vnto me two stauys, the one is called lounge kynnele, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the shepe. The shepherdes I put out of offyce in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with them, neyther had they anye delyste in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you nomore * the thyng that dyeth, let it dye: and that that wyll perishe, let it perishe: and let the remnaunte eate, euerye one the fleshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my lounge meke staffe and brake it, that I myght disannull the * connaunt whiche I made with all people. And so it was broken in that daye.

E Then the pooze symple shepe þ had a respecte vnto me, knewe thereby that it was the worde of the Lord. And I sayd vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, brynge hyther my price: yf no, then true.

mat. xxviii. c * So then they weyed downe thretye syluer pens, the value that I was prysed at. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly price for me to be valued at of them) and I toke þ xxx. syluer pens and cast them to þ potter in the house of the Lord. Then brake I myne other staffe also, (namelye destroyer:) that I myght loose the brotherherd betwixt Iuda and Israel. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the also the staffe of a folyshe shepherde: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, whiche shall not seke after the thynges that be loste, nor care for suche as go astray, he shall not heale the wou-but he shall cate the fleshe of suche as be fat, and teare theyr clawes in peces.

The xlii Chapter:

O f the destruction and baptyzme agayne of Ierusalem.

I He heuie burthen whiche the Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde * which spred the heauens abrode, layed the foundacyon of the earth: and gyueth man the breath of lyfe. Is. ho. b. c. I wyl make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfette, vnto all the people that are round about her. * Yea Iuda hym selfe also shal be in the siege agaynst Ierusalem. At the same tyme wyl I make Ierusalem an heuy stone for al prople, so that all suche as lyft vp. shall be tozned and rent: and all the people of the earth shall be gathered tog yther agaynst it.

Is. ho. b. c. * In that daye, sayth the Lorde: I wyl make all howles a howl, and those that crye vnto them to be oute of theyr wyttes. I wyl open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all the howles of the people with blyndnesse. And the princes of Iuda shall lye in theyr bettes: The lawyers of Ierusalem shall gyue me consolacyon in the Lorde of hostes theyr God. In that tyme wyl I make the princes of Iuda lyke an hote butyrage ouen with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre amonge the strawe, so that they shall consume all the people rounde about them, both vpon the ryght hande and the lefte. Ierusalem also shall be inhabited agayne: namelye in the same place where Ierusalem standeth.

E The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Iu-da lyke as afore tyme, so that the glozpe of the house of Dauid, and the glozpe of the cytyzens of Ierusalem shall be but lytle regarded, in com-paryson of the glozpe of Iuda. In that daye shall the Lorde defende the cytyzens of Ierusalem, so that the weakest amonge them shall be as * Da-uid: and the house of Dauid shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the Kingell of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroy all suche people as come agaynst Ierusalem.

Is. ho. b. c. * Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the cytyzens of Ierusalem * wyl I poure out the spryte of grace and compassio, so that they shall loke vnto me, whom they haue pearced, and they shall bewepe hym as men mourne for theyr only begotten sonne: yea, and be sorre for hym as men are sorre for theyr fyrst chyld.

D * Then shall there be a greate mourninge at Ierusalem: lyke as the lamentation at Adem-non in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shall bewaile euery kynned by them selues alone and theyr wyues by them selues. The kynned of the house of * Nathan them selues. The kynned of the house of Dauid them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues. The kynned of the house of Lem them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues. The kynned of the house of Semei them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them sel-ues. In lyke maner all the other generacions, euery one by them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues.

The xliii Chapter.

O f the well of grace and truche. O f the cleane ryd-

I At that tyme shall the house of Da-uid and the cytyzens of Ierusalem haue an open * well, to wash of synne and vncleennesse. And then sayth þ Lorde of hostes. * I wyl destroye the names of the ydols out of the lande. so that they shall nomore be put in remembraunce.

Is. ho. b. c. * As for the false prophetes also, and the vncleane spryte, I shall take them out of the land so that pf any of them prophete anye more, his owne father and mother that begat hym, shall saye vnto hym. Thou shalt dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begat him shall wounde hym, when he propheceth. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euery one of his vylion when he propheceth: neither shall they weare sackclothes any more, to disceyue me withall. But he shall be fayne to saye: * I am no prophete: I am an husbnde man, for so am I taught by * Adam fro my yowth vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: how came these woundes then in thyne handes: he shall answer. Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

E Asple, O thou swerde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * Smyte the shepherde, and the shepe shall be scatred abroad: and so I wyl tourne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe sayth the Lorde: that in all the lande two partes shall be rooted out, * but the thyrde parte shall remayne therein. And the same thyrde parte wyl I brynge thowowe the fyre, and wyl

Behold, the daye of the Lord cometh that thou shalt be spoyled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynst Jerusalem, so that the cite shall be wone, the houses spoyled, & the women defyled. The halfe of the cite shall go a waye into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the cite. After that shall the Lord go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as me vs to fight in the daye of batell.

When shall his feet stande vpon the mount Olivete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Ierusalem. And the mount Olivete shall cleue in two, eastward and westward, so that there shall be a great valeye, and the halfe mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other toward the south. And ye shall lie vnto the valey of my hylles, for the valeye of the hylles shall reache vnto Asal. Yea, he shall be as a pfeled for the earthquake in the dayes of Dauid kynge of Iuda. There shall men dwell, and there shall be no more cursynge, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. Euenry one shall remayne then of all the people, whych came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go vpearlye, to

At that tyme shall the cydynge gere of the house be holy vnto the Lord, & the kettels in the house shall be lyke the basens before the altar: yea, all the kettels in Jerusalem and Iuda, shall be holy vnto the Lord of hostes and all they that shal offer offrynges, shall come and take of them, & dryght them there in. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in the house of the Lord of hostes.

The booke of the prophete Malachy.

The fyrst Chapter.

A complaynt agaynst Israel and his prestes.

Mye deure burthen whyche the Lord sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you sayeth the Lord, & yet ye say: Wherein hast thou loued vs?

* Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the Lord? & yet haue I found Jacob, and hated Esau. * Yea, I haue made his hylles wast, and his heritage a wylderneesse for dragons. And though Edom sayd: well, we are destroyed, we will go buylde vpe agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lord of hostes) what they buylde, that brake I downe so that it was called a curled lade, and a people, whome the Lord hath euer ben angry withal.

Now to you prestes, that despyse my name And if ye saye: wherein haue we despyled thy name? In this, that ye offer vncleane bread vpon myne altar. And if ye saye: wherein haue we offered any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this that ye save the altar of the Lord is not to be regarded. If ye offer the blinde, is not that cruel? And if ye offer the lame and sycke, is not that cruel? * Yea, offer it vnto the prince, shall he be contented wth the, or accept thy persone, sayth the Lord of hostes.

And now make your prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde your personnes, thynke ye, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Yea what is he amonge you, that wyl do so muche as to shut the doores: or to kindle the fyre vpon myne altar for nought: * I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lord of hostes: * and as for the meatofferinge, I wyl not accept it at your hande. * For from the rising vpon of the sunne vnto the goinge downe of the same, my name is great amonge the Gentyls yea in every place shall there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meatofferinge offered vpon my name: for my name is great amonge the heathen sayeth the Lord of hostes. But ye haue unhallowed it, in that ye save, & altar of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set there vpon not worthe to be eaten.

Now saye ye. It is but laboure and tranayle and thus haue I thought scoone of it, (sayth the Lord of hostes) offeringe robbery, yea, the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferinge, wuld I accepte it of your hande, sayth the Lord. Cursed be the dyssembler, whych hath in his flocke one that is a male, & when he maketh a vowe, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lord. For I am a greete kynge (sayeth the Lord of hostes), and my name is fearful amonge the heathen.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ I denounce agayn the prestes beinge seducers of the people.

And now (O ye prestes) thys commaundement toucheth you: if ye wyl not heare it, nor regarde it, to geue y glorie vnto my name, sayeth the Lord of hostes. * I wyl sende a curse vpon you, and wyl curse your blessinges. yea, curse them wyl I, if ye do not take hede. Beholde, I will corrupte your seed, and cast donge in your faces, euen the donge of youre solempne feastes, and it shall cleave fast vpon you. And ye shal knowe, that I haue sente thys commaundemente vnto you that my couenaunt whych I made wth Leui, myght stande sayeth the Lord of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of lyfe and peace wth hym: thys I gaue hym, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, and hadde my name in reuerence. The law of truth was in his mouth, and there was no wyckednes founde in his lippes. He walked wth me in peace & equitie, and dyd turne many one a waye from theyr synnes. * For in the prestes lippes wuld be sure knowledge, that men maye kepe the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: * ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therefore wyl I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene parcial in the lawe.

* Haue we not all one father: hath not one God made vs: * whych doth every one of vs then despyse his owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Nowe hath Iuda offended: yea, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: * for Iuda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whych he loued, & hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lord shall despoile the man that doth thys: (yea, both the master and the scoler) out of the tabernacle of Iacob, wth hym that offereth vpon meatofferinge vnto the Lord of hostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to thys poynthe agayne, that the altar of the Lord is couered wth teares, weeping and mournynge: so that I wyl nomore regarde the meatofferinge, neyther wyl I receaue or accepte any thinge at your handes. And yet ye say: wherfore? Euen because that where as the Lord made a couenaunt betwixte the and thy wyfe of thy yowth, thou hast despyled. * Yet is she thyne owne companion and inayred wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent sperte. What dyd then the one: he sought the seed promysed of God. Therefore loke well to your sperte, and let no man despyse the wyfe of his yowth. If thou hatest her, * put her away sayeth the Lord God of Israel, & geue her clothyng for the scoone, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Loke well then to your sperte, & despyse her not. Ye greue the Lord wth your wordes, and yet ye saye: where wyl we greue hym? In thys that ye saye. All that do euill are good in the syght of God, and suche please hym. Wher els where is the God that punyssheth.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Of the messenger of the Lord John Baptyst of the dawe of the Lord, and of esay.

Beholde, * I wyl sende my messenger, whych shall prepare the waye before me: and the Lord & whome ye wolde shall soone come to his temple. yea, euen the messenger of the couenaunt whome ye longe for.

Beholde, he cometh sayeth the Lord of hostes. But who maye abyde the dawe of his comynge? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldsmithes fyre, and lyke walwers sope. He shall set hym downe to trye & to cleanse the syluer, he shal purge the chyldren of Leui, & purifye them lyke as golde & syluer: & they may bringe meatofferinges vnto the Lord in ryghteousnes. Then shal the offeringe of Iuda & Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord lyke as from the begynnynge & in the yeaeres afore tyme, I wyl come and punyssh the you, and I my selfe wyl be a swyfte wytnesse agaynst the wycked: agaynst the aduouters, agaynst false swearers.

¶ And Joſias helde þe feaſt of Eaſter in Jeruſalem vnto þe Lorde. ¶ And ſawe the Paſſeouer the .xiii. day of þe fyrſte moneth he ſet þe preaſtes alſo in order accordig to theiſe dayly courſes beunge arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he ſpake vnto þe Leuites the holy miniſtres of Iſrael, þe they ſhulde halowe them ſelues vnto þe Lorde. to ſet the holy Arke of the Lorde, in the houſe þe kynge Salomon the ſonne of Dauid had builded. and ſayde: Ye ſhall nomore beare the Arke vpon youre ſhoulders. Nowe ſerue your Lorde & take þe charge of his people of Iſrael. after your villages and your tribes accordynge as kynge Dauid the kynge of Iſrael hath ordeyned. and accordynge as Salomon his ſonne hath honourably prepared. ſee. loke þe ye all do ſcrupce in þe temple accordynge to theiſe ordynge & diſtribucion of the pryncypall men whiche are appointed out of the tribes. to do ſcrupce for the chyldren of Iſrael. ¶ And the Paſſeouer. ad prepare outtinges for your brethren. and do accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde. whiche was geuen vnto Moſes. And vnto the people þe was founde. Joſias gaue xxx thouſande of ſhepe lamues. kyddes and goates. and thre thouſand oxen. Theſe the kynge of his kyngeſpe lbera-lyte gaue vnto the people. accordynge as he had promyſed: & to the preaſtes for the Paſſeouer. he gaue two thouſande ſhepe. and an hundred oxen. Moreover Jerhontas. and Semerias. and Athanaell his brethren. and Maſabias Jehiel. & Joſabab gaue them to the paſſeouer. fyue thouſande ſhepe. and fyue hundred bullockes.

¶ And when theſe thynges were brought to paſſe. the preaſtes and the Leuites ſtoode goodly in theiſe ordynge. & had the unleuened bread thowwe out the tribes. And after þe ordynge of þe pryncypall men in the tribes. they offered vnto the Lorde in the ſyghte of the people accordynge as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moſes. & ſoo they roſted the Eaſter lambe as accordynge was. As for the thanckeofferynges & the other. they dight in the kettelles & pottes. & ſet them before þe people wyth good wyll. & afterwarde before them ſelues & the preaſtes. For the preaſtes offerede the fat vntyll the tyme was expyred. but þe Leuites prepared for them ſelues & for theiſe brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy ſyngers alſo. the chyldren of Aſaph ſtoode in theiſe order. accordynge as Dauid deuſed. So dyd Aſaph. zachary. & Jothum. which were appointed by the kynge. Moreover the porters & doore keepers ſtoode by the doores and that dyligently. ſo that none went out of his ſtandynge ad ſcrupce for theiſe brethren the Leuites prepared for them.

¶ This were all thynges perſourmed. that belongeth to the offeringe of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Paſſeouer and offered thanckeofferynges beſyde the ſacrifyce of the Lorde accordynge to the commaundement of kynge Joſias.

¶ So the chyldren of Iſrael which were the preſent helde an honourable Paſſeouer. and the feaſte of ſwete breade ſeuene dayes longe. ¶ Preſuche a Paſſeouer was not kept in Iſrael from the tyme of the prophete Samuel. And all the kyngeſ of Iſrael. helde not ſuche an Eaſter as theſe whiche kynge Joſias helde. and the preſtes the Leuites. the Jewes. and all Iſrael. of all them that were at Jeruſalem. And in the xxiij tene yere of the regne of Joſias was this Paſſeouer kepte. And w a perfecte herte dyd kynge Joſias order all his worches. before the Lorde and the thynges that were wyrtten of hym in tymes paſte. concernynge thoſe that ſinned and were vngodly agaynſt the Lorde before al people & that ſoughte not þe worde of þe Lorde vpon Iſrael. ¶ After all theſe actes of kynge Joſias. ¶ Pharaos kynge of Egypte went vp & came toward Carmis by Euphrates. & Joſias wente to meete hym. ¶ Then ſent þe kynge of Egypte to Joſias. ſaying what haue I to do with the. ¶ The king of Iuda. I am not ſent of þe Lorde to fight agaynſt the. for my warre is vpon Euphrates. go þe thy way home agayne in al þe haſt. And Joſias wolde not turne agayne vpon his chare. but undertoke to fighte agaynſt hi. & perkened not vnto þe worde of the prophete. which he told hym out of the mouth of God. but pytch d battayle agaynſt hym in the felde of Magaddo. And the prynces preaſed to kynge Joſias. ¶ Then ſayde þe kynge vnto his ſeruauntes. Carrye away out of the battayle. for I am ſore wounded. And immediately his ſeruauntes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. ¶ Then lat he rye vpon the ſeconde chare. came to Jeruſalem dyed. & was buried in his fathers ſepulchre. And in a .i. Iure they mourned for Joſias. ſee. þe rulers alſo. w their wyues made lamentacyon for hym vnto this day. And this was done euer ſyde in Iſrael.

¶ Fyue and twenty yere olde was Joachin when he was made kynge in the lande of Juda.

Then the pryncypall men out of the tribes & vyllages of Iuda, and Ben Iamin stode vp: so dyd the preastes also & the Leuites (whome the Lord had moued) to go vp, & to buyld the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem. And they that were aboute them helped them with al maner of golde, & syluer, and catel also, & with many lyberal gyftes, and thys dyd manye one, whose mynde was stered vp thereto. * Kyngc Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, & orna mentes, that were halowed vnto the Lorde (which Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had caried awaye from Ierusalem, and consecrated them to hys Idoll, and ymage) & deliuered them to Methusadan, hys treasurer, and by hym they were deliuered to Salamanasar the debite in Jewry. And thys was the nombre of the. ii. C. syluer bowles.
 xxx. syluer basens. xxx. basens of gold.
 ii. C. & iii. C. vessels of syluer, & a C. vessels of gold & syluer were. v. C. viii. C. and lx. These were nombred vnto Salamanasar, and to them they were come agayne wth hym to Ierusalem out of the captiuite of Babilon.
 * Nowe in the time of kyng Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia, these men: Salmes & Mithridatus, Sabellius, Ratamus & Balthemus, Semelius the scribe, & other that dwelte in Samaria & in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kyng Artaxerxes wherein they complained vnto the kyng of them in Jewry & Ierusalem. The letter was made after this maner. Syr thy seruauntes Ratamus, the story wypter, Sabellius the scribe, & other iudges of the courte in Celosiria, and Phenices Be it knowen & manifest to our lord the kyng, that the Jewes whiche are come vp from you vnto vs into the rebellyous & wycked citie begynne to buyld it agayne, and the walles about it, and to set vp the temple a newe. Nowe if this citie & the walles therof be set vp agayne they shall not onely refuse to geue trybutes and taxes but also rebell vnto the kyng. And forsomuche as they take this in hande now aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to shynke no scoorne of it but to shewe it vnto our lord the kyng, and to certifie hym thereof: to the intente that if it please the kyng, he maye cause it to be soughte in the Bookes of reorde

of olde & thou shalt fynde such warnynge wyrt ten, & shalt vnderstande þat this cytie hath alway bene rebellious and dysobediente, that it hath subdued kynge & cyties, & that þe Jewes which dwell therein, haue bene a rebellious, obstinate unfaythful, & fyghtinge people, for the whiche cause this citie is wasted. Wherefore now we certifye oure lord the kynge, that yf this citie be buylded and occupped agayne, and the wal-les thereof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Elosia and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the scrybe, & to the other offycers & dwellers in Si-ria, and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epytyle whiche thou sentest vnto me, & haue commaunded to make dyligent searche, & haue found, þat the citie hath euer resisted kynge, that the same people are dysobediente, and haue caused muche warre, & that myghty kynge haue caygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue raysted vp taxes of Siria, and Phenices. Wherefore I haue commaunded those people, þat they shal not buyld the cytie, & they make nomore in it, and that they proceed no farther wth the buylding for so muche as it myghte be the cause of warre and dyspleasure vnto kynge.

Nowe when Rathimus & Sabellius the scrybe & the rulers in the lande had red the wryt-tyng of kynge Artaxerxes, they gat them together, and came in all the haste to Jerusalem wth an hoste of horsemen, and wth muche people of foote, and forbade them to buyld.
And so they left of from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

The iii. Chapter.

Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre pange men, of the whiche the first is declared.

Kynge Darius made a great feast vnto his seruantes, vnto all his court, & to all the offycers of Media and Persia, yee to all the debtyes and rulers þe were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred & xxvii. countrees. So whē they had eaten & dronken being satisfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius þe king went into his chamber, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then þe thre pange men, þe kepte the luges per sone, & watched his body, comuned amonge thē selues, & spake one to another: let every one of vs say some thinge & loke whose sentence is wyser & more excellent then the other. vnto him shal kynge Darius geue great gyftes, & cloth hi w purple. He shal geue him vessels of gold, & to drinke, clothes of gold & coueriges: he shal make him a costly charret & bridle of gold, he shal geue him a bonet of white sylke, & a chapne of gold about his necke: yee, he shal be þe seconde & prynci-pal nexte vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wisdom, & shal be called the kinges kinsman.

So euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynge's yelow, & sayde: when the kynge aryseth, we will geue hym one wryttinges, and loke whose worde the kynge & his chiefe lordes iudge to be the mooste wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victorie. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thyng. The seconde wrote: The kynge is stronger. The thre wrote Women haue yet more strenght, but aboue all thynges þat he beareth awaye the victorie.

Nowe when the kynge was risen vp, they toke thē wryttinges & deliuered thē vnto hym, & so he red thē. Then sent he forth to call al his chiefe lordes & all the debtyes & rulers of þe countrees of Media & Persia. And whē they were set downe in the countre, the wryttinges was red before them. And he commaunded to call for the pange men & they myght declare thē meanings thē selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: We we vs & make vs vnderstande what the thynges are þe ye haue written. Then began the first which had spoken of the strenght of wyne, & sayde: O ye men - wine is meruelous stronge, & ouercommeth them & dryncke it it deceaueth the mynde & byngeth bothe the poore man & the kynge to dotage & vanite. Thus doth it also wth the bond-man & wth the fre, wth the poore & ryche: it taketh away thē vnderstandyng, & maketh them carelesse ad mery, so that none of them remembereth any heuynesse, or det, or dutye. It causeth a mā to thynke also þe thyng that he doth is honest & good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctorite, and that he oughte not to do such thynges. Adoucoue whē men are drynckynge, they forget all frendshipp all brotherly faythfulness & loue, but as sone as they are dronke, they drawe out þe sword & wyl fryghte. & when they are layde downe from the wyne, & forisen vp agayne, they cā not tel what they dyd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne þe strongest?
For who wolde els take in hāde to do such thyn-ges? And whē he had spokē this he held his tog

The iiij. Chapter.

The declaracion of the thre laste sentences of the pange men: propounded in the Chapter before: of whiche the last is, that wyne beareth þe victorie in all thynges & a mooste comendred and a lothed. Darius wryteth letters to al the rulers vnder hym, that they shulde abyde 30 dayes, to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

Then the seconde whiche had sayde: þat the kynge was stronger, began to speake, sayinge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, þe conquere the land and the see, and all that is in the see & in the earth. Now is the king lorde of all these thynges and hath the domynyon of them all and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. Yf he sende his mā forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hylles, walles, and towers.
They are slayne, and (slaye other men) them sel-ues, and ouer passe not þe kynge's worde. Yf they get þe victorie, they bynge the kynge al þe spoyle.
Likewise the other þe medle not wth warres & fyghtyng, but yll the grounde: whē they reape they bring tribute vnto þe king. And yf þe kinge alone do but commaund to kil, they kil. Yf he cōmaunde to forgiue, they forgiue. Yf he cōmaū-de to finite, they finyte. Yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue away: yf he cōmaund to buyld, they buyld: yf he cōmaūde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he cōmaund to plant they plant.

E Theyr beades also and the rulers in the try-

& the people that wente oute to Jerusalem, and in the countrey there aboute, the syngers also & y porters, every one of Israel in hys owne lade.

* So when the seventh moneth came: and when the chyldren of Israel were every man at hys busynesse, they came all wyth one assente in to the courte whych was before the Eastdoie.
And there stode Iesua y sonne of Josede, & hys brethren the preastes, and zorobabel, the sonne of Salathiel, and hys brethren, settynge vp an autler, to offre burnt sacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other coutries adthe heathen out of all landes, to set vp y autler in his place, and offred sacrifices and burnt of-ferynge vnto the Lorde in the mornynge. And so they helde the feaste of tabernacles, * as it is commaunded in the lawe. And daily offred they as accordynge was, and made the sacrifices ap-poynted, the offerynge also of the Sabothes, and of the newe moones, and all holpe feastes * And all they that bowed offerynge vnto the Lorde, beganne at the newe moone of the tenth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet builded. And they gaue vnto y masons & carpenters, monpe, meate, & drynke with chearfulnesse. Unto them of Sidon, also & Tire, they gaue carres, y they shuld carry Cedre trees, from Libanus to be ioystes, and beames and that they shulde make wyppes in the haue-n of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yere, they came into y temple of God, at Jerusalem * In the seconde moneth began zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Josede, & their brethren the preastes and Leuytes and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of y captiuite of Babylon, & layd y foundacyon of the temple, in y newe moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yere, y they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem.
And they apointed y Leuytes that were aboute, xx. yere old vnto the scrupce of the Lorde, so Jesua and hys sonnes, and hys brethren, all the Leuytes stode together, and perfonmed the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the preastes stode, and had theyr garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuytes, the so-nes of Asaph, had cymbales, geuyng thankes and prayes vnto the Lorde, according * as Da-uid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned.

And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde was after this maner * O synge vnto y Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all y people blewe out wyth trompettes, & sauge wyth lowde voyce prayynge the Lorde together, in the rearing vp of the house of y Lorde. There came also froamonge the preastes & Leuytes the rulers and elders accordynge to the trybes & kyndredes (suche as had sene the house afore to the buydynge of this temple with great cry, & great mournyng many also wyth trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the trompettes myghte not well be herde for the wepyng & mournyng. For the co-mune people blewe goodly vpon y trompettes.

* Then came the enemies of the trybes of Juda & Ben Jami, to knowe what that trompetyng & noyse of organes myght be. And they perceyued y it was they which were come agayne out of captiuite, & wolde buyd the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zorobabel, and Iesua, and the rulers of the byllages, & sayde vnto them. Shall we bu-ilde wyth you also: For we likewise haue heard your Lord, and we walke after the same maner from the dapes of Abasareth the kynge of Assyria, whych brought vs hither. Then zoro-bel & Iesua, and the rulers of the byllages of Israel, sayde vnto them: It is not mete, y ye shuld buyd y temple of our God w vs, we our selues alone wyl buyd vnto y Lorde, lke * as Cyrus y kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the land layde them sel-ues agaynst those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buydynge from them, layd wayte vpon the pryncipe, stopped such as broughte any thyng to them, forbad them to buyde, & bynded those

M At wythstandyng, in the seconde yere of the raigne of Darius * Aggeus & zacharye the sonne of Addo, propheted vpo the in Jewry, & Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel: * Then zozobabel, þe sonne Salathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Josede stood vp & beganne to buyld the house of þe Lorde at Jerusalem, when þe prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At þe same tyme came Sisennes þe vnder shene in Siria, & Phenices, with the landordes & þys companions, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buyld the house, to make the roofe and all other thynges agayne? And who are þe worke men, that buylded them? Neuerthelesse, the elders of þe Jewes had such grace of the Lorde, þe they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto, but buylded on styl, vntyl the tyme that kynge Darius were certyfyed therof, and an answer receiued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius was after thys maner.

Sisennes the vnder shene in Siria, and Phenices, and the landordes wyth theyr companions, whych are hedulers in Siria, & Phenices, sende theyr salutacyon vnto Darius the kynge. We certyfy the loide the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we foude them buyldyng þe great house of God, and the temple, wyth great costly fre stone, and with goodly tymbre for þe walles yee, they make great hast wyth the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in theyr handes, and with great dylgēce & worship is it made. Then asked we the elders who had commaunded them, to make vp þe house and the buyldyng: and thys we dyd, to the intent that we myghte certyfy the perfectly, and wyte vnto the, the names of those that were þe rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs thys answer: we are the seruautes of þe Lorde, which made heauen and earth, & as for thys house, & yt hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the great and myghty kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & sined agaynst the God of Israel, & he gaue them ouer into the powre of Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon the kynge of the Chaldees, whiche brake downe the house and bzēt it, and carped away the people prisoners vnto Babilō. * Neuerthelesse, in the fyrste yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babilon, Cyrus the kynge wrote & commaunded, to buyld the house agayne and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonozor caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilō, and appropiated vnto þys owne temple: these broughte Cyrus forth agayne, and deliuered them to zozobabel and to Salimanasar, the vnder shene, commaundyng them, that they shulde bryng those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalem, in to the temple, and begyn from y tyme forth, to buyld the temple agayne, in þys cōwne pl. c.

Then Salimanasar layde the foundation of the Lorde house at Jerusalem & euer sens thys heue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therefore O kynge, yf thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the Lybraries and rolles of kynge Cyrus yf it be founde then, that it is done wyth þe counsel and consent of kynge Cyrus, & yf our lord the kige be so minded, let him write vnto vs therof.

* Then commaunded kynge Darius to seke C in the Lybraries and so at Egbathans in a lytle cytie in Medea there was founde such a wyrtunge. In the fyrst yere of the raygne of Cyrus the same king Cyrus commaunded that þe house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne: and ordoures there to be made continually vnto þe Lorde whose hergh shalbe x cubites & the bredth thre score cubites, and foure square with thre hewen stones, with a losse of tyn bre of the same countre yea, with a new losse and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of þe kynge Cyrus and the ornamentes of golde & syluer that Nabuchodonozor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were afore. Sisennes also þe vnder shene in Siria, & Phenices, þe prynces and theyr companions, and the other þe head rulers in Siria & Phenices shal not medle nor haue any thyng to do wyth y place.

Cyrus haue commaunded also, þe they shal buyld the house of the Lorde hole vp and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come oute of captiuyte tyll the house of the Lorde be finished and out of the trybute and taxunge that is yearly raysed vp in Siria & Phenices dyngently to geue them a certayne summe of the enterang of the Lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto zozobabel the offycer, that he therewithal maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, and cozne, salt wyne, and oyle, and that contynually euer yee yere: after the expences whych the prestes þe be at Jerusalem. We to be made daylye, thys shalbe geuen vnto them wythoute delay & they may offer sacrifices dayly to highest God, for the kynge and for þys seruautes and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery syde, þe whosoever breakeyth or dyspryseth this commaundemente of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes made of þys owne good and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto þe king. The Lord therefore whose name is there called vpo roote out, and destroy al the kynges, and people that undertake by violence to hūdre þe same, or to deale vncourtously wyth the house of þe Lord at Jerusalem. I Darius þe kynge haue ordeyned þe these thynges shalbe done wyth all dylgēce.

wyth theyr companions, obeyed the thynges, that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in the holy workes, and were fellowhelppers wyth the old rulers of the Jewes. And the worke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus, and zachary prophesied. And they performed all thynges thorow the commaundemente of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kynges of Persya.

B And thus was our house fynished vnto the thirti. dape of the moneth Adder in the vi. yere of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, the prestes and Leuytes, and the other that were come out of captiuitie: and such as were ioyned vnto them, byd accordynge as it is wyrtten in the booke of Moyses. And in the dedycacion of the temple: they offred an hundred oxen, two hundred rāmes, foure hundred lābes, and twelue goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after the nombre of the trybe of Israel. The prestes also and the Leuytes stode araped in theyr priestly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer all the workes of the Lorde God of Israel: accordynge to the booke of Moyses, and the porters by all the doores.

C And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuitie) helde the passouer the fourteneth dape of the fyrste moneth, when the prestes and the Leuytes were sanctified. They that came out of captiuitie were not all sanctified together. But the Leuytes were sanctified together. And so all they that came out of captiuitie kyled the Easter lambe for their brethren, for the prestes and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, that came out of captiuitie and escaped from all the abhominacions of the heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of the vnleuened breade seven dayes longe, eatynge and drynckynge and were met by before the Lorde. For the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assiria, and comforted theyr handes to the workes of the Lorde God of Israel.

The vii. Chapter.

C Edras causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readeth them the lawe. He kept the feaste of the tabernacle.

1. Ed. vii. 1.

After hym when Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia raygned, there wente vnto hym Edras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of helchiach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boeris, the sonne of Abisui the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrste preste. This Edras wente by from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moyses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taughte and done in dede) And the kynge fauored hym, and byd hym great worshippe and honoure, after all his dayes. There wente by wyth hym also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the prestes, of the Leuytes, of the syngers, porters, and mynisters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seventh yere of the raygne of king

Artaxerxes, in the v. moneth, that is in the seventh yere of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the newe mone of the v. moneth, and came the hygh waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the Lorde hath prospered theyr journey. For in these Edras gat great instruction, that he shuld leaue none of the thynges behynde, whiche are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taughte helle Israel all righteousnesse and iust gementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, and deliuered the wyrtynge (that were come from Artaxerxes the kynge) to Edras the preste and reader of the lawe of the Lord. And this is the coppe of the letter kynge Artaxerxes sendeth bys gretynge vnto Edras the preste and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frende wyppes and good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuytes in my realme, whiche desyreth and is content to go wyth the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therefore, yf anye be myndid to beare the company, let them come together, and go wyth the (lyke as I am contente and my seven frendes, my counsellors) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thynges accordynge as thou haste, in the lawe of the Lorde, and to byng the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer and golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rāmes, shepe, and goates, and other that belöge to these thynges: and that they may offre sacrifices vnto the Lorde, vpon the aulter of the Lorde whiche is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do wyth the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde thy God, and lyke wyse wyth the holpe vessels that are geuen the, for the seruice of the house of the Lorde thy God and other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the worke of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynges treasure, and loke what thou wyth thy brethren wyll do wyth the golde and syluer, that do after the wil of the Lord. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices that whatsoeuer Edras the preste and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wyrtte, it shalbe geuen hym tyll an. C. talents of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner. Of come also an. C. measures and tyll an. C. vessels of wine, and other plenteous thynges without nōbre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the Lorde thy God, for the wrath of God arise not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also that ye requyre no taxe nor tribute of the prestes, Leuytes, syngers, and mynisters of the temple, nor of the wyrters, and that no man haue authorite to medle any thyng agaynst them. As for the Edras let thou iudges and arbiters in the hole lande of Syria and Phenices, after the wysdome of God, and learne all al such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lorde, ad let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punished whether yt be with death, w paine, to be cōdēpned in mony, or to be banished

1. cor. vii. a.

Then sayde Edras the wyrtter: * Blessed be the God of oure fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyl into the hert of the king to magnify his house that is at Jerusalem, ad hath made me to be accepted in the syghte of his kyng, of his counsaile, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accor-dyng as the Lord my God helped me, & chose men out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the heades, (after theyr kindes and houses of their fathers) that wente wth me from Babylō out of the kyngdome of Artahastēs. Of the sōnes of Phares Serlonius. Of the sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid: Ac-that were the laste: & these are theyr names. Eli-phalam, the sōne of Gebel, & Semelias, & wth roader Chua, where we pitched oure tente thre

* As for the sonnes of the preastes & Leuites, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Ecceion, and Masiam, & Malobam, and Canaathan, and Samea, & Jorpbimathā, Eunaga zachary, Adololamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sente them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddis, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddis and to his brethren, & to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myghte execute the preastes offyce in the house of the Lorde oure God, & wth the myghte hande of our Lorde God, they broughte vnto vs mē of good Anin, of whome there were xviij. From amōg the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananens, & their sonnes were twenty mē. And of them I serued whose names are all tokened by in wyrtynge.

* Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myghte de-spyre of him a prosperous journey, & a good way for vs: yea, for vs: for oure chyldren and for the catell, by cause of the layenges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kyngemen of horse and of foote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our enemy-es, for we had sayde vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lorde our God shulde be wth them that seke hym with theyr whole herte. And therfore, we besoughte God oure Lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I sepa-ted from among the rulers of the people, & from the preastes of the temple. xii. men, and Sebeia and Asania, ad ten men of theyr brethren wth them. And I weped them the golde and the syluer & all the preastly ornaments of the house of oure God, whiche the kyng, & his counsaile, & his prynces, and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed yt, I gaue them. a. hundred & fyfthe talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred ta-lentes of golde, & of golden vessel seven tymes twenty, & vessels of other metall: yea, of good metall twelue glystering as the golde, & sayde vnto them: ye are holpe vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, & the gold & the syluer is promy-sed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers.

We dyligente nowe, and kepe it, vntill tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuites, & to the principall men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambze of the house of oure God.

1. cor. vii. b.

* So the preastes and the Leuites whiche receaued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessell, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from the cyuer of Chua, we brake vp the twelue daye of the fyrste moneth, till we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lorde the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Joz the pre-aste, & wth hym was Eleazar the sōne of Phineas, and wth them were Josabbus the sonne of Jafnet, Medias, & the sonne of Banus, & certaine of the Leuites to the nombre and to the weyghte: & the weyghte of them was wyrtten by the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offred sacryfyce vnto the Lorde the God of Israel, even twelue oxen for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe xii. goates for synne: twelue kyne for a thankeoffering all to the sacryfyce of the Lorde. And the kynges commysion deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kyng: and to the vnderwy-ues in Celosyria, and Phenices.

1. cor. vii. a.

* Nowe, when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde. The generacion of Israel, the prynces, the preastes, and Le-uites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vncleynesse, from the Cananites Hethtites Pherecites, from the Moabites, Egyptians, and Edomites. For both they and theyr sonnes haue myngled themmedyatly I rente my holy garmentes, & pulled out the herte of my heade and my bearde & late were moued thowse the worde of þe God of Israel, came vnto me, & I sat styll full of heuyness vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastynge, haaynge rente clothes & the holy garment, kneled downe vpon my knees, held out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde. O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face for oure synnes are become manye vpon our be-ades: and oure wyckedneses are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers, we are in grete synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we with our brethren and wyth oure preastes haue bene deliue-red vnto the kynges of the earth into the sword and into captiuyte. & became a spople with cofusyon and shame vnto thys daye. And nowe O Lorde God: howe grete is the merce that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast left vs a name and a roote in the place of thy Sanctuary, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the Lorde oure God, and haue geue vs meate at all tymes of oure mynystracion. And when we were in captiuyte we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God, but he made the kynges of Persia gracious and favorable vnto vs so that they gaue vs vytales & meate pea, & leaue to build vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Syon and to dwell in Jewrye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lorde what shall we saie: haaynge all these thinges in possession: for we haue broken thy comma-ndementes, whiche thou gauest vnto vs by þe handes of thy seruantes the prophets saying The lande that ye go vnto & that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defiled wyth the uncleynesse and filthynesse of the heathen & wyth theyr abhominacion haue they po-luted it altogether. Therefore, shall ye not ioyne youre daughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor maye youre sonnes vnto theyr daughters. Moreouer ye shall not seeke to make peace with them, that ye maye increse and eate the beste in the lande & that ye maye deuyde the inheritaunce of the lade, vnto youre chyldren for ever more. As for þe thinge that nowe happened vnto vs, it cometh all for oure wycked workes and grete synnes, yett hast thou geue vs suche a roote that we are come agayne into oure lande, and we are so wycked, that we haue broken thy statutes & com-mandementes agayne: & myngled oure selues wyth the uncleynesse of the outlandyshe heathē O Lorde, arte thou angrie with vs: wylt thou roote vs cleane out: that oure roote and name remayne nomore? O Lorde God of Israel thou arte true: for oure roote endureth yett vnto this

 * And when Esdras wyth his prayez had knowleged the synne, wepyng and synge flat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a grete multitude of men and women, of yong men, and may-dens: for there was a very grete wepyng, and mourninge in the congregacyon. So when Je-chonias the sonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Esdras we haue synned agaynst the Lord, bycause we haue maried outlandyshe women of the heathen. Nowe art thou ouer al Israel. We wyl sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lord, that we shal put away all cure wyues whiche we haue taken of þe heathen: wyth theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoy-ned the by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, opē thou it and declare it playnely vnto vs, accord-yng to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we wyl helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke in othe of þe rulers, of the preastes, & of the Levites & of Israel, to do after these thinges: & they swore

The. ix. Chapter.

After Esdras had red the lawe, the people put away their strange wyues, and then returned euery man into his owne dwelling.

Then Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple wythout, and went into the chambre of Jonathas the sonne of Alabus, and remayned there and byd eate no meate, nor drynke dryncke: for the multitude of the wyckednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamacyon in all Jewry & at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuyte that whosoener came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of the counsaile) shys goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captiuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Benjamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the .ix. daye of the nyth moneth. And the hole multitude sat tremblyng in the courte of the temple for it was wynter. So Esdras rose vp, & sayde vnto them: ye haue done vncyghteously, in that ye haue taken outlandyshe wyues to maryage, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And nowe knowlege the same, & geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and performe his wyll, departyng from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. The cryed þe hole multitude wyth loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyl we do: but for so much as the people are manye, and the wynter heere, we may not stonde without the house: Agayne thys worke is not a thyng that cā be synlyshed in a daye or two: for we be manye, that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multitude, and they that dwell wyth vs, and as manye as haue outlandyshe wyues, the preastes also & iudges of euery place maye stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lord in thys busynesse.
 Then Jonathas the sonne of Eliel, and Esdras & Thecam receaued the charge of this matter, and Bozoranus, and Leius, & Sabatheus help, thym thereto. After thys, all they stode vp by that were come out of captiuitie. And E-dras the preste chose vnto hym the pryncypall men from amonge f fathers accordyng to theyr names, & in the newe moone of the .x. moneth they sat together, to examyne thys matter. And so þ matter was a deternynge ( concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyl the ne-we moone of the fyrst moneth. And of the prestes that had myrte them selues wth outlandyshe wyues there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Jesu: the sonnes of Josedec, and hys brethren, Ma-to offre a ranme for theyr ignorance. And of the sonnes of Semmery, Massas, & Elles, & Jee-

Of the syngers of the Sanctuary Elharib, za-the chyldren of Jolamā. Chanias, zachary, Jcischias, Larumoth, Sabbis, & Thebedias. And of the sonnes of zebes, Johannes, Amantias, zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Vannus, Olāmus, Maluchus, Jedbus, Jasub, Ala-bus, & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addi, Ra-atus, & Woolias, & Caleus, & Raanas, Waali-us, Mathathias, Wesel Wānus, & Wanalles.

And of the sonnes of Naue: Rones, Afeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simo, Ben Jamin, Walchus and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom: Caciancus, Mathathias, Wānus, Eliphalach, Wanalles, Semel. Of the sonnes of Ka-nnus, Jeremy, Woodias, Abzamas, Johel, Kaneus, Pelias, Jona, Marumoth, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Elialis, Oypas, Dielus, Semedius, zambrys, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus Jodelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, zeheda, Sedmi, Jesseus, & Waneas. All these had taken out-landyshe women to mariage, & they put them awaye wth theyr chyldren. The prestes & Leuytes, and all they that were of Israell, dwelte at Jerusalem and thore wout all the lande, in þ newe moone of the seventh moneth, and the children of Israel were in theyr dwellynge: And the whole myltitude came together, vpon the floore at the Easteside of the holpe porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Edras þ hye pre-aste, & reader, that he wolde brynge the lawe of Moses, whych was gauen of the Lorde God of Israell. So Edras the hye preaste brought the lawe vnto the whole myltitude, to man & woman to all the prestes, that they myghte heare the lawe. * in the newe moone of the vii moneth And he red in the floore that is before þ holpe port of the temple, from the moornynge earlye vnto þ euenynge, before men and women. And they ap-plyed theyr mynde all vnto the lawe.

¶ And Edras the preaste & reader of the lawe stode vpon a pulpet of woode, whych was made therfore, & vpon hys ryghte hande there stode by hym Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Erias, Ozechias, & Balsamus, vpon hys lefte hand stode staldus, Misael, Malachias, Abulchag, Sabus, Sabadias, ad zachary.

Then toke Edras the booke before the whole myltitude, for he was the pryncipal and had in mooste honoure of them all. And when he had red oute the lawe, they stode all straghte vpon theyr fete. So Edras praised the Lorde þ most hyest God, the almyghty God of hostes. And all þ people answered Amen and helde vp theyr handes, sei downe flat vpon the earthe, & praysed the Lorde. And Jesus, Weneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbathus, Calithes, Azarias, Jorabus, Ananias, and Whillas, the Leuytes lyfte their handes vwarde, ad bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and praysed þ Lord.
Those were they whych taughte the lawe of þ Lorde, & red the lawe of the Lord, in the congregacyon: and euery man set them before that vnder-stode the lawe. Then spake Acharates vnto Edras the hye preaste and reader, & to the Leuytes þ taughte the myltitude, sayinge: Thys dape is holpe vnto the Lorde, and all they that had herde the lawe, wypte. So Edras sayde. * ¶ Depart poure waye then, and eate the best, ad dryncke the swetest, and sende gyftes vnto the þ haue nothyng: for thys dape is holpe vnto the Lorde, & be ye not sorowful, for the Lorde wyl bring you to honoure. Then wente they theyr waye euerychone, and dyd eate and dryncke, and wer-merce, and sente rewardes vnto them that had nothyng, þ they also myghte eate wth gladnesse for they were excedyng reioysed thowowe the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe.
And so they were al gathered together at Jerusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the couenant of the Lorde God of Israell.

* And the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: go thy way and shewe my people their synfull dedes, and theyr chyldren theyr wyckednes, whych they haue done agaynst me, that they maye see that theyr chyldren chyldren the same for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why: they haue forgotten me, & haue offered vnto strange goddes. Am not I euen he that broughte them out of the lande of Egypte from the house of bondage? But they haue provoked me vnto wrath, & dyspysed my counsell. Pull thou oute than the heare of thy heade and eate all euill ouer them, for they haue not bene obedyente vnto my lawe.

It is a people wythout learnyng and nouer tounge. How longe shall I forbear them, vnto whome I haue done so muche good? * Manye kynnges haue I destroyed for theyr sakes. & Pharaos with his seruantes and al his powre haue I smyten downe & sleyn: Al the nacions haue I destroyed and rooted out before them, and in the Easte haue I broughte two landes and people to raught, euen Tyre and Sydon, and haue had all theyr enemies. Speake thou therfore vnto them sayinge. Thus sayeth the Lord: * I led you thowt we the see, and haue geuen you shir stretes, sence the begynnyng. & I gaue you Moyses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the preste. & I gaue you lychte in a pylle of fyre, and greates wonders haue I done amonge you yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the Lord.

Where are the benefites that I haue done for you? When ye were hongrye in the wyldernes, & dyd ye not cry vnto me. Why haste thou broughte vs into this wyldernes to kyl vs? It had bene better for vs to haue serued the Egypciens, then to dye in this wyldernes. Ther had I petie vpon your murmurings. And gaue you Manna to eate. & ye did eate angels foode. The iiij. Chapter.

The synners of the north haue moeth her owne chyldren, & the gentiles are called.

Thus sayeth the Lord: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes, by my seruantes & prophetes, whych they wold not heare, but dyspysed my counsell. The mother that bare them, sayth vnto them. Go your way ye chyldren, for I am a wyddowe and forsaken: I brought you vp wyth gladnesse, but with sorrowe and heynesse haue I lost you for ye haue synned before the Lord your God, & done the thyng that is euill before hym. But what shall I nowe do vnto you? I am a wyddowe and forsaken go your way & my chyldren, and aske mercye of the Lord. As for me, O father, I call vpon the for a witnes ouer the mother of these chyldren which wold not kepe my couenaunt, that thou byngest them to confusyon, and theyr mother to a spyle, that she bear nomore. Let theyr names be scatered abroad amonge the heathen. Let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thoughte scorn of my couenaunte.

Go vnto the Assur, thou that bydest vnto the unrighteousnes by the. Thou wycked people remembere what I dyd vnto Sodome, ad Gomorre, whose lande is turned to pytch & ashes. Euen so wyl I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayeth the Almightye Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto Esdras: tell my people, & I wyl geue them the kyngedome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glorie also wyl I take vnto me, & geue the & euerlastig tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those.

The tree of lyfe shalbe vnto them a swete smellpunge opntemente: they shal nether laboure nor be weery. So ye poure waye, and ye shal receaue it. Praye for poure selus a fewe dayes, that they maye dwell therein.

Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you therfore watche. Take heauen & earth to wptnes for I haue broken the euil in peccis, and created the good, for I lyue sayeth the Lorde. No other embrace thy chyldren, and brynge them vp with gladnesse make theyr fete as faste as a piller, for I haue chosen the sayeth the Lorde.

And those that be dead wyl I raple vp agrayne from theyr places, and brynge them oute of the graues, for I haue knowne my name in in Israel. Heare not thou mother of the children for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruantes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified & prepared for & twelue trees with byuers frutes, & as many welles, flowinge with mylke and honye, and seuen mountaynes, where vpon there growe Roses and Lylies, wherein I wyl fyll my chyldren wth ioye. Execute iustice for the wyddowe, be iudge for the fatherles: geue to the poore, defend the cofortelisse: clothe the naked heale & wounded & sicke, laugh not a lame mā to scoone: defende the crepell, & let the bynd come into & lyghte of my clearenes: where so euer & findest the dead take the & bury them, & I shal geue & the firste place in my resurrection.

Job. i.

Holden thy selfe (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Feede thy chyldren O thou good nurse, stablyshe theyr fete. As for the seruantes whome I haue geuen the, there shal not one of them perishe, for I wyl seeke them from thy nombre, were not thy selfe.

For when the daue of trouble and heuyness cometh, other shal wepe & be sorowefull, but thou shalte be mery & plenteous. The heathen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothing agaynst the, sayeth the Lorde. My handes shal couer the, so that thy chyldren shal not se the feare euerlastyng. Be ioyful, O thou mother with thy chyldren, for I wyl deliuer the sayth & Lorde. Remember thy deade chyldre for I shal brynge them out of the earth, & shewe mercy vnto them for I am mercifull, sayeth the Lorde Almighty.

Embrace thy chyldren, vntill I come and shewe mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shal not faile.

I Esdras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mounte Oreb, that I shoulde go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naughte, and dyspyed the commandemente of the Lorde. And therfore I saue vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderstande. Loke for poure shepharde, he shal geue you euer lastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the worlde: Heredy to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlastyng lyghte shal shyne vpon you for euermore. The shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyfullnes of poure glorie, I testifie my sayoure ouer to: receaue the gyfte that is geuen you, ad be glad, geuynge thanckes vnto hym, that hath called you to the heauenlye kyngdome.

Raple vp, and stande faste: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lorde, whiche are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receaued glorious garments of the Lorde. Take thy nombre O synon, & put vpon the purpyle, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longest for, is fulfilled, beseeche the powre of & Lorde, & the people whiche haue bene called from the begynninge, maye be halowed.

* I Esdras saue vpon the mounte Sion a great people, whome I coulde not nombre, and they al praised the Lorde with songes of shakys geuynge. And in the middell of them ther was a yonge mā of an hie stature, more excellent the all they, & vpon euery one of theyr heades he set a crowne, and was euer higher & hygher, which I merueled at greatly. So I asked the angell, and sayde Syr what are these? he answered & sayde vnto me These be they, that haue put of the meztal clothyng, & put on the immortall ad haue testified and knowleged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde.

Apoc. vii. 2

Then sayde I vnto the angel what ponge persone is it, that crowneth them, & geueth the the Palmes in theyr handes? So he answered, & sayde vnto me it is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the world. Then began I greatly to commend them, thit stode so styty for the name of the Lorde. And so the angel sayd vnto me Go thy way, and tell my people, what maner of thynges and howe greute wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou haste sene.

The iiii Chapter.

The wonderfulles workes whiche God dyd for the people are related. Esdras maruelles & God suffereth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, whych yet are synners also.

In the thyrtye yere of the fall of the Egypte, I was at Babylō, & laye troubled vpon my bed, and my thoughtes came vpon my herte: for I sawe & desolaciō of Sion, and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, & my sprete was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearful wordes to the most hiest, and sayde O Lorde Lorde, thou spakest at the begynning when thou plantedst the earth & that thy selfe alone and gaueste conuynement vnto the people and a body vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy hādes, and haste bryethed in him the bryeth of lyfe and so he lyued before the, and thou leddest hym into Paradise, which garden of pleasure thy ryghte hand had planted, or euer the earth was made: And vnto hym thou gaueste commande-

comaunderment to loue thy waye which he tras-gressed, & immediatlye thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in hys generacions. Of hym came nacyons, trybes, people, and kynredes, oute of nombre. * And euery people walked after theyr owne wyll, and byd nyce thynges before the. ad as for thy comaundementes they dyspysced the.

Gen. vi. b.

Gen. vi. b.

* But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And lyke as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuerthelesse one of the besteste namelye Noe, wyth his household, of whome came al righteous men. And it happened when they dwelt vpon the earth, begonne to multiply, & had gotten many chyldren, & were a greate people, they bega to be more vngodly then Iustice.

Gen. vi. b.

Nowe when they all lyued so wyckedlye before the, & thou dydest chose the a man frome amonge them, whose name was Abraham.
Hym thou louedest, and vnto hym onelye thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euercastyng couenaunte wyth hym, promysynge hym that thou wouldest neuer forsake hys seed. * And vnto hym thou gauest Isaac, & vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dydest chose hym, and putt backe Esau. *
And so Jacob became a greate multitude.

And it heppened that when thou leddest hys seed out of Egypt: thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, lowynge downe the be-nens setting fast the earth, mouynge the ground makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde. And thy glory wente thorow four portes of fyre, and earthquakes, and wyndes and colde: that thou myghtest geue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and dyspynge vnto the generacyon of Israel. And yet toldest thou not a waye from them that wycked herte, & thy lawe myghte bypasse furth frute in them. For the synne Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed: and was overcome, and so be all they that are borne of hym. * Thus remayned weakenes & flawe in the hertes of the people, wyth & wyck-hednes of the roote so that the good departed & awaye and the euell a bode steyl. So the tymes passed awaye, and the peaces were broughte to an ende. * Then dydest thou raise the vp a seruaunte called Dauid, & whome thou commaun-dest to buyde a cytye vnto thy name: and to offre vp incense and sacryfyce vnto the therein.
Thys was done nowe many yeares. Then the inhabytors of the cytye forsoke the, & in all thyng ges byd euery as Adam and all hys generacions had done: for they also had a wycked herte.

Gen. xxi. f.

Gen. xxi. g.

Gen. xxi. h.

And so thou gauest thy cytye ouer into the handes of thynne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people that they shall therefore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe theyr vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse: that it coude not be nombred: yee, when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the thyrty year) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, howe thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wicked doers: but thynne owne people hast roted out, & preserued thynne enemyes, and thys hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue howe thys happeneth Do they of Babilon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there anye other people that knoweth the, saynge that people of Israel? Or what generacyon hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appereth not, and theyr labour hath no frute. For I haue gone heare and there thorow the heathen, and I se that they be ryche and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy comaundementes. Wylet thou therefore our wyckednesse nowe in the balaunce and theyr also that dwel in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde: but in Israel Or where is there a people vpon earth, & hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kepte thy comaundementes? Thou wylte fur-de that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The.iii. Chapter.

The Angel reprooueth Iudas, because he seemed to enter into the piteous iudgements of God.

And the Angel that was set vnto me (whose name was Urpel) gaue me an answer, and sayd: thy herte hath taken to muche pon it in this worlde and thou thynkest to comprehende the waye of the byeste. Then sayde I: Pee my Lorde And he answered me, and sayd I am sente to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth the synnytydes, before the wherof I canste declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, that thou desyrest to se: And I shal shewe the from whence the wycked herte cometh.
And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde Then sayde he vnto me: So thy waye, weye me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaske of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is paste. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? why requyrest thou suche of me?
And he sayd vnto me: If I shuld aske the howe depe dwellynge is in the see? Or howe great waterspynges are vpon the firmamente? Or howe greate waterspynges are in the begyn-nyng of the depe? Or whych are the out gornges of Paradyse? Parauenture thou wouldest saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther byd I neuer clyme vp to heauen. Neuerthelesse nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and wynde, and of the day, where thorow thou hast traupled, and frome the whych thou canst not be seperated: and yet canst thou geue me none answer of them.

He sayde moreover vnto me: Thynne owne thynges, and suche as are growen vp wyth the canst & not knowe howe shold thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the byeste, and nowe outwardelye in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is cudyent in my syghte: Then sayde I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wickednes, and to suffre, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me and sayde: I wente in a woode

In a wood, and the trees toke such a deuptye, & sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye before vs, & that we maye make vs yet moze wooddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke thys deuptye, and sayd: Come let vs go vp, and fyghte agaynst the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lade the wyder. The thought and deuptye of the wood was but vayne and no thyng worth, for the fyre came & consumed the woode: The thoughte of the floudes of the see: camelyke wyse to noughte also, for the lande stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayd: Merely it is a folys thought that they both haue deuptyed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, & the see also hath hys place to beare hys floudes. Then answered he me, & sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgeth thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the see to his floudes, even so they that dwell vpon earthe maye vnderstande not whyng, but that which is vpon earth: & he that dwilleth aboue the heuens, maye onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heuens. Then answered I & sayd: I beseech the Lord let me haue vnderstanding: for it was not my mind to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of such as we dayly medle wthal, namely wherfore that Israel is blasphemed of the heathen, & for what cause the people (whom thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodly naciōs: & why the lawe of oure fathers is broughte to nought and the wyrtten couenantes come to none effecte, and passe awaye out of the worlde as the grethoppers, & oure life is a very feare, & we are not worthy to optayne mercye. What wylle he do then vnto hys name, whiche is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked questyon.

Then answered he me and sayde: The more thou searchest, the more thou shalt maruell, for the worlde hatheth fast to passe awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges, that are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come for the tyme the worlde is ful of vnrightheousnes & weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I wylle tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccyon thereof is not yet come. If the euell nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and if the place where the euell is sowen, passe not awaye, then cannot the thyng come that is sowen wth good. For the corne of euell sēde hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the begynnyng, and howe muche vngodlynes hath be broughte vp vnto thys tyme: and howe much shall be yet byngge forth, vntill he come into the barne.

Wondre now by thy selfe, whē the corne of euell sēde is cut downe, howe grete a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfore are our peres few & euell? And he answered me, sayung:

Haſte not thou to muche vpon the byest, for thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to moche ado. Wpd not the soules also of the ryghteous aske questyon of these thynges in their holynesse, sayung: How longe shall I hope of this fashion: When commeth the fauour of my barne and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangell gaue them aunswere, & sayde: Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in pou, for he hath weyed the world in the balance: in measure & nombze hath he measured the tyme and moueth it not vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then aunswered I and sayde: O Lord, nowe are we ful of synne, & for oure sake peraduenture it is not, that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fulfilled, because of the synne of them that dwell vpon earth.

So he aunswered me & sayd: So thy waye to a woman wth chylde, & aske of her, when she hath fulfilled her nyne monethes, if her chylde may kepe the byrth any longer wthyn her. Then sayde I: No Lord that can she not. And he sayde vnto me. In hell the secret places of soules are lyke the preuue chambre of a woman that trauplet, & maketh hast, whē the tyme & necessity of the byrth is at hand: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it that is committed vnto her. Like what thou desyrest to se, it shall be shewed the from the begynnyng. Then aunswered I, & sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte & if it be possible, & if I be mete therfore shewe me the whether there be mo to come then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe, but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stand vp vpon the right syde, & I shall expounde the similitude vnto the. So I stode & beholde, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me & it happened that whē the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much raine vnto a storme & when the stormy raine was past the droppes remained styll. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the raine is more then the droppes, & as the smoke, euen so the measure of the thynges that are past hath the vpper hand. Then went the droppes and the smoke alone, and I prayde & sayde: maye I lyue (thynkest thou) vntill that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He aunswered me, and sayde: As for the tokens wherof thou askest me, I maye tell the a parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The v. Chapter.

Edras and the Angell comen together.

Euerthelesse, as concernynge the tokens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they whiche dwell vpon earth, shall be taken in a grete nombze, and the waye of the truthe shall be hyd, and the lande shall be barren from fayth: but iniquitye shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene nowe, and as thou hast heard longe ago. And the lande that thou seest nowe to haue rule, shall thou shortly se waste waste. But if God graunt þ to lyue, thou shalt see after the thynde trumpet þ the sunne shall suddenly shine agayne in the nyght, & the mone. iii. times in the daye, & bloude shall drop out of the wood, & the stone shall geue hys voyce, & the people shall be in quyet: & euē he shall rule, whō they hope not, þ dwell vpon earth, & the foules shall flyt: & Sodomytish see shall cast out his fishe, & make a noyse in þ nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof.

There shall be a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shall be oft sent agayne, & the wild beastes shall go theyr way, and monstrous women shall bare monstres, and salte waters shall be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyght agaynst another then shall wpt & vnderstandyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secret places, & shall be sought of many, & yet not be found: then shall vnrpyghteousnes & voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another, and saye: Is rpyghteousnes gone thorow the? And it shall saye: Noo. At the same time shall men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shall labour, but theyr wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the such tokens I haue lene and if thou wylt praye agayne, & wepe as now, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearfulness went thorow all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost scoured wythall. So þ Angel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countynance so heuy? knowest thou not that Israel is comytted vnto the in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Eyt then and eate, & forsake vs not, as the shepheard that leaueth hys flocke in the handes of the wicked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: So thy wayes from me and come not nye me: & he herde it, and as I sayde, so went he his waye from me. And I fasted seuen dayes, mourninge and wepyng, lyke as Uryell the Angel commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened that the thoughtes of my heart were very greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receaued the sprete of vnderstandyng, and I beganne to talke wyth the moost hygh est agayne & sayde: O Lorde Lorde, of euery woode of the earth & of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneparde: and of all landes of the whole worlde, thou hast chosen the one pit, & of floures of þ groude, þ hast chose þ one lilye: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast fylled the one cyner: and of all buylded cytyes thou hast halowed Spon vnto thy selfe: & of al the foules þ are created, thou hast named the one done, & of all the cattel that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge all the multitude of folkes thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whome thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou genen this one people ouer into many? And vpon the one roote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattered the one onely people amonge many? whyche treade them downe yee, which haue euer wythstaude thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And thoughe thou were enemye vnto thy people, yet shouldest þ punish them wyth thyne owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these wordes, the Angel that came to me the nyght afore, was sente vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thyng that I saye and I shall tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou arte sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made them? And I sayde: No Lorde but of very grete and compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experyence of the ware of the moost hygh est, and to seeke out parte of hys Iudgemente. And he sayde vnto me that thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldbed then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauaile of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Amonge the thynges þ are not yet come gather me together the droppes that are scattered abroad, make me the floures grene agayne, that are wythered, open me the thyng that is closed and byng me forth the windes, that are shut up shewe me þ ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thyng, that thou labourst to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not lvs dwellinge wyth them? As for me, I am vnwylle he we maye I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me.

Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue sayen of: euen so cast thou not synde out my Iudgement or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Scholde, O Lorde, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doo, that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wylt loken my Iudgemente vnto a tynge. Lyke as there is no slackenelle of the laste, euen so is there no wyftenesse of the friste. So I answered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy Iudgemente the sooner? Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haue a boue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at once, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Nowe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaunt, þ thou liuing maker, last made the creature lyuyng at once, & the creature bare it: euen so myghte it now also beare them þ be present, at once. And he sayd vnto me: Aske the chyldbede of a womā, & say vnto her: If þ bringest forth the chyldren, why dost thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore to byrge to bypunge forth. x. chyldren at once. And I sayde he can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a chyldred vnto the earth: for those that be sowen vpo it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a ponge chyldre maye not bypunge forth the thyngges that belonge to the aged euen so haue I or-deyned the worlde whych I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seynge thou hast nowe geuen me away, I wyl speake before the for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet ponge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age he answered me and sayde: Aske a woman & beareth chyldren, & she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whome thou haste nowe brought forth lyke those & were before & but lesse of stature? And she shall aunswere the:
They that be borne in the youth of strength, are of one fashyon, & they & are borne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldred fayleth) are otherwyle Consyder nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures whych nowe begyn to be olde, ad haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseeche the, yf I haue founde sauoure in thy spght, shewe thy seruante, by whome doest thou vylet thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

The Angel instructed Elias, and graunted hym aunswere to his questions.

IN the begyn-nyng when & grounde was made before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred, & lpghtened or euer the foundacions of paradiſe were layd, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer & moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, or euer & hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the firmant were named, or euer & chym-neys in Sion were hote, & or the present peaces were sought out, & or euer the muencions of the & nowe sunne, were put asyde, before they were sealed & now gather sayth for a treasure: the did I consyder & ponder al these thynges, & all they were made thowowe me, & thowowe none other: by me also they be ended, & by none other. Then aunswered I & sayde: whych shall be the parting asunder of the tymes? Or when shall be the ende of the fyrste, & the begynnynge of it & foloweth And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob & Esau, were borne of him Jacobs hande helde fyrste the bele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwxt the bele and the hande. Other questyon (Elias) aske thou not.

I aunswered then & sayd: O Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde sauoure in thy spght, I beseech the shewe thy seruante the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou thewedst me parte the last nyght So he aunswered and sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & sounde. There shall come a greates moeyon, but the place wher thou standest shall not be moued And therfore when thou hearest the wordes be not astrayed, for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstande. And why: the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, & it must be chaunged at the end And it happened, & when I had herd it, I stode vp vpon my fete: and hekened, & beholde, there was a voyce, that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde:

Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyl begynne to drawe nye; & to vylet them that dwell vpon earth, & wyl begynne to make inquspicyon of the, what they be that haue burnt equyte wth vntygtheousnes, & when & lowe estate of Spō shall be fulfilled, & whē the world, & shall vanysh a way: shall be ouersealed, the wil I do these tokes

The booke shall be opened before the fyrmament, & they shall se all together, & the chyldren of a yere olde shall speake wth theyr vyces: the women wth chyldre shall bypunge forth vnto mely chyldren of thre or four monethes olde, & they shall lyue: & be rapsed vp and sodenly shall the lowen places appere as & vnsowne, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, ad the trompeter shall geue a sounde, whych when euerye mā heareth, they shall be hastily afrayde * At that tyme shall frendes spghte one against another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stan-de in feare wth them.

The springes of the wells shall stand dry, & in. lii. houres they shall not renne. Whosouer remayneth from all these thynges & I haue tolde & shall escape, and se my saluacyon, & the ende of poure worlde. And the men that haue receaved shall se it they & haue not tasted death from their byrth: & the bert of the indwellers shall be chaunged, & turned to another meanyng, for euerye shall be put out, & dysceate shall be quenched. And for sayth, it shall flourish, corrupcio shall be ouer come & the truth, whych hath bene so long wont frut, shall be declared And it happened whē he talked w me, & I loked demurely vpo him before whō I stode, & these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe & the time of & night so to come.

Yf thou wylte praye yet moare, and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the moare thyngges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyghest for why: the nyght-tyr hath sene thy ryghteous dealyng, he hathe sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy youthe: & therfore hathe he sente me to shewe the all these thynges & to saye vnto the.

Be of good comforte, and feare not, & haste not wth the tymes that are past to thinke vaine thynges, & make not haste of the latter tymes.

And yt happened after thys, that I wepte agayne, & fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, that I myght fulfyl the thre wokes whych he tolde me. In the viii. nyght was my hert vered wth in me agayne. And I began to speake before & lypest, for my sperte was greatly set on fyre, ad my soule was in distresse, & I sayde: O Lorde, & spake vnto thy creature from the begynnynge

Shb ii. (euen

Gen. i. a.

(euen the first daye) and sayd: * Let heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worke. And then was there light, and the darcknesse were yet on euery side, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from y. Then commaundest thou a fayre light to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke myghte appere and be sene.

Upon the second day thou madest the spere of the firmamente, and commaundest it to part a sunder, & to make a dyuysyon betwixt y waters, & the one parte myghte remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon y iii. day thou broughtest to passe, & the waters were gathered in the vii. part of y earth. vi. partes hast thou dried up and kepte them, to the pntente that men myghte sow & occupy husbandry therein. As sone as thy word went forth, the worke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable fruit and many dyuerse pleasures and despises of temptation, floures of changeable colour and smell, and thys was done the.iii. daye.

Gen. i. b.

* Upon y.iii. daye thou commaundest that the sunne shulde geue hys shyne and the moone her light: y. starrs dydst thou set in ordre: and gauest the a charge, to do scrupce euen vnto this y was so: to be made. Upon y. v. day y saydst vnto the vii. parte * (where y waters were gathered) y they shulde brynge forth dyuers beastes, fowles & fyres. And so it came to passe, that the domie waters and without soule brought forth liuyng beastes, at the commaundement of God that all people myghte prayse the wonderouse workes. Then dydst thou pcelerue two soules the one thou caldest Enoch and y other Lulathan, and dydst separte the one from the other for the vii. parte (namelye where y water was gathered together) myghte not holde them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dyed vpp y iii. daye y he shuld dwell in the same parte, wherin are y. iii. hylls. Vnto Lulathan thou gauest the vii. parte, namelye y moyst and hast kept hym to denoure what thou wilt and when. Upon the vi. day thou gauest commaundement vnto y earth, & before the, it shuld bryng forth bestes, catell, and all y. crepe, and (besydes thys) Adam also, whome y. madst lord of all thy creatures. Of hym come we all, and y people also, whome thou hast chosen specpally vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myghte shewe howe y the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people whiche also come of Adam y. hast sayde & they are nothyng, but be lyke a spytte, and hast likened y. a bundance of them vnto a drop y. falleth from the rose of the house.

And nowe, O Lorde, the heathen whiche haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue be gon to be Lordes ouer vs and to deuour vs but we thy people (whome thou hast called the sp. the borne, thy only begotten, and thy seruēt lower) are geuen into their handes and power. If the world nowe be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inherptaunce in possession wpth the worlde. Howe longe shall thys endure?

The Angel. Beware of thys many thynges to come.

And it happened after that I had spokē oute these wordes there was sent vnto me an Angell whiche had bene by me also the nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me. Cap. Elias, and heare y. wordes y. I am come to tel the. And I sayde speake on Lorde my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a world place that it myghte be deape and greate, but the entraunce is narrowe and small lyke a ruer. For who wolde go into the see, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not thorow y. narrowe, howe myghte he come into the brode?

Item another: A cypre is buylded and set vpon a broad felde, and is full of all goodnesse the entraunce is narrowe and sodapne, lyke as yf there were a spire at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onely one strait pathe betwixte them both so small, that there coulde but one man go there.

If thys cypre nowe were geuen vnto an heyre and he neuer wente thorow the parlous waye, howe wold he receaue hys inherptaunce? And I sayde. It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcyon. And wpp: for they. sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng Judged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrowe, full of sorowe and traunple. They are but fewe and euell, full of perilles and labour. For the entraunces of the fore world were wyde and sure, and broughte immortall fruite.

If they nowe whiche are entred into thys worlde, maye not comprehend these strait and vayne thynges, much lesse may they comprehend and vnderstand y. secret thynges. Why dyfquire test thou thy selfe then seing thou arte but a corruptible man? And what woldst thou knowe where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyng y. is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayde I. O Lorde Lorde, * thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde peryshe. Neuerthelesse, the ryghteous shall suffer strapte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strapte thynges, shall not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge about God, and none that hath vnderstanding aboue y. hyghest. For there be many y. peryshe, because they dyspyle the lawe of God y. is set before them. For God hath geuen strait commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and be wether they shulde lyue: and if they kepte thys, they shulde not be punyshed.

Neuerthelesse, they were not obedyent vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym, y. imagined vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayde in our ouer. y. there was no God, and y. God regarded it not. hys wayes haue they not knowe, hys lawe

Gen. vii. a.

lawe haue they dyspylled, and denyed hys promyses: in hys statutes and ordynances haue they not bene fapthfull and steadfast, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes.

And therfore Eldras: vnto the full, plenty and to the emty, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens whych I haue told the, shall come to passe, and the byrde shall apere and the earth that nowe passeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoever is deliuered from y<sup>e</sup> euell, shall see my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, with those that be with hym and they that remayne: shall be mery in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shall be turned into the oldesplence seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore Judgements so that noman shall remayne. And after seuen dayes, y<sup>e</sup> worlde that yet awaked not, shall be rapted vp, and shall dye corrupt. And the earth, shall restooze those that haue slept in her: and so shall the dust those that dwell in splence, and the secret places shall deliuer those that be commytted vnto them.

And the moost hyghest shall be openly declared vpon the seate of Judgemente, and all myserye shall vanysh awaye and longe sufferynge shall be gathered together. But the Judgement shall contynue, y<sup>e</sup> truth shall remayne, and fapth shall wake strong. y<sup>e</sup> worke shall folowe, & y<sup>e</sup> reward shall be shewed y<sup>e</sup> ryghteousnes shall watch, and the vnryghteousnes shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, and Moses for y<sup>e</sup> fathers that sinned in y<sup>e</sup> wyldernesse, and he that came after hym for Israel, in y<sup>e</sup> tyme of Ahas, and Samuel and David for y<sup>e</sup> destruccyon, and Salomo for them that came into the sanctuary, & heli-as for those that receaued rayne, and for y<sup>e</sup> dead y<sup>e</sup> hemyghte lyue, and Ezechias, for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib and dyuerse other in lyke maner, whych haue prayed for many.

Euensow, seying the corrupt is growe vp, and wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also?

He answered me, and sayd: Thys present worlde is not the ende, there remaineth muche honoure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shall be y<sup>e</sup> ende of thys tyme, and y<sup>e</sup> begynnyng of the immortalte for to come, wherin al corrupcyō is vanyshed all voluptuousnes is lowled al myselue taken away, righteousnes growen, & the verite spōg vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed, nor oppresse him y<sup>e</sup> hath gotten the victoꝝ. I answered then, & sayde: This is my first and last saying: y<sup>e</sup> it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym that he shoulde not synne. For what profyt is it for men nowe in thys presente tyme to lyue in heynesse, and after death to loke for punyshement? O thou Adam, what haste thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone but we all that come of the. For what profyt is it vnto vs, yf there be promysed an immortal tyme: where as we meddle wyth deadly worckes? And yf there is promysed vs an everlasting hope, where as our selues are euell and wayne and that there are layde vp for vs dwellynge of helthe and fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, and that the worthyppe of the hyghest is kepte to defende them whych haue led a pacyente lyfe, where as we haue walched in the moost wycked wayes of all: And that there shall be shewed a Paradyse, whose fruyte indureth for euer, wherein is fredome and meryte, where as we shall not goo in: for we haue walched in vnpleasaunte places: And that the faces of them whych haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shall be blacke and darcke: For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteously, we consydred not, that we shoulde suffre death.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consyderacyon and thoughte of the battle, whych man hath vpon carthe. that yf he be our come, he shall suffre as thou haste sayde. But yf he get the victoꝝ, he shall receaue the thyng that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, whereof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, sayinge. * Chuse the lyfe that thou mayeste lyue: neuerthelesse, they beleued hym not, neyther the prophetes after hym.

So, now me whych haue spoken vnto them, that heynesse shoulde not reache vnto them, to theyr destruccyon, lyke as iore is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be infourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then and sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the hyghest is mercyfull, in that he hath merce vpon them, whych are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in hys lawe and that * he is pacpente and longe sufferynge towarde those that haue sinned in theyr worckes, and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyrez: and that he is of grate merce, for he multiplyed hys lounge kyndnesse towarde those that are presente, and that are past, and to them whych are for to come.

For yf he multiply not hys mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lounge, with those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of hys goodnes that they whych haue done euell, myghte be eased, from theyr wyckednes, the ten thousand part of men shoulde not be made lounge. And yf y<sup>e</sup> Judge forgave not those that be healed with hys worde, & yf he wold destroy the multytud that cryueth, there shoulde be very fewe left in an vnnumerable multytud.

The vii Chapter.

Eldras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys owne merces, then vpon the synnes of the people.

And he answered me, sayinge: The mooste hyghest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a synplytude, Eldras: As when thou askeste the earth, it Shall saye vnto the, that it groweth much moulde wger of earthen vessels are made, but lytle of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it wth the worke of thyngs worlde. * There be many created, but fewe shalbe preserved. Then answered I & sayde: When swalowe vp the wytte, thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstandng. for thou arte agreed to hearken & to geue eare, & wplyng to prophesy: for thou haste no longer space geuen the, but onely to lyue. O Lorde, wilt thou not geue thy seruante leaue, that he may pray before the, and that thou mayest geue scd vnto oure herte, and buyde oure vnderstandng that there maye come fructe of it: and that euery one whiche is corrupte, & beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one worke m&shipp of thy handes lyke as thou hast sayde, & lyke as the body is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, & guest the members & thy creature is preserved in fyre & water & nyne moones: thes doth thy worke suffer thy creature whiche is fashioned in her: but the tyngge that preferueth, and it that is preserved shal bothe be kept together and when tyme is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou haste commaunded the bestes to geue milke vnto the frute, that the thyng which is created and fashioned, maye be nourshe for a tyme: & when thou dysposest & ordrest it wth thy merce, byngest it vp wth thy ryghteousnesse nuturest it in thy lawe, and refourmest it wth thy vnderstandng, mortifiest it as thy creature, & makest it lyving as thy worke. Seing then & thou destroyest him, which with so great labours is created & fashioned thorow thy commaundement, & couldest lyghtly ordayne also & the thyng whiche is made myght be preserved.

And thus I spake nowe of all men in generall, as I knoweste but of thy people, for whose sake I am sorowful & of thyne inheritaunce for whose cause I mourne. & of Israel, for whom I am wofull: & for Jacob for whose sake I am greued therfore begyn I to pray before the, for my selfe and for the, for I se the fal of vs euen of vs. & dwelle vpon erth. But I haue heerd & swiftnes of & iudge which is to come therfore heare my voyce, & vnderstande my wordes & I shall speake before the.

Thys is the begynnyng of the wordes of Elias, before he was receaued. O Lorde thou that dwellest in euerlastyngenesse, whose eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre, whose stooke is exceeding hye, whose glorie and mayesty may not be comprehended, before whome the hostes of heauen stande wth tremblng, whose keeping is turned in wyne and fyre, whose word is true whose talkyng is steadfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordynance is fearful, whose lookes dyeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melte away and whose truth beareth wptnesse: O heare the prayer of thy seruant, and marcke wth thyne eares the petycon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue I will speake, & so longe as I haue vnderstandng, I will aunswere & looke not vpon the synnes of thy people whiche serue in the truth. Haue no respecte vnto the wycked studeys of the heathen, but to the dyspyze of those that kepte thy testymonyes wth sorowes. Thyncke not vpon those that haue walked fapnedly before the, but vpon them, whiche wth wyl haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroy them, which haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpon the that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, whiche are whorise the bestes but loue them, & alway put theyr trust in thy ryghteousnes and glorie. for we and oure fathers haue all the same synnes & disease, but because of our synnes & shalt be called merciful.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called merciful, where as we haue no workes of ryghteousnes. for the ryghteous whiche haue sayde vpon manye good workes together, shall out of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, & thou couldest take dyspleasure at hym? Or what is & corruptible mortal generation, & thou couldest be so rough toward him?

* For of a truth there is no man among the that be borne, but he hath dealt wyckedly, and among the saythfull there is none whiche hath not done amysse. For in this O Lorde thy ryghteousnesse and thy goodnesse shalbe praysed and declared, yf thou be merciful vnto them, whiche are not ryght in good workes.

Then aunswere he me, and sayd Some thynges hast thou spokē a ryght, and according vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I will not verily cōsider the workes of them, whiche haue synned before the death, before & iudgement, before destruction: but * I will reioyse ouer the worke & thought of the ryghteous. I will remembre also & pilgrimage & holy making and & reward. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe, so shal it come to passe. For as the husband m&shipp soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees and yet alway the thyngge that is sowne or planted is not all kept safe, neyther doth it all take roote. Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the world, they shal not all be preserved.

I aunswere then and sayde: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake. Lyke as & husbandmanes seeke perysheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there cometh too much rayne vpon it: Euen so perysheth man also whiche is created wth thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thynges, and lykened hym vnto the husbandmans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lorde: but spare the people and haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce. O be merciful vnto thy creature.

Then aunswere he me, and sayde: Thynges present are for & present, & thynges to come for such as be to com. For thou lackest yet moche seing thou mayest loue my creature aboue me. I haue oft tymes drawen ny vnto the, but neuer to & vnyghteous. In this also & art maruelous before the best in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it be cometh the, & haste not regarded thyne thyne owne selfe, that thou arte had in suche honoure amonge the ryghteous. Therefore shall greate wretchednesse and myserie come vpon them y<sup>e</sup> in the latter tyme shall dwell in y<sup>e</sup> world, because they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke oute glory for such as be lyke the for vnto pou is paradysc opened the tree of lyfe is planted y<sup>e</sup> tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made readye, a cytie is builded for you, and rest is prepared yee, perfecte goodnesse and wpledom. The rote of euil is marched from you, the weakehensse and mothy is hys from you, & into hel flye et y<sup>e</sup> corrupcion in forgetfulnesse. Sorowes are banished away & i<sup>n</sup> the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallite. And therefore aske y<sup>e</sup> nomore questios concerning y<sup>e</sup> multitude of the that perishe. For they haue take libertie, despyed y<sup>e</sup> h<sup>e</sup>ll thought scorne of his law, & forsake his wayes.

And soouer, they haue troden downe hys ryghteous, & * sayde in they<sup>r</sup> herte, that there is no God yea, and that wyttigly: for they dy. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made readye for you: Euen so is thyriste and payne prepared for the. For it was not hys wyl that men shuld come to naughte but they which be created, haue despyed the name of hym that made them, and are vnthanckfull vnto hym, whyche prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my iudgemente now at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto al men, but vnto fewe namelpe vnto the and suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I & sayde. Behold, O Lord nowe hast y<sup>e</sup> shewed me the multitude of the to kens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the laste: but at what tyme & when y<sup>e</sup> hast not shewed me

The ix Chapter.

¶ And so haue hys wayes shewed vnto hym.

Answered me then, and sayde: Measure thou the tyme dyligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whyche I haue tolde the before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherein the byeste wyl begynne to byset y<sup>e</sup> world, whych he made. And whē there shall be sene an erthquake & vprore of the people in the world, then shalt y<sup>e</sup> wel vnderstand that the most byeste spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the euen from the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest. Euen so the tymes also of the byest haue playne begynnynges in wonders, and spgnes, and the ende in worckynge and in tokens. And euerpe one that shall be saued, and shall be able to escape by his workes & by fapth: when y<sup>e</sup> haue beleued, shall be preserved from the sayde perils and shall se my sauoure in my lande, and with in my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, whyche now haue abused my wayes, and they that haue caste them oute dyspptefullpe, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in they<sup>r</sup> lyfe haue receaued be neftes, ad haue not knowne me, and they that haue alhorred my lawe, while they had yet fre dom, and when they had yet open leysure of amendeunte & conuersyon, and vnderstode not but dyspyled it: the same muste knowe it after death in payne. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shall be punished, ad how the ryghteous shall be saued, and whose the worlde is and when it is. Then answered I ad sayde * I haue talked before, & now: I speake & wyl speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them whych perishe, then shall be saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seede: as the floures be, so are the coloures also: suche as the workeman is, suche is the worke and as the husbandman is hym selfe, so is hys husbandry also, for it was the tyme of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherent they shulde dwell, then was there noman that wythstode me. Nowe when euerpe one was, ad the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared and the moneth that crafeth not, and the lawe whyche is vnsurcheable. they<sup>r</sup> maners were corrupte. So I consydered the worlde, & beholde, there was peryl, because of the thoughtes, that were come into it. And I saue, and spared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wyneberpe of the grapes, & plante from amonge manye generacions. Let the multitude pryshe then, whych are growen vp in vayne: ad let my grape and wyneberpe be kepte euen my plante for wyth great labour haue I made it vp.

Neuerthelesse, yf thou wylte take vpon the yet seuen daies mo but y<sup>e</sup> shalt not fast in them) go thy way then into y<sup>e</sup> feld of floures where no house is builded and eate only of the floures of the felde, tast no flesh, drinke no wyne, but eate praye vnto the byeste contynualpe so wyl I come, and talke wyth the.

So I wente my waye and came into the felde whyche is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, & my herte was vexed wth in me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth and began to talke before the byeste, and sayde. O Lord, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, & thou haste declared & opened, thy selfe vnto our fathers, in the wyldernes, in a place where no mā dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came oute of Egypte, and thou spakest sayng heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou seede of Jacob. Beholde, I saue my lawe in you, & it shall bring frute in you, & ye shall be honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers whych receaued the lawe kepte it not, & obserued not thy ordynances & statutes, and the frute of thy law was not declared for it might not for whyt it was thine. * For they y<sup>e</sup> receaued it, perished because they kepte not the thyng that was sown in them.

It is a custome when y<sup>e</sup> ground receaueth seed

And when I considered these thynges in my herte after thys maner, I looked aboute me woth myne eyes, and vpon the ryghte syde, * I sawe a woman, whiche mourned soore, made greate lamentacyon, and wepte woth lowde voyce her clothes were rente in peaces, and she had ashes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayde wherfore wepest thou? Why arte thou so sorow and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me Spr. let me be-

I am sore vered in my mynde, and broughte vegreate honoure vnto the myghthe. And I nou-

The r. Chapter.

¶ And the woman that appeared unto him, sheweth together

And it happened, that when my sonne wente into hys chambere, he fell downe, and dyed then ouer threwe we all the yghtes, & all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me.

Then toke I my reſte vntyll the ſeconde day at nyght. & when they had al reſted. & they myght comforte me. I reſted & alſo roſe vp by nyghte, & fled, & am come hether into this felde as y<sup>e</sup> ſeeſt & am purpoſed not to come in the citty, but to re maigne here & nether to eate nor drynke, but con tynualye to mourne and faſte, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my medytacions and thoughtes fall that I was in, and spake to her in discipline. Thou folow the woman: seest thou not our heynesse and mourninge, and what happeneth vnto vs: howe vpon oure mother is all wofull and sorowfull: and how she is cleane brought downe and in misery: seing we be al now in heynesse and make oure mone: for we be all sorowfull. ) As for the hemines that y takest it is but for one soune Demaunde the earth and she shal tell thee that it is she whyche oughte by reason to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the beginning all men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde they walke almoste all into destruction, and many of them shalbe rooted out.

Who shulde then by reason make moare mourninge then she. that hath loste so greate a multytude: and not thou wyche arte sorow. but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me My mourninge is not lyke the mourninge of the earthe: for I haue loste the fruite of my bodye, whiche I bare wryth heuynesse but the earthe is according to the maner of the earth, and the pre sente multytude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the lyke as þ haste borne wryth trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also from the begynnynge geueth her fruite vnto man, for hym that made her. And therfore wythholde thy sorowe and heuynesse by thy self, and loke what happeneth vnto the beare it strongly. For if thou iudgeth the marke and ende of God, to be righteous and good, and receaueste hys counsaile in tyme thou shalt be conunended therein. Go thy waye then into the cyrpe to thy husbnde.

And she sayde vnto me that wpll I not do: I wpll not go into the eptie but here wpl I dye 23
So I communed more wyth her, and sayde do not so, but be counsayled, & folowe me, for howe manye failles hath Syon. Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Ierusalem. For thou seest that oure Sanctuarie is layed wast, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, our pla-cinge of instrumentes and singyng layd downe the thanckesgeuyng put to silence, oure myrrh is vanysht a waye, the lyghte of oure candel-sticke is quenched, the Arcke of the coneuante is taken from vs, all oure holie thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured oure chyldren are put to shame oure prestes are bruite oure Leuites are carry-ed awaye into captiuitie oure vyrgins are defyled, and oure wyues ransyshed oure ryghteous men spoyled and oure chyldren destroyed oure yonge men are broughte in bondage, and oure stronge worthyes are become weak: and Sy-on whiche seale is the greatest of all ) is loosed vp from her walschyppe for she is deliuered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And therefore shake of thy greate heauynesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto the: and that the hyest maye geue the rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkynge wyth her, her face dyd shyne and glyster, so that I was afrayed of her and mused what it myghte be. And immediatly she cast out a great voyce, very fearfull so þ the earthe spake at the noyse of the woman. & I looked, and beholde, the woman appered vnto me nomore but there was a cytie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundation.

Then was I afraied and cryed, with loude voyce, and sayde: Where is Uel the Angell * <sup>101. 202.</sup> whych came to me at the first. For he hath cau- <sup>111. 2</sup> cyon and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakinge these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me: and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstandynge was altered, and he toke me by the ryghte hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth thee, and why is thine vnderstandynge vered? and the vnderstandynge of thy herte, and wherefore arte thou sorpe? And I sayde: Because thou haste forsaken me: and I haue done * accordynge vnto thy wordes. I wente into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and be manlye, and I shall geue thee exhortacyon.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my Lorde: forsake me not, lest I dye in vayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and heard that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandynge be dysceayned, and my mynde? But nowe I beseeche the, that thou wylte shewe thy seruante of thy wondre. He answered me then, and sayd heare me, and I shall enforme the, and tell the wherefore thou arte afrayed, for the best hath opened manie secret thynges vnto the.

He hath sene that thy wapes are ryghte, and that thou takeste sorowe contynualle for thy people: and makest greete lamentacyon for Syon: and therefore vnderstande the vpsyon, wherby thou sawest a litle whyle ago after this maner. Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou haste comforted her: neuerthelesse nowe seest thou the lykenesse of that woman no moare, but thou thoughtest there was a cype buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so thys is the answer. The woman whome thou sawest is Syon: and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtie yeres vnfertyle and barren, those are the thyrtie yeres wherin there was no offeringe made in her.

But after thyrtie yeres Salomon buylded her and offred, & then bare the barren a sone. And where as she tolde the: that she noysshed hym wyth labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde that her sonne died when she came into her chambze, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And I sawest her lykenesse howe she mourned for her sone: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sorpe in thy mynde, and suffrest fro thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her clearenesse, & the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therefore I bad the remayne in the felde where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the best wolde shewe thys vnto the: therefore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundacion nor buylding is. For in the place where the best wyl shewe his mynde, there shal be no mans buyldynge. And therefore feare not, and let not thyn herte be afrayed, but goo thy waye in, and let the glorious fayre buyldynge and howe greate it is and howe great thou thinkest it, after the measure of thyn eyes, & then shalte thou heare as muche as thyn eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed aboue many other and art called wyth the best as the fewe

But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here. and so shall the best shewe the vlyons of hygh thynges wherby he wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earth, in the laste dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he comaunded me.

The xi Chapter.

In this chapter ar d in the two nexte ensawynge be intreateth of certayne vylions, and of the interpretacions thereof.

Then sawe I a dreame, and beholde there came vp from the see an Eagle wherof had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and beholde he spredde his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together agayne.

And I behelde, and oute of his fethers there grewe out other lytle contrarie fethers, & he desrested, the heades in the myddeste was greater then the other, yet rested it wyth the respyre.

Moreover I sawe, that the Eagle flew wyth his wynges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwelte vpon the earth: And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauē were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynst hym: no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also so that the Eagle stode vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde wyth his fethers, and a voyce sayinge after this maner: watche not ad to gether, slepe euery man in his owne place, & watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the laste. Neuerthelesse, I sawe, that the lower wyl not oute of his heades, but from the myddeste of his bodye. And I nombred his contrarie fethers, and beholde, there were viii. of them. And I looked and beholde vpon the ryghte syde there arose one fether: and raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raygned the end of it came, and the place therof appered nomore. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned and had a greete tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of yt came also lyke as the fyrste, so that it appered nomore.

Then there came a voyce vnto it, and sayde heare thou that haste kepte in the earth so long thys I saye vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomore. There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde and raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomore also. So wente it wyth al the respyre one after another, so that euery one raygned, and then appered nomore. Then I looked, and beholde in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryghte syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but wythyn a whyle they appered nomore: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After thys I looked and beholde, the twelue fethers appered nomore and the two wynges, and there was nemoare vpon the Eagles body, but two heades that rested, and fyre fethers. Then saw I also that the fyre fethers were parted in two and remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the righte syde for the foure contynued in theyr place. So I looked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to set vp them selues, and to haue

the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, and the seconde was soner a waye then the fyrste. And I beheld, and loo, the two thoughte also by them selues to raigne, & whē they so thought, behold, there awaked one of the heades that were at rest namelye, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And then I sawe, that the two heades were fylled wyth hym, & the heade was turned wyth them, & were by him, & did eate vp the two vnder winges that wold haue raigned

But thys heade put the hōle earth in feare and bare rule in yt, ouer all those that dwelt vpon earth wyth muche labour, and he had the gouernance of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After thys I looked, and beholde the head þ was in the myddest, sodapnely appered nomore, lyke as the wynges then came the two heades, whych ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therein. And I behelde, and lo, the heade vpon the ryghte syde deuoured that was vpon the lefte syde. And I hearde a voyce whych sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consydre the thyng that thou seest. Then I sawe and beholde, as it were a Lion that roareth, rennyng hastelye oute of the woode, and he sente oute a maris voyce vnto the Aegle, and sayde: Heare thou: I wyl talke wyth the, and the byest shall saye vnto the: Is it not thou that haste the vyctory of the foure bestes, whom I made to raigne vpon earth & in my worlde, & that the ende of theyr tymes myght come thorow them?

And the fourth came, and ouer ranne al the bestes that were past, and had powre ouer the worlde wyth great fearfulnesse, & ouer the hōle compasse of the earth wyth the mooste wycked labour, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earth wyth dysceate, and the earthe haste thou iudged not wyth truth. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte the peacable and quiet: thou haste loured lypers, & destroyed the dwellinges of them that broughte forth fruyte, and haste cast downe the walles of such as dyd the no harme. Therefore is thy wrongfull dealinge and blasphemye cum vp vnto the byest: and thy pryde vnto the myghtie. The byest also hath looked vpon the proude tymes: & beholde they are ended and theyr abhominacyons are fulfilled. And therfore appere nomore thou Aegle, and thy horrible winges, & thy wicked fethers, & thy vngacious heades, & thy synful clawes, and al thy vayne body, þ the earth may be refreshed, & come agayne to her selfe: when she is deliuered from thy vyolence: & that she maye hope for the iudgemente and mercie of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

ANd it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle, I sawe, and beholde the heade that afore had the vpper hande, appered nomore, rather dyd the foure winges appeare any more, that came to hym & were set vp to raigne: & theyr kyngdome was small and full of vyronne. And I sawe & beholde they appered nomore, and the whole bodye of þ Aegle was byente, and the earth was in greate feare. Then I awaked oute of the traunce of my mynde, & from greate feare, and sayde vnto my spirite: Loo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou searcheste oute the wapes of the byest: loo, yet am I wery in my mynde, and verie weakie in my spyrte, and lytle strengthis there in me, for the greate feare that I receyued thys nyght. Therefore now I wyl beseeche the byest, that he wyl comforte me vnto the ende: & I sayde Lorde Lorde, þ I haue founde grace before thy spyrte, and þ I am iustified wyth the before anye other, and þ my prayer become vp before thy face, comforte me then, and shewe me thy seruante the interpretacyon and playne dyfference of thys horrible spghte, that thou mayeste perfectly comforte my soule: for thou haste iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of thys spghte. The Aegle whome thou sawest come vp from the see, is the kyngdome Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him, for now I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryle vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all kyngdomes that were before it. In the same kyngdome shall twelue kynges raigne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raigne & shall haue moare tyme then the other twelue: & thys do the twelue wynges sygnifye, whych thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, & that thou sawest goo oute from the heades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after the tyme of the kyngdome there shall arysse greates trybunnges, and it shall stande in payll of fallinge neuer thelesse, it shall not yet fall, but shall be set into hys begynnyng. And the eyght vnder wynges whych thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in hym there shall arysse eyght kynges, whose tyme shall be but small, and theyr peares swyft, and two of them shall beare. But when the myddeste tyme cometh, there shall be foure kepte in the tyme, wherbyr tyme begynneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest the heades restrynge: thys is the interpretacyon. In hys laste shall the byest ryle vp the kyngdomes, & call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the domynyon of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, wyth moche labour aboue all those that were before them. Therefore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall byynge forth the hys wyckednesse agayne, & that shall perfourme & synne the hys laste. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appered nomore, it sygnifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys head, and yet wyth payne, for the two þ remaine shall be slaine w the sword. For þ swerde of the one shall deuour þ other but at the last, shall he fall thorow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as thou sawest two vnder winges vpon the heade that is they, whome the byest hath kepte vnto the ende: thys is a small kyngdome, Daniel. vii. c.

kyngdome & full of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest rysinge vp, oute of the woode, & roarynge and speakyng vnto the Eagle, & rebukynge hym for his vnrpghetousnesse, is the wynde whiche the hyghest hath kepte for them & for theyr wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reprove them, & rente them asunder before them. For he shall set them lyynge before the Judge mente, & shall rebuke them: for the respyue of my people shall he deliuer wyth trouble, these that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull, vntyl the comynge of the day of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto þe from þe beginning. This is the dreame þe thou sawest: & this is the interpretacyon. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secret of the hyest.

Therefore wyte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyle in the people, whose heretes thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secrettes. But wyte thou heare thy selfe yet seven dayes mo, that it maye be shewed the whatsoeuer yt pleaseþ the hyghest to declare vnto the: & wyth that he wente his waye.

And when al the people perceaued, that the seven dayes were past, & I not come agane into the cyyte, they gathered them al together, from the leest vnto the mooste, & came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakest vs, and syttest here in this place? For of all the people, thou onely arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, & as a candle in a darcke place, & as an hauen: whiche preserued from the tempest. Haue we not elles aduersityte ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brynte wyth Sylon? For we are not better then they that dyed there: & they wepte wyth loud voyce. Then answered I them, and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, & be not dreuyn thou house of Jacob: for the hyghest hath pou in remembraunce, & the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptation. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of the myserye of Israel, that I myghte seeke mercy for the lowe estate of youre Sanctuary. And now go youre waye home every man & after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cyyte, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the felde seven dayes, as the Angel bad me, and dyd eate onely of the floures of the felde, & had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The xiii. Chapter.

Ad it happened after the seven dayes, þe I dreamed a dreame by nyghte. And behold, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I looked & beholde, the mā was strong, & increased wyth the cloudes of heauen: & when he turned his countynance to consyder, all the thynges trembled that were sene vnder hym: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they brynt þe heard hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of men oute of nombze, from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynst the man that came out from the see. And I looked and beholde, he graued him selfe a great mountayne, and stowe vp vpon it. But I wold haue sene the border or place, wher oute the hyll was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynst hym were sore afrayed & yet they durste fyghte. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the scarcenesse & vyolence of the peole he nethe lyfte vp his hande nor helde a swerde nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sente oute of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre & oute of his lippes the wynde of the flame: & oute of his tong he caste out sparkes & stormes, & they were all myxt together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flames, & the greates storme, and fell wyth a rushe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyght, & brynt them vp every chone so that of the innumerable multytud there was nothyng sene, but onelyr duste and smooke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable peole, & there came muche people vnto hym: some were glad some were sorre, some of the were bonde, so that they were carped and broughte forthe.

Then was I syke thowowe grente feare, & I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy lervauante al thy wonders, from the begynnyng and hast counted me worthy, that thou myghte teste receaue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consyde in my vnderstandynge wo vnto them that shalbe lefte in those dayes, and much more wo vnto them þe are not lefte behynde, for they that were not lefte were in penyng.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes whiche shal lappen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therefore are they come into grete paylles and many necessytyes lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and nowe to see the thynges that shal happen in the laste.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacyon of the fyghte shal I shewe the, & I wyll open to the, the thyng that thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are lefte behynde, & this is the interpretacyon. He that taketh aWare the payell in that tyme, hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme are such as haue workes and saythe vnto the mooste myghty. I knowe this therefore, that they whiche be lefte behynde are moare blessed then they that be deade. This is the meanynge of the vylon. Where as thou sawest a man comynge vp from the depe of the see, the same is he whome God the hyghest hath kepte a great season, whiche by his owne selfe shal deliuer his creature creature and he shall orde them that are left be hynde. And where as thou sawest, that oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynd, fyre and storme: and howe that he lyft vp neyther swerd nor weapon, but that the rushynge in of hym destroyed the hole multitude, that came to fyghte agaynst hym: it signifeth, that the dayes come when God wyl deliuer them y are vpon earth e in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon them that dwel in the earth. And one shal undertake to fyght agaynst another, one crite agaynst another, one place agaynst another, * & one people agaynst another one realme agaynst another. When this cometh to passe, then shal y tokens co y I shewed y before & then shal my sonne be declared, whome thou sawest clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare hys voyce, euery man shal in theyr owne land leaue the battayle that they haue, one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shalbe gathered together as they that be wyllyng to come, & to ouercome hym by fyghtynge. But he shal stande vpon the toppe of the mount Syon. Heuerebelles, Syon shal come, and shalbe shewed, beyng prepared and buyled for al men, lyke as thou sawest the byl grauen forth wpythout any handes. But my sonne shal rebuke the people, that are come for theyr wyckednesse, wpyth the tempeste: and for theyr euell ymagynacions: and theyr paynes wherwpyth they shalbe punished, are lykened vnto the flamme: and wpythout any labour shal be destroyed them, euen by the lawe, whych is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peacypable people vnto hym: those are the ten trybes which were carped away prisoners oute of theyr owne land, * in the tyme of Oseas the king, whom Salimanasar the kynge of Assyria toke prisoner, and carped them ouer the water, and so came they into another lade.

But they gaue them thys counsaile, that they shulde leaue the multitude of the heathen and to goo forth into a farther countrey, where neuer mankynde dwelte: that they myght there kepe theyr statutes, whych they neuer kepte in theyr owne lande. And so they entred in at the narrow passages of the water of Euphrates, and so God shewed tokens for them, * and held styll the flood tyll they were passed ouer, for thowme the countrey, there was a great way: namely of a yere, and a halfe iourney for the same region is called Aareth. The dwelt they there vntyll the latter tyme. & when they come forth agayne, the heyghest shal hold styll the springs of the streame agayne, that they may go thoro we, therefore sawest thou the multitude wpyth peace. And they that be leste behynd of thy people, are those that be founde wpythin my border. Nowe whē he destroyeth the multitude y is gathered together, he shal defende hys people y remaine, & then shal he shewe great wonders.

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, shewe me thys, wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the deape of the see: And he sayde vnto me: Lyke as thou cannest neyther see out nor knowe these thynges that are in the depe of the see, euen so mayst thou not se my sonne, or those that be wpyth hym, but in the tyme of the daye. Thys is the interpretacyō of the dreame which thou sawest, therefore thou onely arte lightened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy dyspygence vnto myne, and sought it.

* Thy lyfe halte thou ordred in wysedome, and halte called vnderstandynge thy mother, and therefore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After thre dayes, I wyl shewe y more and talke wpyth y more at large: pea, heuy and wonderous thynges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth vnto the feld, geupng praise and thanckes greatly vnto God, because of thys wonders whych he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

The.iiii. Chapter.

God appereth to Moyses in y bush, & sheweth vt what he shal do

Vpon the thyrde day I sat vnder an Oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush and sayd: O Moyses O Moyses: And I sayde heare am I Lorde, and rode vp vpon my feete. Then spake he vnto me: * in the bush dyd I appere vnto Moyses, and talked wpyth hym when my people serued in Egypte. And I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought hym vpon the mount Syon, where I held hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous woorkes, and shewed hym the secrettes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded him saying These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thyne herte the dreames y thou hast sene, and the interpretacions whych I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned, and remaine wpyth my counsaile, ad wpyth such as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath losse hys yowth, and y tymes begynne to wane olde. For the tyme is deuised into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all redy, and halfe of the tenth parte yet remaineth there y whych is after the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therefore, prepare and orde thy house, ad reforme thy people: comfort suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruccyon: let go frome the, mortall thoughtes cast away y burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes y are moost heuy vnto the, and halte the to fflye from these tymes. for such euil and wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shal they do muche worse. * For the weaker y the worlde and the tyme is the more shal synne and wickednesse increase in them y dwell vpon earth. For y truthe is fled farre away, & lesyng is harde at hand. For now hasteth the dyspon to come, y thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Schoide Lorde, I wyl goo as thou halte commaunded me, and reforme y people whych are present. But they y shal be bozne afterwade, who who wyl erhoite or rebuke them? This the worlde is set in darchenes. and they þ dwell there in are wythout lpghte, for thy lawe is kyndled because noman knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or þ shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghooste into me and I shall wyte all that hath bene done in the worlde syns the begynnynge whych was wyrt ten in thy lawe, þ men maye fynde the path, & þ they whych wyl lyue in þ later daies, may lyue.

And he answered me saying. So thy way gather the people together, and say vnto them that thy þ seeke the not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take w the Sarea, Dabita, Selemia, Ecanus, and A. liell, these fyue, whych are redy to wyte swpft ly, and come hether, and I shal lpght a candle of vnderstandynge in thyne hert, whych shall not be put out epli þ thynges be perfourmed whych thou shalt begin to wyte. And then shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto þ perfect, ad some twygis shalt þ shewe secretly vnto þ wyse. To morowe this houre shalt þ begyn to wyte.

E Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together & sayd heare these wordes, O Isack: Our fathers at the begynnynge were straungers in Egypt from whence they were deliuered, and receaued the lawe of lye & wach they kepte not, whych pe also haue trasgessed after them. Then was thyss lande, and the land of Syon parted among you by lot to possesse. But poure fathers and pe poure selues also haue done vngodly troufnesse, and haue not kept the wayes whych the hygh- est commaunded you. And for somoch as he is a tyghteous Judge, he take from you in tyme the tpynges that he had geuen you. And nowe are pe here and your brethren amonge you. There- fore ys so be that ye wyl subdue pour owne vnderstandynge, and reforme poure hert pe shall be kept alpye, and after deatb shall pe optayne mercy. For after deatb shal þ iudgement come, when we shal lyue agayne: & then shal þ names of the tyghteous be maifest, and the woorkes of þ vngodly shalbe declared. Let no man there- fore come nowe vnto me, noz aske any question of me these fortye dayes.

D So I toke the spuen (as he commaunded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte daye a voyce called me saying: Eldras open thy mouth, and dryncke þ I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde he reached me a full cuppe whych was full as it were wyth water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dryncke. And when I had dryncke it, my hert had vnderstandynge and wysdome grewe in my breaþ for my sperte was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was open- ed and shut nomore. The hyghest gaue vnder- standynge vnto the fyue men, þ they wrote the hye thynges of the nyghte, whiche they vnder- stode not. But in þ nyghte they dvede ite bread as for me I spake in the daye and helde not my tounge by nyghte. In fourtye dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfille, the hyghest spake, sayinge: The sperte þ thou haue wyrtten spake openly þ the worthþ and vnworthþ maye reade it. But kepe the lre last, þ thou mayest shewe it on elpe to such as be wise among thy people. For in the is þ spyrng of vnderstandynge the fourtye of wysdome, & þ streame of knowleg. And I did so.

The xv. Chapter.

The penithen & schat eucl pey & shat hauch hych God commaunded & it was to sh. we hure them.

Sholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophete, whych I wyl put in thy mouth, say eth the Lorde: and cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the truth. Feare not the pmagynacions agaynst the, I re not the vnfaithfulnesse of them trouble the, þ spake agaynst the. For all the vnfaithful shall dye in theyr vnfaithfulnesse. Behold, sayth the Lorde I wyl brynge plagis vpon the worlde, the swearde, hunger, deatb, and destruction, for wyckednesse hath the vpperhande in al þ earth, and theyr shamefull woorkes are fulfyl ed.

Therefore sayeth the Lorde: I wyl hold my tounge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, whiche they do so vngodly: neyther wyl I suffre th. m in the thynges, that they deale wythall so wyckedly. Beholde, the innocent bloud of þ ry gh- teous complayne continually: & therefore (sayth the Lorde) I wyl suerly auenge and receaue vnto me all the innocent bloud from amonge them.

* Beholde, my people is led as a flocce of shepe to be slayne. I wyl not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte but wyl brynge them oute wyth a myghty hand and a stretched out arme and synre it wyth plagis as afore and wyl de- stroye all þ lande of it. Egypt shall mourne and þ foundations of it shalbe smitten w th, þ plage and punyment of God shall brynge vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde shall mourne for theyr seedes shalbe destroyed thowre þ bla sting and hayle, & an horryble statre. No worth þ worlde and them þ dwell therein, for þ swerd & theyr destruccio draueth nye, & one people shall stand vnto fyght agaynst an other & sweardes in theyr handes. For men shalbe vntendefaste & some shall do vyolence vnto other: they shall not regard theyr kyng and princes, the wayes of theyr doniges and handlynges in their pow- er. A man shall desyre to go in the cytle and shal not be able. For because of theyr pyrd the cities shalbe brought in feare the houses shall quake, & men shalbe afrayde. A man shall haue no pyrie vpon his neyghboure, but one shal prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle theyr goodes, be- cause of the hunger of breade, and because of the greate trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whiche are from the vprey- songe, from the South, from the East, and Ly- banus to turne vnto them, and restore the thyng- es þ they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wyl I do also, ad recompense them in their bolome. Thus sayeth the Lord God. My ryghte hand shall not spare the synners, and my sword shall not cease ouer them that shed innocent blood vpon earth. The spere is gone out from hys wrathe, & hath consumed the foundacions, of the earth, & the sinners lyke the strawe that is kyndled. Who wylt thou spare, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lord: I wyl not spare them. So your waie ye chyldren from violence, defyle not my Sanctuarie for the Lord knoweth all them & spurne agaynst hym, and therefore deliuereth he them vnto death and destruction: For nowe are the plagues come vpon the world, and ye shall remayne in them. For God shal not deliuer you because ye haue sinned agaynst hym.

E Behold, an horrible visyon cometh from the East, where generacions of Dragons shal come out, & the people of & Arabics wylt many charettes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon the earth that all they whiche beare them ragge in theyr wraht, make feare and be afrayde, and as the wynde boores oute of the woode, so shal they goo oute, and wylt great power shal they come, and stande syght tynge wylt them: and shal waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shal the Dragons haue the vpper hand, and not remembre theyr byrth & shal turne about swearing together in great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, & kepe silence at theyr power, & shal flee. And one out of the lande of the Assyrians shalbe sege the & consume one of them, & in theyr hooke shalbe feare and drede, & crye amonge theyr kynges.

I Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North, vnto the South, and they are verie horrible to loke vpon, full of wraht and storme. They shal synke one vpon another & they shal synke at the great starre vpon earth and theyr starre, & the blood shalbe from the sword vnto the helpe and the smoke of man vnto the Heauens lytter. And there shalbe great fearfulness & trembling vpon earth, & theyr le the wraht, shal be afrayed, & a trembling shal come vpon the.

And the there shal come great raynes from the South, & from the North, & parte from the Weste, and from the North wynde from the East, and shal shut them vp agayne, & the cloud wherby he rapted vp in wraht, and the starre to cause feare towarde the East and West wynde shalbe destroyed. and the greates cloudes shalbe lyfte vp, and the myghtye cloudes full of wraht and the starre & they maye make all the earth afrayed, and them & dwel therein, and & they may poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, spere and bayle, and syngre swerdes, and many waters, that all felde maye be full, and all cyuers, and they shal breake downe the cyties & wallles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, woode, and the grasse of the medowes, & al theyr frute. And they shal go stedfast vnto Babylon, & make her afrayed, they shal come to her & besege her: & starre & al wraht shal they poure out vpon her.

E Then shal the dust & smooke go vp vnto the Heauen, & all they that be aboute her: shal bewaile her: and they & remaine vnder her shal do scrupce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asya, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon hope of Babylon, & arte a worshyppe of her personne. Who be vnto the & wretch, because thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, & haste dect thy daughters in whordome, & they myght triumph & please thy louers, which haue alway despised to comynge to whordome wylt the: thou haste folowed the abhominable cypre in al her workes and inuencions.

Therefore sayth God: I wyl sende plagues vpon the, widowhod, pouerte, hunger warres and pestilence, to wast thy houses wylt destruction & death, and the glorie of thy power shalbe dreyed vp as a floure, when the beate rps the that is sente ouer the. Thou shalte be spcke as a poore wyfe that is plaged & beaten of women: so that the myghtye & loner shal not be able to receaue the. Who the I hate the sayth the Lord: If thou haddeste not alwaye slayne my chosen, etaltynge the stroke of thy handes, & sayde ouer theyr death, when thou wast droncken. set forth the bewetpe of thy countynance.

The rewarde of thy whordome shalbe recompensed the in thy bolome, therefore shalte thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen, sayth the Lord: euen so shal God do vnto the, & shal deliuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shal dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thorowe the swerde. Thy cyties shalbe broken downe & all thyng shal perishe wylt the swerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shal dye of hunger, & eat theyr owne flesh, & dryncke theyr owne blode for verie hunger of breade & thrust of water. Thou unhappy shalt come thorowe the see, and receaue plagues agayne.

In the passage they shal caste downe the slayne cypre, and shal roote out one part of thy lande, and consume the porcyon of thy glorie. They shal treade the downe lyke stubble, and theyr & a be the fyre, and shal consume the thy cyty & id the lande, thy woode and thy fruteful trees shal they burne wylt fyre. Thy chyldren shal they carpe awaye captiue, and looke what thou haste, they shal spoyle it, and marre the bewetpe of thy face.

The.xvi.Chapter.

The Heathen shalbe punished.

Who be vnto the Babylon and Asia, & who be vnto the Egypte and Siria gyde poure selues wylt clothes of lacke and heare, and mourne poure chyldren, besorpe for poure destruction is at hande. A swerde is set vpon you, & who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, & who wyl quench it? Plagues are sente vnto you, & what is he that wyl dryue the awaye? Can any man dryue awaye an hongry Lyon in the woode? Can any man quench & fyre in stubble when it hath begonne to burne? Can one turne agayne the arrowe, & is that of a stronge archer: The myghtye Lord sende the the plagues, and what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in hys

hys wraethe, and what is he that wyl queneche it: he shal cast yf gatenynges, & who shal not feare: he shal thonder, and who shal not be afraid. The Lorde shal threaten, and who shal not utterly be beaten to powder at hys presence The earth quaketh, and the foundacions ther-of the see aryseth vp with waues from the depe & the floudes of it are vnquyet & the spyes ther-of also befoze the Lorde, and befoze the glory of hys power. For stronge is hys ryghte hande that holdeth the bowe, hys arrowes that he sho-teth are sharpe, and shal not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of y<sup>e</sup> worlde.

23 Beholde, the plagis are sent, and shal not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled and shal not be put out, tyll it co-sume the foundacions of the earth. Lyke as an arowe whiche is shotte of a myghty archer, returneth not backward euen so the plagis that shal be sente vpon earth, shal not turne agayne Alas is me, wo is me, who wyl deliuer me in those dayes: The begynnyng of sorowes and greate mournyng: the begynnyng of death & greate death, the begynnyng of warres, & the powers shal stande in feare, the begynnyng of euyl, & they shal tremble every one. What shal I do in these thynges when the plagis come: Beholde, hunger, & plage, trouble, & anguythe, are set, as scourges for a medement. Sur for all these thynges they shal not turne fro their wylednes, nor be alway myndfull of the scourges.

E Behold vnto the good cheape vpon earth, that they shal thinke them selues to be in good case, & euen then shal muche growe vpon earth, warres, death & greate dysquyet-nes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shal preyse of hunger, and the other y<sup>e</sup> escape the hunger, shal the swerde destroye: and the deade shal be cast out as donge & there shal be no man to conforthe them. For the earth shal be wasted, and the cities shal be cald downe there shal be no man left to tyll the earth and to sowe it.
The trees shal geue frute, and who shal plucke them of and gather them: The grapes shal be rype, & who shal treade them: For all places shal be desolate of men, so that one man shal de-spyre to se another, or to heare hys voyce. For of one whole cypre there shal be ten left, and two in the felde, whiche shal hyde them selues in the thynke bushes, & in the clyffes of stones lyke as when there remaine thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes of them that dyligently soughte thorow the vyneyarde.

D Euen so in those dayes there shal be thre or foure left for them y<sup>e</sup> searche they<sup>e</sup> houses wth the swerde. And the earth shal be left waste, & the feldes thereof shal wate olde and her way-es y<sup>e</sup> all her pathes shal growe full of thornes, because no man shal trauple there thorowe.
The daughters shal mourne, haupnge no byd-gromes, the women shal make lamentacion, haupnge no husbandes, they<sup>e</sup> daughters shal mourne haupnge no helpe of they<sup>e</sup> bydegrome In the warres shal they be destroyed, and they<sup>e</sup> husbandes shal perishe of hunger: O y<sup>e</sup> ser-uautes of the Lorde yeare to yeare tynges, and marke them. Beholde, the worde of the Lorde O receaue it behold the plagis drawe nye, & d, are not slacke in taryng. Lyke as a trauelinge woman whiche after the nyne moneth bringeth forth a sone, when the hour of the byrth is come an houre two or thre afore the paynes come vpon her bodye, and when the chyld cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twyncklyng of an eye. Euen so shal not the plagis be slacke to come vpon earth, and the worlde shal mourne and sorowes shal come vpon it, on euery syde.

E O my people, heare my worde, make you ready to the battayle and in all euyl be euen as pygmes vpon earth. He that selleth, let him be as he that flyeth his wape, and he that buyeth as one that wyl lease.

E Ubo so occupyeth marchaundise, as he y<sup>e</sup> wynneth not & he that buildeth, as he y<sup>e</sup> shal not dwell therin, he y<sup>e</sup> soweth, as one y<sup>e</sup> shal not reape: he y<sup>e</sup> wynteth the vineyarde, as he y<sup>e</sup> shal not gather the grapes, they y<sup>e</sup> mary, as they y<sup>e</sup> shal not no childe: & they y<sup>e</sup> mary not as y<sup>e</sup> wyddowes & therefore & they that laboure, laboure in vaine.
For straungers shal reape they<sup>e</sup> frutes, & spoyle they<sup>e</sup> goodes, ouerthorowe they<sup>e</sup> houses, take they<sup>e</sup> chyldren captiue for incaptiue & hunger shal they get chyldren. And they y<sup>e</sup> occupy they<sup>e</sup> marchaundise w robbery, howe long decke they they<sup>e</sup> cypres, they<sup>e</sup> houses, they<sup>e</sup> possessions, & persons: the more wyl I punyssh them for these spynnes, sayeth the Lorde. Lyke as an whore en-ueryth an honeste woman, so shal ryghteousnes hate iniquite, when she decketh her selfe, & shal accuse her to her face when she cometh that defendeth, whiche shal make inquisicion for all spynne vpon earth. And therefore be ye not lyke ther vnto, nor to the workes therof for or euer it belonge, iniquite shal be taken awaye out of the earth & righteousnes shal raigne among you.

E Let not the sinner sape, that he hath not sinned for coles of fyre shal burne vpon hys heade whiche sapeth befoze the Lorde God and hys glory. I haue not spynned. Beholde, the Lorde knoweth all the workes of men, they<sup>e</sup> ymagi-
* For I spake but the worde let the earth be made, & it was made, let the heauen be made, & it was made. In hys worde were starres made & he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the deepe, and the treasures ther-of he hath mesured the see, & what it containeth he hath thut the see, in the myddeste of the waters, and wth hys worde hath he hangd the earth vpon the waters. He spredeth out y<sup>e</sup> beaute lyke a vawte, vpon the waters hath he found it.
In the deserte & drye wylde nesse hath he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes that the floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth.
He made man, & put hys herte in the myddest of the bodye, and gaue hym breath lyfe, and vnderstandyng, pre, and the sprete of the Almyghty God, whiche made all thynges, and hath carched ched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth.

¶ He knoweth poure ymagynacions and inuencion, & what ye thynke when ye synne and wolde hyde poure selues. Therfore hath y<sup>e</sup> Lord searched and soughte oute all poure workes, & he shall bewrape you all. And when poure synnes are broughte forth, ye shall be a shamed before men, and poure owne synnes shall be poure accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or howe wyll ye hyde poure synnes before God, & his Angelles? Beholde, God hym selfe is the Judge, leaue hym, leaue of from poure synnes, and forget poure vnrightheousnes, & medle no more wyth them: so shall God leade you forth, and delouer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a greete multytude is kyndled ouer you: & they shall take a way captayne of you, and fede the ydle wyth Idols, and they that consent vnto them, shall be had in dyspyson, laughed to scozne, and troden vnder foote.

¶ For vnto the places there shall be a place, & in the nettes ctyres a greete insurreccion, vpon those that feare the Lorde. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & wast such as feare the Lorde, their goodes shall they take from them, and shunt them out of their houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, & they shall be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare, O ye my beloued, saith the Lorde, behold the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll delouer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dismaye not, for God is poure captayne.

¶ Also so kepe th<sup>e</sup> my commaundementes & preceptes (saith the Lorde God) let not poure synnes waue you downe, and let not poure vnrightheousnesse be lyfte vp. Also be vnto them that are subdued vnto they<sup>r</sup> synnes, & tangled in they<sup>r</sup> wyckedenesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in wyth bushes, & the path therof couered wyth thornes, and that no man make traunple thowte: & so is he taken, & cast in the fyre & brante.

The booke of Tobyas,

The fyrste Chapter.

¶ Tobias being taken prisoner for lacke of the lawe of truth, the mercy and chastite of Tobas, and the maner of how he was p<sup>er</sup>u<sup>er</sup>sed by the synners, & how he was rescued by the grace of God, & how he was restored to his house.

¶ Tobias was of the trybe and ctyte of Nephtali, which lyeth in the hie countreyes of Galyle about Nazaron, the waye toward the West hauynge the ctyte of Sephet vpon the left syde. Though he was taken prisoner in the dayes of Salmana- sar kynge of the Assyrians, neuertheles beynge in captiuite, he forsoke not the ware of truthe: In so much that what soeuer he myghte get, he parted it daylye wyth his felowe prisoners ad mythyen, that were of his kynred. And though he were p<sup>er</sup>u<sup>er</sup>sed then all in the trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chyldeshe in his workes. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, whych Jeroboam kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all they<sup>r</sup> companyes, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde, and there worshipped the Lorde God of Israel, saythfuly offering of all his fyrste frutes and tythes, so that in the thyrde yere he mynystred all the tythes vnto y<sup>e</sup> straungers and conuerteres. These and such lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordynge to the lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

¶ But when he was a man, he toke oute of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, & of her he begat a sonne, whome he called after his owne name, and taughte hym from his yowthe vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from all synne.

¶ Nowe when he wyth his wyfe, his sonne and wyth all his kynred was come into captiuite vnto the cite of Ninus, what time as they al dyedate of the meates of the heathen, he kept his soule, and was neuer despyled in they<sup>r</sup> meates. And for so muche as he was myndefull of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde in all his herte, God gaue hym fauoure in the syghte of Salmana- sar the kynge, whych gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what soeuer hym lyst.

¶ So went Tobias vnto all them that were in dyspyson, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortacions. And when he came to to Ragas, a ctyte of the Medes, hauynge ten talentes of syluer (of thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured hym) & sawe among a greete companye of people of his kynred, one Sabelus (whych was of his owne trybe) beynge in necessitye, he gaue hym the sayde weyghte of syluer vnder an handewrytynge.

¶ After a longe season when Salmana- sar kynge was deade, and Sennacherib his sonne reigned in his steade, whych hated the chyldre of Israel. Tobias wente daylye thowout all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue his goodes to euerie one of them, as muche as he myghte he fed the hungry, clothed the naked, & buryed the deade and sayne & that dyligentlye.

¶ And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne & fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punished hym for his blasphemye) and in his wrath slewe many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buryed they<sup>r</sup> bodies. But when it was told y<sup>e</sup> kynge, he commaunded to slaye hym, & toke awaye all his goodes. Neuerthelesse, Tobias wyth his sonne & wyth his wyfe fled his waye and was byd naked, for there were manpe that loued him. But after fyue and fourtie dayes the kynge was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored vnto hym.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias b<sup>er</sup>th such of his frendes as feare God to a banquet of feast. He is rep<sup>er</sup>ted of his frendes. He feareth God more than the kynge, & is commended vnto the p<sup>er</sup>son and suffraunce of God. His kinfolkes mocke him.

After

After these thynges vpon a solempne daye of the Lord, Tobyas made a good feaste in hys house, and sayde vnto his sonne: So thy way is byng hether some of oure tyebe, suche as feare God, that they maye make mery wyth vs. And whē he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde hys father, that one of the chyldren of Israel lay slayne vpon the strete. And immediately he leapte from hys table lest the feaste came fastig to þe dead carse, toke hym & bare hi prieuely into hys house, & when þe sunne was do-wne, he myghte safely bury hym. And when he had hys the carse, he dyd eate hys meate wyth mouening & feare, remembryng þe wordes, þe Lorde sayde by the prophete Amos: poure hys feastes shalbe turned to sorow and heynesse.

But when the sunne was downe, he went hys waye and buried hym. Then all hys neygh-bours rejoyced hym, sayinge: It is not longe sence it was commaunded to slay the because of thys matter, and haste scarce escaped the day of death, & buryest thou the deade agayne? Ne-uerthelesse, Tobyas fearynge God moare then the kyng, tooke the bodyes of the slayne, & byd them in hys house, & buried them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buried the deade, & was wepyng, came home, & lay-de hym downe by the wall and slepte. And why-le he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes warme dung oute of the swalowes neste, so that he was blynde. Thys temptacyō dyd God suffer to happen vnto hym, that they whiche came after myghte haue an example of hys pacyence lyke as of holpe Job. For in so muche as he euer feared God from hys yowth by, & kept hys commaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that the plage of blyndenes chaunced vnto hym, but remayned steadfaste in the feare of God and thanked God at the dayes of hys lyfe.

For lyke as blessed Job was had in dysp-sion of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scoone of hys selders and kynfolkes, whiche sayde: vnto hym. where is thy hope, for þe whiche thou hast done almes, and buried the deade? But Tobyas rebuked them, and spake: Say not so for we are the chyldren of holpe men, and looke for the lyfe, whiche God shall geue vnto them that neuer turne they beleue from hym. Anna hys wyfe wente dayly to the weauynge worke: and looke what luyng she coulde get wyth the labour of her handes, she broughte it. And it happened þe she toke a kyd & brought it home.

And when her husbnde hearde it crye, he sayde: looke that it be not stolen: for it is agayne to the owners for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touche any thyng of theste. Then was hys wyfe angrie and sayde: Howe is thy hoope become vayne openly, and thy almesdedes are manifeste. Wyth these and suchelyke wordes dyd she caste hym in the tette.

The. iij. Chapter.

The place of Tobys & Sara the daughter of Raguel is shewyd of her fathers seruante. The place and fasting of Sara. And also the innocency and chastite of her. The prayers of Tobias and Sara are hearde.

Then Tobyas toke yt heuily, & wyth a teares: beganne to make hys prayer sayinge. O Lorde, thou arte ryghte-ous, & all thy iudgementes are true pce, all thy wayes are merce, sayth fulnesse & iudgemente. And nowe O Lorde be mynde full of me, & take no vengeance of my synnes: nether remember my misdoings, nether the mysdoings of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyente vnto thy commaundementes, therefore are we spoyled, broughte into captiui-tie, into death, into derision, & shame vnto al na-cions, amonge whome thou haste scattered vs.
And nowe O Lorde, thy iudgementes are great for we haue not done accordynge to thy comma-ndementes, nether haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde deale wyth me accordynge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spyre to be receaued in peace, for moze expedyente were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Ragas a cite of the Me-des was sclaundered of one of her fathers hand-maydens namelpe, that she shulde haue had seuen husbndes, whiche as sone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuill called Asmodens. Therefore, when she reproued the maiden for her faulte, she answered her sayinge. God let vs neuer se sonne nor daughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy peobardes. Wylt thou slay me also, as thou hast slaine seuen men? At thys voyce wente Sara into an hys chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she neyther ate nor dranke, but continued in prayer & besoughte God wyth teares that he wolde deliuer her from thys rebuke.

Upon the thyrde daye it chaunced, þe when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayd the Lorde sayinge. Blessed be thy name, O God of oure fathers, whiche when thou arte wroth the west mercy, & in tyme of trouble thou forguest the synnes of them, þe call vpon the. Into the O Lorde turne my face, vnto the lyfte I vp my ne eyes. I beseeche the O Lorde, lose me oute of þe bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me vnterly aware from of the earth. Thou knowest Lorde that I neuer had desire vnto man, & that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vncleyn luste, I haue not kepte companye wyth those þe passe thyr tyme in sport, nether haue I made my selfe partaker wyth them þe walke in light behauiour.
Neuerthelesse an husbnde haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Howe perauenture ether haue I bene vnworthy of them, or elles were they vnnere for me, for thou happily hast kept me to another hus-bnde. For why thy counsell is not in the power of mā. But whosoeuer loueth the and seructh the ryghte, is sure of thys, that yf hys lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng and yf he endure in pacience, he shall haue a re-warde and be hyghly crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall deliuer him and yf hys lyfe be in chastenynge, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy merce.

Ecc For thou

The booke

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnation: & why: after a storme thou makest the weather fayer & still: after wepinge & heynnes thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell be praised for ever. At þe same tyme were bothe they: prayers herde in the syght of the maiestye of the best God. And Raphael the holy Angel of the Lord was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God

The iiii. Chapter.

Tobias thinkinge to dye, geueth a goodly exhortation and praye for his sonne.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be hearde, þe he might dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias and sayde vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, & laye them in thine herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, bury thou my bodye and holde thy mother in honoure al the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember what & howe great payres she suffred for the in her wombe. And whē she hath also fulfilled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all þe dayes of thy lyfe, & beware lest at any tyme þe consent vnto synne, & lest thou let slip the commaundementes of þe Lord our God

Geue almes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: & so shall it come to passe þat the face of the Lord shal not be turned away from þe. Be merciful after thy power. If þe haue much geue plentifully: if thou haue lytle, do thy dyligence, gladly to geue of þe lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessity: for mercy deliuereth fro all synne & from death, & suffereth not the soule to come in darcynes. A greate comforte is mercy before þe hygge God, vnto all them that shewe it.

My sonne, kepe the wel from al whordome and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be known of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all descepcion. Whosoever worketh anye thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruantes wages remayne not by the ouer nyghte. Looke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou woldest not another man shulde do vnto the. Eate thy brede, or wyth the hongrye and poore, and couer the naked wyth thy clothes. Set thy bread and wyne vpon the buryall of the ryghteous: & do not thou eate and dryncke thereof wyth the synners. Alke euer counsell at the wyse.

Be alwaye thanckfull vnto God, and beseeche hym that he wyll order thy wayes, & that whosoever thou deuysest or takest in hande, it maye remayne in hym. I certyfye the also my sonne that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I deliuered triu talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and hys hand wyrtynge haue I by me. And therefore seeke I come me ues: howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer and geue hym hys handewyrtynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: truthe it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, if we feare God, and departe from all synne: and do well.

The v. Chapter.

The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which is since into Rages. An Angell accompanieth wyth hym in his iourney.

Then answered Tobias hys father and sayde: father: all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do & that dyligently. But howe I shall requyre this money I can not tell. Neither doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What tokē shall I geue hym? And as for the waye whether I neuer knewe it. Then hys father answered hym, & sayde: I haue hys handewyrtynge by me whych when thou shewest hym immediatly he shal paye the. But go thy waye now, & get the some saythfull man to go wyth the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the monye, whyle I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias out, & vpon the strete he founde a fayne ponge man standing, gyrded vp, & as it were one ready to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good ponge man? He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye þe leadeth vnto the countre of þe Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, þe dwelleth i Rages a cite of the Medes, whych lyeth vpo þe mount Egbathanis. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I pray the: say for me, tell I haue told my father these thynges. Then wente Tobias in and told his father all. At the whiche hys father meruayled & prayde, that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Nowe when the Angell came in, he saluted hym, & sayde: Ioye be wyth the for ever moore. And olde Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that lyt here in darcynesse, & se not the lyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good chere. God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou bypasse my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: I shall leade thy sonne & bypasse him to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I pray the, of what house or of what trybe art thou? The Angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: I keest þe after þe huntred of an hyrelyng, or schest þe a guyde for thy sonne to go wyth hym. But þe I make þe not careful, I am Azarias the sone of gret Hananias. And Tobias answered þe arte come of a great kyndred: but I pray the be not displeased, þe I desyre to knowe thy kyndred. The Angel sayd vnto him: thy sonne shal I leade forth safely, & bypasse hym hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias & sayde: wel go on your waye, and God be in your iourney, & hys Angel beat you company. So when they had prepared al thinges, þe they wolde take wyth them in the iourney, Tobias bad hys father and his mother hys mother farewell, and they wente on theyr waye both together. Nowe when they were gone, hys mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The state of oure age haste thou taken awaye, & sente hym from vs. Wolde God that mony had neuer bene, for the whiche thou haste sente hym awaye. If we had bene contente wpth our pouertie, thys had bene greute ryche vnto vs, yf we sawe oure sonne here. Then saide Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyn eyes shall se hym. For I truste, that the good Angel of God shall beare hym compayne, and order well all the thynges that be doth so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes hys mother leste of from weppynge, & holde her tounge.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias is deliuered from the fythe by the Angel, The Angel exhorte Tobias to take Sara to hys wyfe.

S Tobias wente on hys waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and the fyfthe nyght they abode by the water of Tygrys. Then wente he oute to washe hys feete, and beholde there came forth an horrible fythe to deuoure hym. Of whom Tobias was afrayde, and cryed wth a lowde voyce, sayinge: Lord, he commeth vpon me. And the Angel sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drew hym vpon the lande. And the fythe beganne to leape at hys feete.

Then sayde the Angel vnto hym: take oute þe bowels of thys fythe, & as for the herte, þe gaul and the luer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medecyne. Tobias dyd so, & rosted the fythe, & they toke hym wth them in theyr iourney. þe resydue they salted, as much as was suffyciente for them, tyll they came to Rages a cite of þe Medes. The Tobias asked þe Angel, & sayde vnto hym: I pray þe brother Asarya tell me whereto are these thynges good of the fythe yf thou haste bydden me kepe.

The Angel answered hym, & sayde: If thou layest a peece of the herte vpon the coales, þe smoke therof dyueth awaye all maner of euill sprytes, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thenceforth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gaul is good to annoint or to streake the eyes wthall, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shall be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym, where wylt thou yf we remayne? The Angel answered & sayde: Here is a nye kynsman of thone, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter callid Sara, & hath nether sone nor daughter but her. All thys good belongeth vnto the, & thou muste mary her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her the to wyfe. The answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstand, he hath bene maryed vnto, wth husbandes, & they all are dead, and I haue herde say yf the deuyl slewe the. I am afrayd therfore lest suche thynges happen vnto me also: wiche yf it came to passe, seing I am þe only sonne of my father and my mother, I shoulde bringe them in their age with sorowes to their graues.

Then sayde the Angel Raguel vnto hym: D Heare me & I wyl tell the what they be, & wher the deuyl hath power. I can tpe, they that receaue maryage of suche a fathyr, yf they quyte God out fro them, & from theyr be, & geue the leuys to theyr owne lust, enen as it were an horse and mule, whiche haue no vnderstandynge. vpon suche hath the deuyl power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chamber, wylt polde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy dylygence vnto nothyng but vnto prayer wth her, And in the fyfthe nyght, rost the luer of þe fythe, & the deuyl shall be dryuen awaye. The thre conde nyghtes shalt thou be receaynd into the compayn of the holy patryarkes. The thre nyghtes shalt thou optayne the blessing of God to that whole chylidren shall be borne of you. After the thre nyghtes take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chylidren, the for any fleschly luste that in the seed of Abraham yf mayst optayne the blessing in chylidren.

The vii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguel, where he receiue Sara to wyfe, and obtaineth her.

Then went they into Raguel, wher they receiued them ioyfully. And wher Raguel asked vnto Tobias he sayd vnto Anna his wyfe: Howe like is this yonge man vnto my sones sone? And when he had spokē this he sayd: Whence be ye good bretheren? They sayde: We are of the tribe of Nephtaly, oute of the captivity of Assyrie. Then sayd Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayd yee. We knowe hym wel. And when they had spokē much good of him, the Angel sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whome thou askest is thys yonge mans father.

Then Raguel bowed hym selfe downe and wepte, toke hym aboute þe necke, & kyled hym, & sayde: Gods blessing haue þe my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte also. Nowe when they had talked together, Raguel had kyll a wether, & to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sit downe to dynner, Tobias sayde: I wyl nether eate nor drinke here tynge but except þe spyst graunt me my petition, & promysse me to geue me thy daughter Sara. Wher Raguel herde this, he was astonyed for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other. But when þe went in vnto her, & he began to feare, yf it shoulde chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubt, & gaue the yonge man no answer, the Angel sayde vnto hym: Feare not to geue hym thy daughter, for vnto thy sone yf feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore nought none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doubt not but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in hys sight, and I truste he causid you to come vnto me for the same intente, that thys daughter of myne, myghte be maryed in her owne kynred, accordynge to the lawe of Moses.

And nowe doubt thou not, but I wyl geue her vnto the. So he toke the yonge man de of his daughter, and gaue her into the yonge hande of Tobias, and sayde:

Ecceit The God of

The booke

God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, & the God Jacob, be wth you, iopne you together, and fulfyll hys blessing in you. And they toke a letter and made a w<sup>rytynge</sup> of the marpage. And then made they merce, and prayled God.

And Raguel, called Anna hys wyfe vnto hym, and had her prepare another chamb<sup>re</sup>, ad whether he broughte Sara hys daughter, & wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen geue the lope, for the heauynesse that thou haste suffered.

The viii. Chapter.

The Angell boundeth the demyll. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye: and they praye thre dayes betwixt theyr wyfe together.

We, after that they had supped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angell & tooke oute of hys bagg, a peece of the leure of the fywe, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the Angell Raphael toke holde of the demyll, & sente hym awaye, & bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the vyrgyn, & sayde: Elp Sara, let vs make oure prayer vnto God to daye, tomozowe, & ouermozowe: for these thre nyghtes wyl we reconstyle oure selues wth God, and when the thyrde holpe nyghte is passe, we shall iopne together in the dutye of marpage. For we are the chyldren of holpe men, and we may not come together as the heathen, that knowe not God.

Gene. ii. a.

Then stode they vp bothe together, and besoughte God earnestly, that he wolde preferre them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers, prayled be thou of heauen & earth of the see, welcs & floudes, and of all thy creature that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the *moulde of the earth, & gauest hym Eua for an helper. And nowe Lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take thys syster of myne to wyfe but oneye for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayde haue merce vpon vs (O Lorde, haue merce vpon vs: and let vs bothe come hole and sounde together to a good aage.

And aboute the cocke crowng it happened, that Raguel called hys seruauntes, & they wente wth hym to make a graue. For he sayde it is chaunced nowe vnto hym paradytture, as it did vnto the other seven men, that went in vnto her. Nowe when they had made the graue,

Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maidens, to loke yf he be deade, that I maye burye hym afore the yghte daye: So she sente a mayden to se: whych when she came into the chamb<sup>re</sup>, founde them hole ad sounde, sleppynge together. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tidynge. Then Raguel and Anna hys wyfe prayled the Lord, and sayde: Praised be thou, O Lorde God of Israel for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thoughte. For thou haste dealt mercifully wth vs, and put awaye from vs the enemye that persecuted vs, & haste shewed merce vnto yonder two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnifye y more perfectlye, and offer the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of theyr health: that al people maye knowe that thou oneye arte God in all the earth.

And immediatlye, Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fyll the graue y they had made wth earth afore it was yghte, & had his wyfe prepare a feaste, and to make ready all thynges that were necessarye for meate, to such as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne and meates to be prepared for all hys neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with him two wekes. As for al the good y he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made thys w<sup>rytynge</sup>, that the halfe whych remayned, shulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr deathe.

The ix. Chapter.

The Angell goeth to Gabelus at the desyre of Tobias: which deliuereth the letter, and receaueth the monye.

When Tobias called vnto hym the Angell whome he thoughte to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the hearken vnto my wordes. Yf I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue thy prouydence neuerthelesse. I beseeche the that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cite of Medes, & deliuer hym hys hande w<sup>rytynge</sup>, & receaue the monye of hym, & praye hym to come to my marpage. For thou knowest thy selfe, y my father doth nombre the dayes: & yf I tarpe one daye to longe, he wyl be sorow in hys mynde. Nowe seyst thou howe earnestlye Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot save hym naye.

Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, and wente vnto Rages the cite of the Medes: & when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue hym hys hande w<sup>rytynge</sup>, & receaued all the monye. He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Toby, howe all thynges had happened, & caused hym to come wth hym to the marpage. Nowe when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sytting at the table: & he leaped vp, & they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, & prayled God, and sayde: the blessing of the God of Israel, haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a ryghte vertuous and iuste man, & of one that feareth God, ad geueth greute almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe & youre elders, that ye maye se youre chyldren & youre chylders chyldren, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, & youre seed be blessed of the God of Israel, whych raygneth worlde with oute ende. And when they all had sayde Amen: they wente to the feaste, but wth the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the marpage.

The x. Chapter.

Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the taryng of theyr letter: Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias wth his wyfe.

We whyle yonge Tobias made longe taryng by reason of the marpage, hys father was full of care and heauynesse, and thoughte what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe?

O why

Or why shulde he be kepte so longe there: Par-adventure Sabelus is dead, and no man wyll geue hym the monye. Thus beganne he to be very sorrowful, he and Anna his wyf wpyth him, and beganne to wepe bothe together, because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she we-pte wyth dyscomfortable teares and sayd: Wo is me my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countrey, thou lyghte of oure eyes, thou staffe of oure age, thou comfort of oure lyfe thou hope of oure generacon: Seinge all the thynges that we haue are onely in þ we shulde not haue sente the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tounge, and be not dyscomforted, oure sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sente hym wythall is fapthfull ynoughe. Neuerthelesse, he might in no wyse be comforted but day lye wente oute, looked aboute, and went aboute all the stretes, wherby he thoughte he shulde come agayne that, yf it were possyble, he myghte se hym comynge as farre of. But Raguel sayde vnto his sonne in lawe: Dary beare, & I shal sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias to tell hym þ thou arte in good health. Tobias sayd vnto him: I am sure, þ my father, & my mother counte euery day, & þ theyr hertes are sorpe.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias wyth manye wordes, and wold in no wyse heare him he deliuered Sara vnto hym, & the halfe parte of all his good, in seruauntes, and hande may-dens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kine, & muche mony, & so sente hym awaye from hym wyth pe-ner & ioye, and sayde: The holpe Angell of the Lorde be wyth you in poure iournepe, & brynge you forth safe and sounde, that ye maye finde al thynges in good case wyth poure elders, & that myne eyes maye se poure chyldren afore I dye.
So the elders embraced theyr daughter, kyssed her, and let her goo, exhortynge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her hus-bnde, to rule wel her household, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe fawtlesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias reuered his wyfe and household in the moway, cometh befoze with the Angel. He dreame of his mother taking after her sonne. He is fapthly receiued of his father & mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

As they were now goynge home warde agayne, vpon the. xi. daye, they came to Charra, whych lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninne.
And the Angell sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father therfore yf it please the, we two wyl go before, & let the household wyth thy wyfe and þ cattell come softe & fayer after vs. And when Tobias was contente þ they shulde go before, Raphael sayde vnto him: Take of the gaulle of the fyre wyth the, for it shal be necessarie. So Tobias toke of þ gaulle, & they went theyr way.
But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she might se farre about her. And while he was waytynge there, for his comynge, he looked a farre of and anon he perceaued her sonne comynge, and ranne & told her husband sayynge: Beholde thy sonne cometh. And Ra-phael sayd vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commeste into the house, immediatly worshype the Lorde thy God, and geue thankes vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kisse him, and streche his eyes ouer wyth the gall of the fyre. þ thou hast brought wyth the. For be sure, that his eyes shall streyghte waye be opened, & thy father shall se the lyghte of heauen, and shal reioyce at the lyghte of the. Then the dog þ had bene with them in theyr iourney, came before, & came as a messenger, & wagged his tale for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne and stambled wyth his feete, and gaue a seruaunte his hande, ranne to mete his sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed hym. he and his wyfe and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe when they had worshipped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gal, & annointed his fathers eyes & taped halfe an houre, & then began þ blemyshe to go out of his eyes, lyke as it had bene the whyte farn of an egge whiche Tobias toke, & drew fro his eyes & immediatly he receaued his syght.

Then they praysed God, he and his wyfe and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: Lorde God of Israell, I geue the pray-se and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me hole. And loo nowe I do se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his wo-nes wyfe also hole & sounde wyth all the house-holde & cattell, wyth Camels & muche monye of his wyues & wyth the monye that he had recea-ued of Sabelus, & he tolde his father & his mother all the benefytes, whych God had done for hym by the man that led hym. Achpor also and Rabath, Tobias syster sonnes came, and were glad, and reioysed wyth hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merpe, and were ryghte ioyfull euerychone.

The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias reuered his wyfe and household in the pleas that the Angell dyd hym. He offred vnto the Angell halfe the goodes that he brought wyth hym.

When Tobias called his sonne vnto hym and sayde: What maye we ge-ue this holpe man, that went wyth the. Tobias answered his father and sayde: Father, what rewarde wyl we geue hym? Or what thyng can deserue his benefytes: he hath bene my guyde, and broughte me safe agayne he receaued the monye from Sabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue þ cruel spyrte from her, he hath bene an occasion of gladnesse to her father & mother he de-liuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fyre he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, pea, we al haue receaued great good of hym. Howe shulde we wortheily deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, þ thou wylte be sure hym, yf haplye he wyl vouchsafe, to take wyth him the halfe of all that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, Eet hit toke

toke hym aspre, and beganne to pray hym, that he wolde be contente to take in good worth the halfe parte of all that they had broughte.

Then sayde he secretly vnto them. Praise ye the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto him before all men lypunge, for he hath shewed hys mercye vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges secretes, but to shewe and prayse the workes of God, it is an honourable thyng. Prayer is good with fastyng, and mercye is better then to hoarde vnto treasures of golde. For mercye deliuereth from death, clenseth synne, & causeth to fynde euerylastyng lyfe. But they y do synne & vniyghe-teousnesse, are the enemyes of theyr owne soule.

Wherefore I tell you the truthe, and wyl hyde nothyng from you. When thou prayedest wyth teares and buryedest the dead, and liftest thy dyner, and hyddest the dead in thy house vpon the dape tyne, that thou mightest bury the in the nyght: I offered thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou wast accepte and beloued of God, it was necessarye, that temptaciō shuld tepe the. And nowe hath the Lorde sente me to heale & to deliuer Sara thy sones wyfe fro the euell spiete. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seuen that stande before God.

When they hearde thys, they were sore a-fraied, and trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayde the Angel. Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thanckes vnto hym.

De thi. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. You thought that I dyd eate and dryncke wyth you, but I vsc meate that is myspryde, & dryncke that cannot be sene of men. Nowe therfore is the tyme that I muste turne agayne vnto hym, that sent me: but be ye thanckefull vnto God, and tell oute all hys wonderous workes.

And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken awaye oute of theyr syghte, so that they sawe hym no more. Then fell they downe flat vpon theyr faces, by the space of thre houres, & praysed God, when they arose vp they tolde all hys wonderous workes.

The xiii. Chapter.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth and: praysed the Lorde and sayde: Create arte thou O Lorde for euermore, and thy kyngedome worlde wythout ende: for thou scourgest ad healest, thou ledest vnto hell, & bringest oute agayne: and there is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lord, ye chyldren of Israell, & prayse hym in the syghte of the heathen. For among y heathen whych knowe hym not hath he scatered you, to the intente y ye shoulde shewe furthe hys meruelous workes, and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God Almygdete but he. He that chasteneth vs for oure mysdedes, & for hys owne mercye sake shall he saue vs.

kes. I wyl prayse hym euen in the lande of my captiuyte, for he hath shewed hys maicesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore O ye sinners, & do righteousnesse before God, & be sure, y he wyl shewe hys mercy vpon you. As for me, & my soule, we wil reioyce in God. O praise the Lorde all ye hys chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, & be thynkefull vnto hym, O Ierusalem y cite of God, the Lorde hath punyshed the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in thy good thynges, & geue thanckes to the euerylastyng God, y he maye buyde vpon his tabernacle agayne in the, y he maye cal a gayne vnto the, all such as be in captiuyte, and y thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. With a fayer lycht shalt thou shyne, and at the endes of the world shall honour y. The people that come vnto the from farre, they shall bringe gyftes, and worshyppe the Lorde in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a Sanctuarie, for they shall call vpon the greates name in the.

¶ Cursed shall they be that dyspyse the, and all that blasfeme the, shall be condemned: but blessed shall they be that buyde the vp. As for the thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Blessed are they all that lone the and that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lorde, O my soule, for the Lorde oure God hath deliuered hys cytye Ierusalem from all her troubles. I wyl counte my selfe happye, yf my seed remayne to see the clearnesse of Ierusalem. The gates of Ierusalem shall be buyded wyth Saphyre, & Smaragde, and all the compasse of her walles w precious stones. Al her stretes shall be paved w whyte marble stene, and in al y stretes shall Alleluya be songe. Praise be the lorde, whych hath exalted her, y hys kyngedome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobas made an ende of hys talkyng.

The xiiii. Chapter.

¶ Tobias prayeth for the destruction of Ninus. His soule returneth to him: queth after the decess of his father & mother.

Tobias had gotten his sight agayne, he liued xlii. yeres, & sawe hys chylders chyldren. Nowe when he was, C. & li. yere olde, he dyed: & was buried honourably in Ninus. For whē he was. lvi. yeres of age he lost the syght of hys eyes, & whē he was. lx. yere olde, he gat hys syghte agayne. The respydue of hys lyfe led he in ioye, & increased well in the feare of God, & departed in peace. But in the houre of hys death he called vnto hym hys sone Tobias, & vit poynte spryngaldes hys sonnes chyldren, & sayde vnto them: The destruccyon of Ninus is at hande for the worde of the Lorde cannot fayle: & our brethre y are scatered out of the land of Israell shall come thether agayne. And y hole lade of it y hath ben wast, shall be fylled & the house of God y was brent in it, shall be buyded agayne. & all such as feare God, shall reuene thether: y heathen also shall forsake theyr ydolles, and come to Ierusalem, & dwel there, & all the kynges of the earthe shall be glad of her, and worshyppe the Lorde God of Israell.

And therfore

And therefore my chyldren, heare poure father: serue the Lorde in the truth, seke after hys well, and do the thyng that pleaseth hym. wolde not folowe the goddes of theyr fathers & were in the lande of the Caldees, and so for soke they the custome of theyr fore fathers, whiche had manye goddes and worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth whiche also commaunded them that they shulde goo from thence, and dwell at Harā. Nowe, when ther came a dearth into the hole land, they wente downe to Egypt and there they dwelte * four hundred yeres, in the which they multiplied greatly, that their hooste myghte not be nombred. And when the kynge of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued them in buydyng of hys ctytes wpth making of clape and bycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, whiche punished the hole lande of Egypte wpth dyuers plages.

Nowe when the kynge of Egypte let them go theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them ad to byngne them agayne into hys seruyce, while they were syngge away, the God of heauen opened the see so that the waters stode faste vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and these wente thorowe the bottom of the see drye shod. In the whiche place when an innumerable people of the Egyptians, folowed vpo them, they were so ouerwhelmed wpth the waters that there remayned not one to tell them that came after, howe it happened. So when thys people was passed thorowe the red see, they came into the wilderness of mount Synay, where neuer man myghte dwell afore, and where the sonne of man neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myghte drynke, and fortie yeres had they meat from heauen. After soeuer they went (wpythout bowe and arrowe, wpythout buckler or swerde) theyr God foughte for them, & caused them to haue the vyctory. Yea, no man was hable to hurte thys people, excepte it were, that they departed vnfaithfully from the worshyping of the Lord their God. But as oft as they worshipped anye other besyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be speyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuerthelesse as oft as they were sorpe for theyr departynge from the worshyp of theyr God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to wythstande theyr enemies.

Moreover, they slue the kyng of the Cananites, Jebusytes, Pherezites, Bethrites, Curytes, and Amorites, & all the myghtie in Iherosolome and toke theyr landes and ctytes in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the syghte of theyr God, it wente well wpyth them, for theyr God hateth vnyghteousnesse. For in tymes past when they wente oute of the waye which God had geuen them, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in diuers battayles of many nacjons and many of them were carryed awaye prysoners vnto a strange countrey. But nowe lately they haue turned them selues, agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God, & are come together agayne out of the countreies wher they were scatered abroad: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein & as for Ierusalem wher the Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession.

And therefore my Lorde, make dyligent inquiry, yf thys people haue done wykednesse in the syghte of theyr God, then let vs goo vp agaynst them, for doubtlesse theyr God shal deliuer them into thy handes, & subdue them vnto thy power: But yf thys people haue not displeased theyr God, we shal not be hable to wythstande them, for theyr God shal defende them: and so shal we be a shame to all the worlde.

Nowe when Achior had spoken oute these wordes, all the grete men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, and saide one to a nother: What is he tvis that dare say, that the chyldren of Israell are hable to wythstande Nabuchodonosor the kynge, & his hoost: where as they are an vnweapened people, wpythoute strengthe, or vnderstandynge of the feates of warre: That Achior therfore may knowe that he hath dysceined vs, we wpyll go vp to the mountaynes: when the myghty men of them are taken, he also shalbe styckte wpyth the swerd, that all people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the god of the earth, and that there is none other wpythoute hym.

The vi Chapter.

Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tryed to a tree but is rescued by Judith. He is brought to the people. Achior is comforted by the Jewes.

When they had leste of speakynge Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and sayde vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophesied vnto vs sayynge that the people of Israell shal be defended of theyr God, I wpyll quere the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yea, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perishe wpyth them thorowe the swerde of the Assyrans, & all Israell shalbe destroyed wpyth the, and then thou shalt fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the lord of the whole earth. The swerd of my knyghthode go thorowe thy sydes, and thou shalt fall downe styckte amonge the wounded of Israell, & shalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be utterly destroyed wpyth them. But yf thou thynkest thy prophecy to be trewe, why doste thou then change thy coloure wher arte thou asrayde? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed: But yf thou mayst knowe that thou shalt fele these thynges wpyth them, behold, from thys houre forth wpyll I sende the to vnder people, & when the punishment of my swerde, whiche they haue worthily deserved, falleth vpo them, thou mayest be punished wpyth them.

So Holofernes commaunded hys seruantes to take Achior, & carpe hym to Bethulya, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israell. Then Holofernes seruantes toke hym, and wente thorowe the playne felde. But when they drew nigh vnto the mountaynes, the synge casters came out agaynst them. Neuerthelesse, they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, and bounde Achior hande and foote to a tree, and so left hym bounde wpyth wpyth Ecc. vi. thes,

thes, and turned agayne vnto thei lord.

Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Sennatours, & before them all, he tolde them, what aunswere he gaue Holofernes to þe thing that he asked hym and howe Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge & howe Holofernes hym selfe was wrothe, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites. that when he overcame the chyldren of Israel, he myghte commaunde Achior also to be put to deathe wyth dyuers tormentes, because he sayde the God of heauen is thei defender. And when Achior had playnely tolde oute all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpon thei faces, prayyng the Lord, and poured oute thei prayes together vnto the Lord, wyth a generall complaynte, and weappnge, and sayde: O Lord God of heauen and of earth, beholde thei pryde: & looke vpon oure lowlynesse, & consyder howe it standeth wth thy saintes, & make it to be knowne, þe thou for sakest not those, whych holde them faste by the and howe that thou byngest them lowe þe presume of them selues, & make thei boist in thei owne strength. So when the weppnge & prayer of the people whiche they had made the hole daye longe, was ended, they comforted Achior sayinge: The God of oure fathers, whose power and strength thou haste prayled, shall sorwarde the, that thou shalte rather se thei destruction. When the Lord oure God then shal geue his seruantes this lyberte: God be also wyth the amonge vs: so that yf it please the, thou wyth all thyne mayest dwell wyth vs.

Nowe when Olias had ended the counsayle he toke hym into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it: & so they refreshed them selues after the fastyng. And afterwarde was al the people called together whiche made thei prayers al the nyght longe in þe congregacion, and besoughte the God of Israel for helpe ¶ Bethulia is beleged of Holofernes. The people requyret helpe of God. Achior of Bethulia wolde geue ouer the cite for want of water. The prayer of þe people to cease a lamtaris.

¶ He nexte day Holofernes commaunded his host to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There was an. C. and. xx. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynst the Israelites, and came on by þe hyls, vnto the toppe þe loketh ouer agaynst Bethulim, from þe place which is called Bel Nowe, when the chyldren of Israel sawe so great a myltitude of the Asserians, they fell downe flat vpon the ground, strowed ashes vpon thei heades, & prayed wyth one accorde, þe the God of Israel wolde shewe his merce vpon his people. And so they toke thei weapens ad sat betwene the mountaynes in the narowe place, & kepte the waye, daye and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was going about, he founde the water spryng, whych from the South syde was conueyed into the ctyte by a condyte: this commaunded he to directe an other waye, and to cut thei codyte in sonder. There were welles also not far from þe walles, whych they used secretlye, moze for pleasure then for necessitye.

Then wente the Amorytes, and the Moabites vnto Holofernes, & sayde: The chyldren of Israel truste nether in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepte the mountaynes & hylles. That thou mayst overcome them, therfore wythout the stryckyng of any battaile, let men to kepe the welles, þe they drawe no water oute of them so shalte thou destroye them wythoute swarde, or at the leest they shal be so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the cite, which they thinke not hable to be wonne: for so much as it lyeth in the mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well and al his men of war & he set an hundredth at euery well rounde about

And when this watch had endured twentye dayes, the cysterns and al þe had water, sayled them þe dwelte in the ctyte of Bethulia, so þe in the hole ctyte they had not dryncke ynoughe for one daye for the people had water geuen the daylye in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge persones, & chyldren al vnto Olias, & sayde all wyth one voyce: God be indge betwixt vs and the, for thou hast delte euell wth vs. thou woldest not speake peceably wyth the kynge of þe Asserians, therfore hath God solde vs in thei handes, & there is no man to helpe vs where as we are broughte downe before thei eyes in this ste and greate destruction. Therfore gather nowe tegether all the people þe be in the ctyte, þe we maye all yelde oure selues wyllyngely vnto the people of Holofernes, for better it is that we be captiue and prayse the Lord wyth oure lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scoone ad shamed of euery man, when we se oure wyues & chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this day to recorde: & the God of our fathers (which punyssheth vs accordyng to the descripyng of oure synnes) and geue you warnyng, that ye geue vp the ctyte nowe into the power of Holofernes hoste, that oure ende maye be shorte wth the swarde, which shall endure longe, for want of water and for this ste.

When they had spokē out these wordes, there was a great weppng & howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man: and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god with one voyce, sayng we haue sinned wth our fathers we haue done amysse, we haue delte wyckedly. Thou þ arte gracypus, haue merce vpon vs, punyshe our vnrpghtousnesse, wpyth thyne owne scourge and geue not those ouer þ knowlege the vnto a people wpych knowe þ not, lest they scape amonge the heathen: where is they? God.

And when they were so werpe wpyth thys cryng and wepyng, that they helde they? toges, Olias, stode vp wpyth watry eyes, & sayde Take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethern) and be of good cheare, & let vs wayt yet these fyue dayes for merce of the Lorde paradventure he shall put awaye hys indygnacyon, and geue gloze vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the vertuous woman Iudith wherby reposed the mercyentes because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth them to encourage and helpe the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynst the enemyes of the Jewes.

It happened when these wordes came to the eares of Iudith a wyddowe, whych was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Asya, the sonne of Elay, the sonne of Jammoz, the sonne of Jedcon, þ sonne of Raphaim, þ sonne of Achitob, þ sonne of Delchis, þ sonne of Ead, the sonne of Nathanias, þ sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Simco, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, whych dyed in the dayes of þ barly hartest. For whyle he was byndyng the shewes together in the felde the heate came vpon hys heade, and he dyed at Bethulsa, hys cytyte, & there was he buried besyde hys fathers.

Nowe was Iudith hys desolate wyddowe thie peares and spere monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her selfe a preue chamber, where she dwelte, beyng closed in w her maydens. She ware a smocke of beate and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and newe mones: and the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayre & bewtyful person. Her husband also had lefte her greate ryches, a plentous housholde, greate vnmoneable posselions and many catel. Thys Iudith was a woman of a very good reporte wpyth euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no bodie that spake an euell worde of her.

When thys Iudith hearde, howe Olyas, had promysed the people, þ after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vp the cytie vnto the Asserians, she sente for the elders Chamby, and Chariny, & when they came to her, she sayde what thynge is thys, wherein Olyas hath consented, that yf God helpe not wpythin fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cytyte to the Asserians: What are ye þ ye tempt the Lorde? This deuyse optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym to wrath & dispicature. Wyl ye let the merce of the Lorde a tyme, & appoynte hym a daye after your wyl?

Reuert ye lesse, for so muche as the Lorde is pacyente, let vs rather repente, pouryng oute teares, and besechyng hym of grace. For God threatareth not as a man, nether wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hertely fall downe before hym, & sette hym wpyth a make spete, and wpyth weapyng eyes say vnto the Lorde þ he deale wpyth vs accordyng to hys owne wyll and merce þ lyke as oure herte is nowe vaxed, and broughte lowe thorowe the pyde of them, it maye be so comforted thorowe hys grace in so muche as we folowe not the synnes of oure fathers, wherhe forsake they? God, and worshipped other goddes for the whych synne they perished with the swerde, were speyled and broughte to shame, of all they? enemyes. As for vs we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whose comforte let vs tary wpyth mekenesse. He shall requyre and make inqysyryon for oure bloude, from þ veracions of oure enemyes þe shall byng downe all the heathen, that ryse & payagayle vs, & put them to bythoune, euen þ Lorde our God.

Therfore deare brethern, sayng ye are the honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respect, and vpon whome the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfte vp they? hertes wpyth poure exhortacyon that they maye call to remembraunce, howe oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, & they myghte be proued, yf they worshipped they? God a ryghte. They oughte to remembre, howe oure father Abraham beyng tempted, and tryed thorowe manye tribulacions, was founde a loue and frende of God. So was Isahac, so was Jacob so was Moses, & al they that pleased God beyng tryed thorowe manye troubles, were founde steadfaste in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not they? temptacions wpyth the feare of God but put them selues forth wpyth vnpacyence and murmurage agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, & were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shulde not we undertake to be auenged for the thynge þ is done vnto vs, but consider, that al these punysmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Welayng also that thys correccyon cometh vnto vs as to the seruantes of God for amendemente, and not for cure destruction.

Then sayde Olyas, and the elders vnto Iudith. All that thou spakest, is true, and noman can reue thy wordes. Pray þ for vs nowe therefore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, & fearest God. And Iudith sayde vnto them. See ye knowe þ my wordes are of God, the proue my counsell and deuyse, yf ye be of God: & be sech God he wyll bring my counsell to good end.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stande this nyght before the porte, and I wyll goo forth wpyth Abram my mayden. Praye ye therefore vnto God that he wyll graciously remember hys people of Israel wher in fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thynge that I go in hande wpyth all aske ye no questyons of yt, tyll I open it vnto you my selfe. Dope not, yngelless but praye vnto the Lorde poure God for me. Then Olyas, the Prynce of the people of Iuda, sayd vnto her. Goo thy waye in peace, the Lorde be with the, that

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Judith beareth her selfe to go to Holofernes, the chief spage that the chere gaue Judyth. Holofernes is in loue with Judyth.

 And when she had leste of cryinge vnto the lord, she rose vp from the place where she had lyue flat besoz the Lorde, and called her mayden, wente downe into her house, layde the hearpe cloth from her, put of the garmentes of her wyddowhode, washed her bodie, anoynted her selfe wpth precyous thinges, of swete saunoure, broyded & platted her heare, set an houle vpo her head & put on such apparel as belögeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon her feete, armetes, spanges, earpynges, spngerynges, and decked her selfe wpth all her beste arape.

The Lord gaue her also a specyall bewtye & fauynesse ( for all thys decayng of her selfe, was not done for anye voluptuousnesse, & pleasure of the fleshe, but of a ryghte dyscrecion and vertue, therefore dyd the Lorde increase her beutye, so that she was excedyng amiable, and wel fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her maybe also a bottell of wyne, a pot wyth oyle, pottage, cake & cheese, & went her way

Nowe when she came to the porte of the cytye, she founde Olyas, and the elders of the cytye waytyng there. Whych when they sawe her they were astonysed & maruelled greatly at her bewtye. Nevertheless, they asked no questy-on at her, but let her go, sayinge: The God of oure fathers geue the hys grace, and wyth hys power performe all the deuice of thy heart, that Ierusalem maye receyue euer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde wyth one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made her praye vnto the Lorde, and wente oute at the porte, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne. it happened that aboute the spyng of þ daye, the spyres of the Asserpany met wyth her, and tooke her, sayinge: whence comest thou?
Or whether goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the hebrues, & am fled from them for I knowe that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoiled because they thought scozne to yelde them selues vnto you, that they myghte fynde mercy in youre syghte. Therefore, haue I deuised by my seife after thys maner. I wyll go before the Prynce Holofernes, & tell hym all theyr secretes, and wyll shewe hym, he we he maye come by them and wynde them, so that not one man of hys hoste shall perishe.

And when these men had hearde her woordes, & consydered her fayre face they were astounded (for they wondred at her excellent beuty) & sayde vnto her. Thou haste saued thy lyfe by fyndynge out this deuyce, that thou wouldeste come downe to oure Lorde: & be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shalt please hym at the hert So they

So they broughte her into Holofernes pauply on, and tolde hym of her. Nowe when he came in before hym, inmedyately he was overcome, and taken wpyth her bewte. Then sayd hys seruauntes: who wold dyspyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women? Shuld we not by reason fyghte agaynst them for these? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes, sytynge in a canapye, that was wroughte of purple, sylke, gold, Sinaragde, & precious stones, he looked faste vpon hym and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne at theyr lordes commaundemente.

The xi Chapter.

Holofernes requyred of Iudith the cause of her comynge, wherby he was gened hym a lutele inuolunt.

Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne herte, for I neuer hurte man that wold serue Nabuchodonosor kyng. As for thy people, yf they had not dyspyssed me, I shulde not haue lyfte vp my speare agaynst the. But tell me nowe, what is the cause y thou art departed from them, & wherefore art thou come vnto vs.

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden, for yf thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall bringe thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as hys power lyueth, which is in the to y punysshemente of all men that go wronge, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto hym the more the, but all y beastes also of the feld. For all the people spake of thy prudente actiuitie: and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou enlye art good and myghty in all hys kyngedome, and thy dyscrecyon is commended in all landes.

The charge is manifest also, that Achyoz spake, and it is wel known, what thou commaundest to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a suretye, that our God is so wyathe wpyth vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath thewed by hys prophetes vnto the people, howe y for theyr synnes he wylly deliuer them ouer vnto the enemye. And for so muche as the chyldren of Israel, knowe that they haue so dyspleased theyr God, they are sore afrayed of the.

They suffer great hunger also, & for want of water, they are dead nowe in a maner. More ouer, they are appoynted to slaye all theyr catel that they maye dyspycke the bloude of them, and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamente of theyr God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne, and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, y they muste nedes be destroyed. Wherby when I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them and the Lorde hath sente me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshipped God euen now here besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I wylly make my prayer vnto God, & he shall tell me when he wylly reward them theyr synne then shall I come and the we the and byng y thowowe the myd de. For Jerusalem, so that thou walte haue all y people of Israel, as the shepe wpythout a shepheard there shall not so muche as one dogge batte agaynst the, for these thynges are shewed me, by dyscrecyon of God & for so muche as God is displeased w the, he hath sente me to tel y the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruauntes, which merueled at the wisdom of her, & sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth, in bewtie & dyscrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath doer well, that he hath sente the hether he fore thy people that thou mayest geue them in to oure handes. And for so muche as thy promysse is good, yf God performe it vnto me, he shall beny God also, and thou shalt be excellent & greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

The xii Chapter.

Holofernes commaunded that Iudith shoulde be well intreated. He desired to goe out in the nyghte season to praye, and wylly synne it. He was so sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and she commaunded Holofernes to be done. Ken.

Then commaunded he her to goe in where hys treasure laye, & charged that she shoulde haue her dwellinge there, and appoynted what shoulde be geuen her from hys table. Iudith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe lest I displease my God, but well eate of such as I haue broughte wpyth me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thynges y thou hast brought wpyth the fayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde thy handmayden shall not spend all this, tyll God haue broughte to passe in my hande, the thynges y I haue deuiled.

So hys seruauntes broughte her vnto the tent, wher as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desired that she myghte haue leaue to go forth by nyghte, and before daye to her prayer and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes hys chamberlaynes, that she shoulde goe out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God thowethre dayes.

And so in the nyghte season she wente forth into the valleye of Bethulya and washed her selfe in the well water. Then wente she vp and soughte the Lord God of Israel. That he wold prosper her waye for the dyspuraunce of hys people. And so she wente in, & remained cleane in her tente, tyll she toke her meate in the evening.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruauntes, & sayde vnto Agao his chamberlayne: Go thou way, and counsell this Hebrewesse, that she may be wyllyng to consente to kepe company wpyth me. For it were ashamme vnto all the Assyrians that a woman shoulde so laughe a man to scorne y she were come from hym vnyndled wpythall.

Then wente Agao vnto Iudith, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come vnto my Lord, that she may be honoured before hym, that hym, that she mape eate and dryncke wine, and be merie wth hym. Unto whome Judith answered. Who am I, that I shulde save my Lordes name: whatsoeuer is good before hyss eyes, I shall do it: and looke what is hyss pleasure, that shall I thynke well done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckte her selfe wth her apparell, and wente in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so þe be bzente in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: dryncke now and lye downe, and be merie, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyl dryncke, for my mynde is merie to day, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyd eate and drinke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merie wth her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dyd af ore in all hyss lyfe.

The xiiij. Chapter.

Holofernes slepeth for verye dronkennes, and Judith cutteth off his heade: and goryth therewith in her owne people of whom she is called wth. Or: I ben grete thanks vnto God for this deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achyroz. Achyroz be meruayleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

In the night whan yt was late, the night hyss seruantes made hast euery mā to hyss lodgynge. And Elagab shute the chamber doores, and wente hyss waye, for they were all ouerladen w wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber.

As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed all dronken, and of verie dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande wthoute before the dore, and to wapte. And Judith stode before the bed, makynge her prayer with teares, and moued her lippes secrete lyfe, and sayde. Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue a respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this oure, that thou mapest set vp the ctyte of Ierusalem, like as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I maye perfourme the thyng, whiche I haue deuysed thowowe the beleue, that I haue in the.

13 And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, and lowsed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it oute. Then toke she the holde of the heape lockes of hyss heade, and sayd strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre, and wth that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote off hyss head. Then toke she the canapye awaye, and rolled the deade bodye aspyde. Immedpatelye she got her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and had her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after theyr custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the host, and came thowowe the valley vnto the porte of the ctyte. And Judith cryed a farre vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is wth vs, whiche hath the wedd hyss power vpon Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the ctyte together. And toep came all to mete her: lytle and grete, yonge & olde, for they thoughte not that she shulde haue come so lone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone, but she wente vp into an hye place, & caused sylence to be proclaymed.

Then euerye man nowe helde hyss tonge, & Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not dyspyled, nor forsaken them, that put theyr truste in hym, and in me his handmaiden he hath performed hyss mercy, whiche he promysed vnto þe house of Israel: yee, in my hād this same night hath he slaine þe enemy of his people.

And wth þe she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the wallet, & shewed it them sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captaine of the Assiriās, & this is the canapye, wher in he laye in his dronkennesse: where the Lord our God hath slayne hym by þe hand of a womā.

But as trulpy as the Lord lyueth, hyss Angell hath kepte me goynge thether, remaynyng there, & commynge hether agayne from thence. And the Lord hath not suffered me hyss handemayden to be despyled, but wthoute any fylthynges of synne hath he broughte me agayne vnto you: and that wth grete vycrope, soo that I am escaped, and deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayled the Lord all together, & gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they sayde. The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thowowe the he hath brought oure enemyes to nought. And Alsas the chiefe ruler of þe people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lord, the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, whiche hath gydded the a ryghte to wounde and smyte of the heade of the captaine of oure enemyes. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouthe of men, whiche shall alwaye remember the power of the Lord. Sepnge thou haste not spared thyne owe selfe, but put the in scoperdye consyderynge the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so haste helped theyr fall before God oure Lord. And all the people sayd: Amen, Amen.

Achyroz also was called, and he came. Then sayde Judith vnto hym. The God of Israel vnto whome thou gaueste wytnes, that he wolde be aduenged of hyss enemyes, euen he hath this nyght thowowe my hande smytten of the head of all the vnsapthfull. And that thou mapest see that it is so, beholde, this is the heade of Holofernes, whiche in hyss presumptuous pryde, dyspyled the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the wth destruction, sayinge: when the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause the also to be spyckte wth the swerde. When Achyroz sawe Holofernes heade, he fell downe vpon his face to the grounde for verie anguysh and feare, so that he souned wth hall.

But after that he was come agayne to hym selfe, he fell downe before her, and prayled her, sayinge: Blessed arte þe of thy God, in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people þe heare of thy name, shall praise þe god of Israel, because of þe Streke vp thyss heade vpon oure walles, and when the sunne ariseth, take euery man hys weapon, and fall out vpon olentye: not as though ye wolde go to synne them, but to runne vpon them wth vpolence. When the spyres in the tentes se this, they shall of necessitie be compelled to flye back ward, & to rase vp theyr captaynes to the battayle. So when theyr captaynes come into Holofernes pauplion, & fynde the dead body wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnesse shall fall vpon them, & when ye perceaue y they flye, folow them wthout al care, for God shall deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achyoz seing y power of God, which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from hys heathenrye belefe, and put hys trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcysed, and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel, he and all hys posterite vnto thys daye.

Nowe as soone as it was daye, they stichte vpon Holofernes heade vpon the walles and euery man took hys weapen, and so they wente oute wth an horrible crye. When the spyres sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were wthyn the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate rushynge to wake hym vp, because they thought wth y howse to haue raysed hym. For there durste not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and princes and all the chiefe in the kyngdome of the Assyrians booke came together, they sayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Go poure wake in, and wake hym vp for the myse are crepte oute of theyr hoyses, and dare prouoke vs vnto battayle.

The went Magao into his chamber, stode before the bed, & clapped wth hys handes, for he thought he had bene sleppynge wth Iudith.

But when he had hearkened perfectly wth hys eares, and coude perceaue no stryngge he wente nigher to the bedde, and lyfte it vp and then sawe he the deade bodye of Holofernes lyynge there without a head, welterd in his bloud vpon the earth. Then cryed he wth lowde voyce, & wth weppynge rente hys clothes, & wente into Iudiths tente, and founde her not. And so he lepte oute vnto the people & sayde: one womā of the Jewes, hath broughte all Nabuchodonosors people vnto hym. For loo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the ground: and hath no heade.

When the chiefe of the Assyrians booke heard, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and trembling vpon them, so y theyr myndes were sore afrayde. And there was an exceadynge great crye in the whole host.

The xlv Chapter.

The stryngge of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becommeth ryche by the spoyle of the Assyrians. Iudith is prayd of Joachim: and of the people.

Nowe when all the hooste heard that Holofernes was headed, theyr mynde & coucel fel from them, and suche a feare came vpon them that they undertoke to defend them selues by flyng away. one spake not to another but haged downe theyr heades, lest al behynd them and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes for they hearde, that they were hastynge to come after wth theyr weapens, and so they fled by the wayes of the felde, and hozowe all the foote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wente downe wth trompetes blowynge, and makinge a greate crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no order, and kepte not them selues togetther, but fled theyr waye. Next belasse, the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them wth one compaigne and order, & dyscomfited as many as they myghte get. And Elias sent messengers vnto all the cytyes & countreys of Israel.

So all the regyons & euery cytie sent oute theyr best men after them in harness, & smot the wth the swearde, tyll they came to the vtmost parte of theyr borders. And the other y were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, & toke al, that they whych fled had leste behynd them, & so they founde great good. And they y came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, tooke w them suche thynges as had bene theyrs there was no nombre of the catell, and of the coyle Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hygheste, they were all made ryche of the spoyle of them. And Joachym the hygh prelatte of Jerusalem, came to Bethulia wth al y elders that they myghte se Iudith.

Nowe when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her wth one voyce, sayynge y worthynesse of the cytye of Jerusalem, y tope of Israel, y honoure of oure people, y haste done maly, & thy vertue is coforted, because thou hast loned cleynnesse & chastyte, & hast knowen no mā but thyn owne husband. Therefore hath y hand of y Lord comforted the, & blessed shalt y be for euer. And all people sayde so be it, so be it.

In thys tyme dayes coude the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyle of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, & had ben hys specially (whether it were of gold, of silver, precyous stones, clothynge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Iudith. And all the people reioysed, bothe women, maydens, & younge people wth pypes and hearpes.

The xvi Chapter.

The songe of Iudith for the victory. After the victorye obtained: the people cometh to Jerusalem: to worshyppe and praise God.

When songe Iudith thys songe vnto the Lorde: Begynne vnto the Lorde vpon y taborettes, syng vnto the Lorde vpon the cymbales, & syng vnto hym a newe songe of thankesgeyunge, be loyefull & call vpon hys name. It is the Lord y destroyed warres euen the Lord is his name. Which hath pytched his tentes in the myddest of his people, y he myght deliuer vs from the hande of al oure enemyes. Assur came out of the mountaynes of y noyth in the myltitud of his strength. his people stopped ple stopped the water brokes, and they: horses covered f walles. he purposed to haue brent vp my lade, & slaye my ponge men w the swearde.

he wolde haue carped awaye my children & byrgens into captiuitie, but the Almighty Lorde byndred hym, & delyuered hym into the handes of a woman, whiche brought hym to cōfelyon. For they: myghte was not destroyed of the ponge men. It was not the sonnes of Eptan f slue hym, nether haue the greates Spau-tes set them selues agaynste hym: but Iudith the daughter of Merary wyth her sayre bewt bath dylcōfited hym, & brought hym to naught. For she layde awape her wyddowes garmente & put on the parell of gladenesse to the reioysynge of the childe of Israel. She annoynted her face, & bounde vp her heare in an houe to begyle hym. Her sylppers rauished his eyes, her bewetie captiuated hys mynde, wyth the swearde smote she of hys necke. The Percians were astounded at her stedfastnes, & the chierdes at her boldenes. Then howled the armys of the Assyrians when my symple appered, dyde of thys. The sonnes of the daughters haue pearled them thorowe & slayne them as fygtyne childe: they perished in the battayle, for the verpe feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs syng a song of thāf geuynge vnto the Lorde, a newe song of prayse wpll we syng vnto oure God: Lorde Lorde, farte a great God, myghtie in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, & they were made: thou sentest thy sprete, & they were created, & no man can wythstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundacyons wyth the waters, the stonpe rockes shall melte before the lpe ware. But they that feare the shalbe great wyth the in all thynges. Alloo vnto the people f ryle vp agaynste my generacyon, for the Almighty Lorde wpll aduenge hym selfe of them, and in the dape of Judgemente wpll he vylet them. For he shall geue fyer and wormes into they: felche, that they maye burne and sele it for euer moare.

After thys it happened, that after the vyctorpe, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue praisc and thanckes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purtyed, they offred all they: burnt sacryfices, & they: promysedofferynges. And Iudith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all the Jewels that the people had geuen her, and f canappe that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vnto the Lord. The people was loyful, as the vlc is. & thys loye by reason of the vyctorpe, wyth Iudith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dapes, enery man wente home agayne, & Iudith was in greates reputacyō at Bethulia, & ryghte honourably taken in all the lande of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastytie ioynd, so that after her husbāde Hannass, she neuer knewe man al the dapes of her lyfe. Vpon the hpe solempne dapes she went out wyth greates worshyppe. She dwelte in her husbādes houle an hundred and fyue yeare, & lefte her handmayden fre, and dyed: and was buryed besyde her husbāde in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her. vii. dapes. So long as she liued, there was none that troubled Israell, and many yeares also after her deathe.

The dape wherein thys vyctorpe was gotten, was solemplye holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nombre of the holpe dapes, and it is yet greatelye holden of the Jewes euer sence vnto thys dape.

The. xi. Chapter, after the Latyn.

The dreame of Mardocheus

Mardocheus f sone of Jair, the sonne of Seimei, the sonne of Elsci of the tribe of Ben Jamin, a Jewe: whiche had hys dwellinge in the ctyte of Shiloh, a man of greates reputacyō and excellent amonge al them that were in the kynges court. (Nethertheles, he was one of p. p. cioners, who Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babillon had carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon w Jechonias the kyng of Juda.) In the. ii. yere of the raygne of great Artaxerxes in the fyrst day of the moneth. Aisan had this Mardocheus such a dreame: he thoughte he hearde a greates tempeste, horryble thonderclappes, earthquakes, & a great vyroure in the lande, & f he sawe. ii. great dragons redy to fight one agaynst another.

They: crye was greates. At the whiche rorynge & crye all the heathen were vp to fyghte agaynste the ryghteous people. And the same dape was full of darkenes, and verpe vncleare full of trouble and anguythe, pec. a greates fearfulness was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amaled for they feared the plage ad euell that was deuyled ouer them, and were at apoynte wyth them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were cryinge: the lytle wel grewe into a greates ryuer and into many waters. And wyth that it was dape and the sonne rose vp agayne. And the lowlye were exalted, and deuoured the glozyous and proude.

Howe when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, and mused stedfastlye in hys herte, what God wolde do, and so he despyred to knowe all the matter, & hys mynde was there vpon vntyll the nyghte.

The. xii. Chapter.

Mardocheus detesteth the treason deuyled agaynste the kyng: and is therfore rewarded of hym.

The same tyme dwelte Mardocheus wyth Bagatha and Tares, the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde they: deuyce, ad had dplygently conspyred they: p. magynacyous, so he certified þ kyng therof. Then caused the whē they had graūted it they wer put to death.

This þ kyng caused to be put in þ Cronicles for an enerlastyng remembꝛaūce, & Mardocheus wrote vpo þ same matter. So þ kyng commaun-

But Aman þ sonne of Amadathu the Agagite,

The xv Chapter.

Ardocheus meuech wether to go into the kynges ar to make intercession for her people, and he perfourmeth bys requeste.

Ardocheus also had Esther goo in: vnto the kyng, & praye for her people, and for her countrey. Remember sayth he the dayes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast nourished vnder my hande. For Arian whych is nexte vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therefore vpon the Lord, & speake for vs vnto the kyng, & deliuer vs from death. And vpon the thyrde day it happened, that Esther layde awaye the mourninge garments, and put on her glorious apparel, and deckt her selfe goodly, after & she had called vpon God, which is the beholder and sauyour of al thynges. Toke two handmaydes wpyth her: vpon the one she leant her selfe, as one & was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her bewtye made her face rose coloured. The sympletyde of her face was chearfull and amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stode before the kyng. The kyng sat vpon the throne of hys kyngedome, & was clothed in hys goodlye araye, al of gold, and set wpyth peryous stones, and he was verie terri-

He gaue her louinge wordes also, and sayde vnto her. Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundemente toucheth the comons & not the Comenre. And wpyth & he helde vpon hys golden rod, and layd it vpon her necke, and embraised her frendelye, and sayde talke wpyth me. Then sayde she. I sawe the O Lorde as an Angell of God, & my herte was troubled, for feare of thy mayesty and clearnesse. For excellent & wonderfull arte thou O Lorde, and thy face is full of Ampte. But as she was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for faptnesse for the whych cause the kyng was afrayde, and all hys seruantes comforted her.

The report of the letters of Artharleses, wherby he reuoluth chon, which he bypse sente forth.

The greate king Artharleses, which I rapyneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seven & twety landes, sendeth vnto the Dyners and rulers of the same landes, such as, our hym, hys frendly salutation. # The booke of wysedome

The fyrste Chapter.

Howe we oughte to seatch and enquire after God, and who be those that synne hym. Of the holy ghost we ought to flye from bawdryng and murmurynge. &c.

Det poure affection vpon ryghteousnesse, ye shal be Judges, of the earth. haue a good opponyon of the Lorde, & seke hym in the spynghenesse of hert. For he wyll be found of them that tempte him not, and appereth vnto such as put theyr trust in him. As for frow-ard thoughtes, they seperat from God: but ver-tue (if it be allowed) reformeth the vnwysle.

And whyr wysedome shall not enter into afrowarde soule, nor dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy Ghost abhorreth fap-ned nuryour, and wythdraweth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are wythout vnderstandynge. & where wyckednesse hath the vpper hande, he fly-eth from thence, for the spere of wysedome is louynge, gentle & gracious, & wyll haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euell wyth hys lippes.

For God is a wytnes of hys raynes, a true searcher out of hys hert, & an hearer of his tong. For the spere of the Lorde fylleth the round compasse of the worlde and the same that vpholdeth all thyngges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, cannot be hyd neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reproofe. And whyr inquisycy-on shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngod-lye, and the reporte of hys wordes shal come vnto God, so that thys wyckednesse shalbe punyshed. For the eare of gelousye heareth all thyngges, and the noyse of the grudgynge shall not be hyd. Therefore beware of murmurynge, whych is nothyngge weyth and refrayne poure tunge from slaunder. For there is no worke so barke and secrete, that it shall go for noughte, & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slapeth his soale.

Seke not your owne death in the errour of poure lyfe: destroye not your selues thowme the workes of your owne handes. For God hath not made death neyther hath he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lyuynge. For he created all thynges, & they myghte haue theyr beyng: yea, all the people of the earth hath he made that they shulde haue healt, & there shulde be no de-struccyon in them, and that the kyngedome of hell shulde not be vpon earth, for ryghteousnes is euerlastynge and immortal. but vnryghteo-usnesse byngeth death. Nevertheless, the vngodlye call her vnto them both wyth wordes and workes: and whyle they thynke to haue a frende of her they come to noughte: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

The ii. Chapter.

Wdd is the pynnyng.

What tyme nowe as Aman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian, a straunger vere-lye of the Persians blonde, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in among vs as an aleant and had optayned the frendshyppe that we be are towarde all the people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hygh honoure of euerp man, as the nexte and pryncypall vnto the kyng, he could not forbear hym selfe from his pyde, hath vnderaken, not onely to robbe vs of the kyngedome, but of oure lyfe.

Althowmanysfolded ysceate also hath he despred to destroye Harbocheus oure helper and preseruer, whych hath done vs good in all thyngges and innocente Esther the lyke partaker of oure kyngedome, wyth all her people. For hys mynde was when he had taken them oute of the wape, and robbed vs of them, by thys meanes to translate the kyngedome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes, whiche were accused of the wycked, & they myghte be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vlye resonable and ryght lawes, and that they be the chyldren of the mooste hygh lyuynge God by whome the kyngedome of vs and our poge-nyptours haue bene well ordred hether to.

Wherefore, as for the letters and commande-mentes that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and inuented them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, wyth all hys kynred and God, (whiche hath all thynges in hys power) hath rewarded hym after hys deservynge.

And vpon thys ye shall publyshe and set vp the coppe of thys letter in all places, that the Jewes maye frelye and wythoute hyndraunce hold them selues after theyr owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpon the thre & twentye daye of the twelue moneth Adar, they maye be aduenged of them, whiche in the tyme of theyr angur and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that governeth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the daye, wherein the chosen people shulde haue perished.

Moreover, amonge the hygh solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shall holde thys also wyth all gladnesse, that nowe and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good for all suche as loue the prosperyppe of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruccyon to those that be sedycious vnto vs.

All cyties and landes that do not this, shal bo-rylye peryshe and be destroyed wyth the swearde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inha-byted of men, but be abhorred also of the wyld beasts and foules.

The ende of the reast of the booke of Esther,

¶ The pynnyng and despayre of the wicked, and the pynnyng agaynste the saythfull.

¶ As the vngodlye talke and pmagyn thus amonge themselves (but not ryght:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but shorte & tedpous: and when a mā is once gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, neither knowe we any man turneth agayne from death. for we are bozne of nought, & we shalbe herafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breath is as smoke in oure nostrils, & the wordes as a sparke to moue oure bert. As for our body, it shalbe verp ashes & are quenched, & oure soule shal vanyshe as the soft apre. Oure lyfe shal passe away as the trace of a cloude & come to naught as the myst & is dymen awaye with the beames of the Sunne, and put downe wpyth the heate thereof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by lytle and lytle, and no man shal haue oure woorkes in remembraunce.

¶ For oure tyme is a verpe shadowe & passeth awaye: and after oure ende there is no retunyng for it is fa. I sealed so & no man cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures & there are, and let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fylle oure selues w good wyne and opntmente, & let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues wpyth roses afore they be withered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but oure luste go thowwe it.
Let euery one of you be partaker of oure volup-teousnesse. Let vs leue some token of our pleasure in euery place, for & is oure porcyon, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore ryghte us, let vs not spare the wyddowe nor olde man let vs not regarde the beades & are gras for age.
Let & lawe of vnyghteousnesse be oure auctho-ryte, for the thyng & is feble is nothyng worth.
¶ Therefore let vs defraude the ryghteous: and why he is not for oure profyte yea, he is cleane contrarye to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynste the lawe, and flaundreth vs as transgressours of all nourtoure. He ma-keth hys booke to haue the knowlege of God: yea he calleth hym selfe gods sonne. He is the be-wayer of our thoughtes: It greucth vs also to looke vpon hym, for hys lyfe is not lyke other mens. hys wayes are of another fashyon. He co-unteth vs but vayne persons, he wythdraweth hym selfe from oure wayes as from spithynge.
He commendeth greatlye the latter ende of the lust, and maketh hys booke & God is hys father.
Let vs se then yf hys wordes be true, let vs pro-ue what ende he shal haue. For yf he be the true sonne of God, he wyll receaue hym and deliuer hym from the handes of hys enemyes. Let vs exampn hym wpyth dyspytefull rebuke and tormentynge, that we maye knowe hys dygnyte and proue his pacyence. Let vs condemne him wpyth moost shamfull death for lyke as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

¶ Suche thynges do the vngodlye pmagin and goo astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath bynded them. As for & mysteries of God they vnderstande them not they neyther hope for the reward of ryghteousnesse, nor regarde & woorkyng & holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vnderstoyed yea, after & pma-ge of hys owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuer-thelesse, thowwe enuy of the deuell, came death into the worlde. and they that holde of hys lyde do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The contrarytyon and assurance of the ryghteous, The reward of the saythfull.

¶ At the soules of the ryghteous are in the hand of God, and the payne of death shal not touche them. In the syghte of the vn-wysse they appeared to dye, and theyr ende is taken for very de-struccyon. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vetter destruccyon, but they are in reste. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is theyr hope ful of immortal tye. They are punished but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse, in manye thynges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fin-deth them mete for hym selfe: yea, as the golde in the forname, doth he tpe them and receaueth them as a burnt offeringe, and, when the tyme cometh they shalbe looked vpon.

¶ The ryghteous shal wyne as the sparkes that runne thowwe the red bushe. They shal Judge the nacyns, and hie domynyon ouer the people, and theyr Lorde shal raygne for ever.
They that put theyr truste in hym, shal vnderstande the truthe, and suche as be saythfull, wyll agre vnto hym in loue: for hys chosen shal haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodlye shalbe punyshed accordyng to theyr pynnyngs, for they haue dyspyed & righteous: & forsake & lord.

¶ Whoso dyspyseth wysedome and nourtoure he is vnhappye: and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne: theyr laboures vnfrutefull, and theyr woorkes vnprofytable. Theyr wyues are vnpicrete, and theyr chyldren mooste vngod-lye. Theyr creature is curled. Blessed is rather the barren and vnderfyled, whych hath not kno-wne the synfull bed: she shal haue fructe in the reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whych be wpyth hys handes hache wroughte no vnyghteousnesse, nor imagyned wycked thynges agaynste God. For vnto hym shal be geuen the specpall gyfte of sayth, & the mooste acceptable porcyon in the temple of God. For gloryous is the fructe of good laboure, and the roote of wysedome shal neuer fade awaye.

¶ As for the chyldren of aduouterers, they shal come to an ende, and the seed of an vnyghtous bedd shalbe rooted out. And though they lyue long, yet shal they be nothyng regarded, & theyr laste age shalbe wpythoute honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the daye of knowlege. For horrible is the death & ende of the vnyghteous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Of the shalle generacyon of the saythfull, and of theyr helper. Of the death of the ryghteous, and of the conseruation of the saythfull.

¶ Howe

How sayre is a chaste gnetacy on wyth vertue: The memory all thereof is immortal, for it is known wyth God & with men. When it is presente, mentake example therat, and pfit go away pet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the rewarde of the vnderpledd battayle. But the multitude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofitable: & the thynges þat are planted w̄ whoredome shall take no depe rote, nor laye any fast foundation. Though they be greene in þe braunches for a tyme, pet they shall be shaken w̄ the wynd for they stand not fast, & thow they be vbermēcy of þe wynde they shall be rooted out. For þe vnperfect braunches shall be broke thei frute shall be vnprofyttable & sower to eat: pee, mete for nothyng. And why? al the chyldren þe are borne of þe wycked, must beare recorde of þe wyckednesse agaynst thei faders & mothers when they be asked. But though they ryghteous be ouertaken w̄ death, pet shall be in rest.

Age is an honourable thyng: neuertheles it standyth not onely in the length of tyme, nor in the multiplynde of yeaers. but a mans wyldeome is the graye heare, and an vnderpledd lyfe is the olde age, he pleased God, and was beloued of hym: so that where as he lyued amonge synners, he translated hym. * Pea, sodenlye was he taken awaye, to the intente that wyckednesse shulde not alter hys vnderstandyng and that hypocryse shulde not begyle hys soule. For the crafty bewytchyng of lyes make good thynges darke, the vnderstandynesse also and wyckednesse of voluptuous desyre, turne asyde the vnderstandyng of the symple. Though he was soone dead, pet fulfilled he much tyme. For his soule pleased God: therefore hastid he to take hym away from amonge þe wicked. Thys þe people se, & vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thynges in theyr hertes howe that the louynge fauoure and merce of God is vpon hys sapntes, and that he hath respecte vnto hys chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deade, condemneth the vngodly whiche are lyuynge: and the pouth that is soone broughte to an ende the long lyfe of the vntyghteous. For they se the ende of þe wyle, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyld for hym, and wherefore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and dyspise hym, therfore shall God also laugh them to scoorne. So that they them selues shall dye heereafter (but wythoute honoure) pea, in shame amonge the deade for euermoore. For wythoute any hope shall be hurte those that be putte vp, and remoue them from the foundations, so that they shall be layde waste vnto the hygher. They shall mourne, and theyr memory all shall perishe. So they beynge astrayde, shall remember theyr synnes: and theyr owne wyckednesse shall bewraie them.

The. v. Chapter.

The constancie of the ryghteous before theyr persecucion. The hope of the vnsapntull is vntowarlike and harnye. The blisshewe of the sapntes and godlye.

When shall the ryghteous stand in god? at steadfasteneste agaynst such as haue dealt extreamely w̄ them, & taken awaye theyr laboures. When they se it, they shall be vbered with horrible feare, and shall wondre at the hastynesse of the sodayne healt. growynge for very distresse of mynde, and shall saye wythin them selues, haupynge inwarde sorowe, & mourynge for very anguythe of mynde. These are they, whom we somtyme had in dyscussio, & tested vpo. We fooles thought their life very madnes & theyr ende to be about honoure. But lo, howe they are coulted amonge þe chyldren of God, & theyr porcion is amonge þe sapntes. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, þe lyght of righteounesse hath not shyned vnto vs, & þe sunne of vnderstandyng rose not vpon vs. We haue werped oure selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Ederous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hath the pompe of riches broughte vs? All those thynges are passed a waye lyke a shadowe, & as a messenger runnyng before as a shyppe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whych when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde, ne the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thowre in the ayre, & no man can se any token where she is flowne, but onely heare the noyse of her wynges, beatynge þe lyght wynde partynge the ayre thowre the vehemency of her goynge, & flyeth on makynge her wynges, where as after ward no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as whē an arrowe is shot at a marke it parteth þe ayre, whych immediatly cometh together agayne, so þe a man can not knowe where it went thowre. Euen so nowe in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wyckednesse.

Suche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the scoope of the vngodlye is lyke a dyke. Thysle floure (or duste) that is blowne awaye wyth the wynde lyke a thyne scoime that is scatered abroad wyth the storme, lyke as the smooke whych is disperfed heere and there wyth the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that tarreth for a daye and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermoore: theyr rewarde also is with the Lorde and theyr remembraunce with the hygheste. Therfore shall they receaue a glorious kyngedome, and a bewyffull crowne of the Lordes hande: for wyth hys ryghte hande shall he coner them and wyth hys owne holpe arme, shall he defende them hys gelousye also shall take awaye the harnesse, and he shall weapen the cretant to be aduenged of þe enemyes. He shall put on ryghteounesse for a brest plate and take sure Judgemente in steade of an helmete. The inuincible shilde of equitye shall he take, hys cruell wraathe shall he sharpen for a spere, and the whole compasse of the worlde, shall be his.

Then shall the thonderboltes go oute of þe lyghtnynges, and come out of the raygne bowe of þe cloudes to the place appoynted: out of þe harde stony indygnacyon, there shall fall thynke hayles, & the water of the see shall be wroth agaynst them, & the floudes shall runne roughely together. Yea, a myghty wynde shall stande up agaynst them, & a storme shall scatter them a broode. Thus þe vnrighteous dealing of them shall bringe all þe land to a wyldernesse, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynge of þe myghty.

The. vi. Chapter.

The collinge of Kynges, Bynners and Judges: which are also exhorted to searce wysdome.

Wysdome is better then strength, ad a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one þe is stronge. heare the fore: O ye kynges and vnderstande. O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of the earth. Seue eate ye that rule the myltitudes, and delyte in much people. For if power is geue you of the Lord, & the strength from the hyghest: whych shall trye your workes, and searce oute your ymagynacions: howe that ye beyng officers of this kyngdome haue not executed true Iudgemente, haue not kepte the lawe of righteounesse, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horryble, and that righte sone shall be appere vnto you for an hard iudgemente shall they haue that beate rule. Merce is graunted vnto the synnyle, but they that be in auctorite shall be soe punysshed. For God which is Lord ouer all, shall receyue no mans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of anye mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small & grete, and careth for al alyke. But the myghty shall haue the sozer punysshement.

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake that ye maye learne wysdome, & not go amysse. For they that kepe this righteounesse, shall be righteously Iudged, and they that are learned in righteous thynges, shall fynde to make answer. Wherefore, let your luste vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtoure.

Wysdome is a noble thyng and neuer fadeth awaye: yea, she is easelye sene of them þe loue her, and forude of such as seke her. she puenteth them þe desyre her. & she maye fynde we her selfe vnto them. Whoso awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no grete trouayle, for he shall fynde her spetynge readye at his doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfect vnderstandynge: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe: ad that sone. For she goeth about, sekynge such as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherfully vnto them in theyr goynge, & meteth them wth all dyligence. For the vnspayed desyre of refoz macyon is her begynnyng: to care for nourtoure is lone, & lone is the keepynge of her lawes. Now the keepynge of þe lawe is perfectio, & an vncozrupt lyf: & an vncozrupt lyf maketh a man samplere w God. And so þe desyre of wysdome leadeh to the kyngedome euerlastyng. If your delyte be then in royall seates and septers (O ye kynges of the people) let your luste vpon wysdome, that ye maye raygne for euermore. O loue the lyghte of wysdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you: and wyll not hyde the mysteries of God from you: but wyll seeke her oute from the begynnyng of the natyuite and bynne the knowlege of her into lyghte, ad wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neither wyll I haue to do wth consumynge enue, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the myltitude of the wyse, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then, thowse my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The. vii. Chapter.

Wysdome oughte to be preferred aboue all thynges.

If I am also a mortall man, lyke as al other, & am come of the earthye generacyon of hym that was fyrste made, & in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be flesch: In the tyme of ten monethes was I broughte together in bloude thowse the frede of man, and the comodious appetyte of slepe. When I was borne I receaued lyke apze as other men, and fel vpon the earth (which is my nature) cryng and wepyng at the fyrst as al other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, & brought by w grete cares. For there is no kyng þe had any other begynnyng of byrth. Al men then haue one entaunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge oute in lyke maner.

Wherefore I desired, & vnderstanding was geuen me: I called and the spyrte of wysdome came vnto me. I let more by her then by kyngedomes & royall seates, and counted rychehe no thyng in comparyson of her. As for pzepones floone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, & syluer shall be counted but clay before her sight. I loued her & boue welfare & bewtye, & purposed to take her for my lyght, for her lyght can not be quenched. All good thynges come to me wth her, and innumerable rychehe thowse her handes. I was glad in the all, for this wysdome wente before me, and I knew not þe she is the mother of al good thynges. Howe as I my selfe learned vnspayedlye, so do I make other men partakers of her, & byde her rychehe from noman: for she is an infynite treasure vnto men, whych who so vse, become partakers of the lone ad frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto hym for þe gyftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke myselfe, & conueniently to handle the thynges þe he hath graciouslye lente me. For it is he, þe leadeh vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdome arpyghte. In his hande are both we & oure wordes: yea, al our wysdome, our vnderstanding & knowlege of al our workes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thynges, so þe I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the begynnyng, endynge, and myddeste of the tymes, howe the tymes aulter, howe one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfilled, þe course of the yeare: the ordinaunces of the ces of the starrs: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furpousnesse of beastes: the power of þ wyndes: þ pmygnyacyōs of men: þ dyuerstites of yong plantts: the vertues of rootes, and all suche thynges as are secrete and not loked for, haue I learned for þ workemaster of all thyngges hath taught me wysdome. In her is the sprete of understandyng whych is holpe, manyfolde, one onely, subtyl, curteous, discrete, quicke, vnderfyled, playne, swete, loupng that is good, sharpe, whych forbiddeth not to do well, gen-tyle, kynde, stedfast, sure, fre, haupng all vertu-es, cyrcumspete in all thynges: receaupng all spyrytes of understandyng, beinge cleare and sharpe. For wysdome is nymler then all nym-ble thynges: she goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges, because of her cleannesse. For she is the bryth of the power of God, and a pure cleare expressyng of the cleannesse of Almyghty God, Therefore can no vnderfyled thyng come vnto her for she is þ bryghthenesse of the euerlastyng lychte, þ vnderfyled myrroure of the ma-jestye of God and þ ymage of hys goodnesse.

 And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, & beynge stedfast her selfe, she renueth all and among þ people conuapeth her selfe, into þ holpe soules. She maketh Gods frendes & prophetes: for God loueth noman, but hym in whome wysdome dwelleth. For she is moare bewtyfull then the Sunne, and geueth more lyghte then the starrs, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckednesse cannot overcome wysdome: and folshenesse maye not be wyth her.

The viii. Chapter.

The effectes of wysdome.

Wysdome reacheth frome one ende to another myghtely, and loupnge ly doth she order all thynges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen from my yowth vp: I dyd my dylygence to marie my selfe wyth her, suche loue had I vnto her bewtye. Who so hath the com-panye of God, commendeth her nobyltye yea, the Lorde of all thynges hym selfe loueth her.
 For she is the scolemastresse of the nourture of God, and the choser onte of hys workes. If a man wolde desyre rycheesse in this lyfe, what is rycher then wysdome, that worketh all thin-ges? Thou wylte saye: understandynge worketh. What is it amonge all thynges, that worketh moare then wysdome? If a man loue ver-tue and righteousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse and prudence, ryghteounesse and strength, whych are such thynges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. If a man desyre muche knowlege, he can tell the thynges þ are passe, and dyscerne thyngges for to come: she knoweth the subtyltes of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences.

She can tell of tokens, & wonderous thynges or euer they come to passe, and the endes of all times & ages. So I purposed after this maner

I will take her vnto my company, and conuue loupngely wyth her no doubte she shal geue me good counsaile, & speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse & greefe. For her sake shal I be well & honestly taken amonge the conmyng & lordes of þ counsaile. Though I be yong yet shal I haue sharpe vnderstandyng, so þ I shal be meruelous in þ syghte of great men, & the faces of prynces shal woder at me, when I holde my tonge, they shal abyde my leysure: when I speake, they shal loke vpo me. & if I talke much they shal lape theyr handes vpo theyr mouth.

Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shal obtayne immortalyte, and leaue behynd me an euerlastyng memorie all amonge them that come after me. I shal set the people in order, and the nacpous shal be subdued vnto me. Horryble tprauntes shal be asfayde when they do but be-are of me, amonge the multytude I shal be counted good, and myghty in battayle. When I come home, I shal fynde rest wyth her: for her companye hath no bytternesse, and her feloweshyppe hath no tedypousnesse, but mythe & ioye.

Nowe when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondred them in my herte, howe þ to be ioyued vnto wysdome is immortalyte, and greate pleasure to haue her frendeshyppe, howe þ in the workes of her handes are inlyny-tie rycheesse howe that, who so kepeth company wyth her shal be wyse, and that he whych tal-keth wyth her, shal come to honour: I went about sekynge, to gather her vnto me. For I was alad of arype wyte, & had a good vnderstanding but when I grew to more vnderstandyng, I came to an vnderfyled bodye. Nevertheless, when I perceaued þ I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me, (ad þ was a point of wysdome also, to knowe whole grfte it was) I stepped vnto the Lord & besought hym & wyth my whole hert I sayd after this maner.

The ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to a prync wysdome.

God of my fathers, & Lorde of mercie. I praye (thou that haste made all thyng-zes wyth thy worde, and ordyned man thorow thy wysdome: that he shuld haue domynyon ouer the creature which thou haste made: that he shulde order the worlde accordyng to equyte and ryghteousnesse, and execute iudgemente wyth a true herte) geue me wysdome, whych is cuer aboute thy seate, ad put me not oute from amonge thy chyldren. for I thy seruante and sonne of thy handemayden am a feble person, of a shorte tyme, and to yong to the vnderstandyng of iudgemente and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte among þ chyldren of men, yet if thy wysdome be not with him, he shal be nothing regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kynge vnto thy prople, & the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buyd a te-ple vpon thy holy mount, & an alter in the ctyte wherin thou dwellest a likenesse of thy holy tabernacle whych thou hast prepared from the begynnynge, and thy wysdome wyth the, whych

Wdd liii knoweth knoweth thy workes which also was with the when thou madest the world, and knewe what was acceptable in thy spghte, and righte in thy commaundementes. I sende her oute of thy holy heueng, and from the throne of thy maieste that she may be wyth me, & labour wyth me. & I maye knowe what is acceptable in thy spghte for she knoweth and understandeth al thinges: and she shal leade me soberlye in my workes, & preserue me in her power. So shall my workes be acceptable, & then shall I gouerne thy people ryghteouslye, & be worthy to sit in my fathers seate. For what man is he that maye knowe the counsaile of God? Or who can thynke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are mesurable, & our recalles are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall & corruptyble bodye is heuie vnto the soule, & the earthlye mansion kepeth downe that vnderstanding that museth vpon many thinges. Clepe hardlye canne we decerne the thinges that are vpon earth, & greate labour haue we, or we can synde the thinges whiche are before our eyes: who wyll then seke oute the grounde of the thinges that are done in heauen? O Lord who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandynge & meanyng excepte thou geue hym wysdome, & sende thy ho-lye ghoost from aboue: that the wayes of them whiche are vpon earth, maye be reformed: that men maye learne the thinges that are pleasaunte vnto the, and be preserued thowowe wysdome.

The x. Chapter.

The helptraunce of the ryghteous cometh thowowe wysdome

Wysdome preserued the fyrste man, whome God made a father of the worlde, when he was created alone, brought hym out of his offence toke him out of the mould of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thinges.
When the vnrightheous wente awaye in hys wrauth from the wysdome, the brothered per-shed thowowe the wrauth of murther. Agayne, when the wat'r destroyed the whole worlde, wysdome preserued the ryghteous thowowe a pore tree, where of he was gouernour her selfe & thowouer, whē wickednesse had gotten the vp-perhande so that the nacyns were putte vp wyth pynne he knewe the ryghteous, preserued hym fautelisse vnto God, and layde vp sure mercey of hys chyldren. She preserued the ryghteous, when he fled from the vngodlye that perished what tyme as the fyr fel downe vpon the fyre cypres: Lyke as yet this day the vnfructefull waste, and smokyng lande geueth testymonye of theyr wyckednes: yee, the vntype and vntymelye frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaithful soule, there standeth a pillar of salte for all such as regarded not wysdome gat not onelye thys hurte, that they knewe not the thyn-ges whych were good, but also lest behynde them vnto men, a memoypall of theyr foolhenes: so that in the thinges wherein they sinned, they coude not be hid. But as for suche as take hede vnto wysdome, she shal deliuer them frō sorowe

When the ryghteous fled because of hys brothers wrauth, wylde dome led hym the ryghte waye, shewed hym the kingdome of God, gaue hym knowledge of holpe thinges, made hym ry-che in hys laboures, & brought to passe the thyn-ges that he wente aboute. In disceatfulnesse of suche as defrauded hym, she stood by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the ene-myes, & defended hym from the deccayers. She made hym stronge in battayle, & gaue hym the victorie, that he myght knowe howe that wis-dome is stronger then all thinges. When the ryghteous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but deliuered hym from synners. She went downe wyth hym into the dongeon, & sayled hym not in the bandes, & till she had broughte hym the scepter of the realme, and powre agaynst those that oppressed hym. As for them that had accused hym, she declared them to be lyers, and bro-ughte hym to perpetuall worshyppe.

She deliuered the ryghteous people ad-fantlesed e, from the nacyns that oppressed them.
She entred into the soule of her seruant of God & stode by hym in wonders & tokens agaynst the horrible kynge. She gaue the righteous the re-warde of theyr laboures, & led them forth a mer-uelous way. on the day tyme she was a shadow vnto them, & a lyght of starres in the nyght season. She brought them thowowe the red see, & carried them thowowe the greate water. She drew-ned theyr enemyes in the see, & brought them out of the depe. So the ryghteous toke the spoyle of the vngodly, & praised thy holpe name, O Lord & magnified thy victorious hand wch one accord.
For wysdome openeth the mouth of the doli-me, maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The xi. Chapter.

The mercies done for Israel the chengement of his name. The grete power and mercey of God.

He ordred theyr workes in the han-des of thy holpe prophete: & so that thy wente thowowe the wyldeynes that was not inhabited, & pyched theyr tentes in the waste deserte.
They stode agaynst theyr enemyes, and were aduenged of theyr aduersaries. When they were thyrstye, they called vnto the, & water was geuen them oute of the moost hye rocke, & theyr thyrst was quenched oute of the harde stoon.
For by the thinges were thowowe theyr enemyes were punyshed, were the chyldren of Israel helped in theyr nede, to theyr comforte. For vnto the enemyes thou gaueste mans bloude in steade of of dryngge water. And where as they had scarnesse in the rebuke, when the chyldren were slay-ne, thou gaueste vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnloked for: declarynge by the thyrstye was at the tyme howe thou woldest byng thyne owne vnto honoure, & slaye theyr aduersaries.

For when they were tryed and norturned wyth fatherlye mercey, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, & punyshed thowowe the wrauth of God. These hast thou exported as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boytous kynge, layde harde to theyr charge, & condemned the. Whether they were absent

were absente or presente, they punyshement was alpe. For they grete was double namely, mournynge, & the remembrance of thynges past. But when they perceaued that they pun-yshementes dyd them good, they thoughte by pon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at last they helde much of hym, of whome in y outcastyng they thought scorn, as of an abiect. Ne-uerthelesse, the ryghteous dyd not so when they were thyrst. but euen lyke as the thoughtes of the folke were, so was also they wyckednes.

any thyng endure yf it were not thy wyll? Or

There dare nether king, nor traute in thy sight

For so muche then as thou arte ryghteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghteouslye & and punyshed euen hym that hath not deser-ued to be punyshed, & takest him for a stranger and an aleaunte in the lande of thy power.
For thy power is the begynnyng of ryghteo-usnesse: and because thou arte Lorde of all thy-nges, therfore arte thou gracious vnto all.

Job. ix. a

When men thyncke the not to be of a full strengthe thou declarest thy power: and boldly delyuerest thou them ouer that knowe the not.
But thou Lorde of power iudgest quietlye, and ordrest vs with greute worshippe, for thou mayest do as thou wylte.

By such workes nowe haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also shulde be iust and louyng: and haste made thy chyldren to be of a good hope, for euen when thou iudgest, thou geuest rowme to amende from synnes.

For in so much as thou hast punyshed, and with such dyligence delyuered the enemyes of thy seruautes, whych were worthy to dye, (where thorowe thou gauest them tyme & place lypnyng as chyldre of no vnderstandyng. Therefore hast thou sent a scornfull punysshement amonge the chyldren of ignorance. As for such as wold not be reformed by those scornes and rebukes, they felt the worthy punysshement of God. For the thynges that they suffered they bare them vnpaciently, beinge not contente in them but vnpayng. And whē they perished by þe same thynges y they toke for goddes, they knowleged then, y there was, but one true God whome afore they wolde not knowe: therefore came the ende of theyr dampnacion vpon them.

The xlii. Chapter.

All thynges be hapnyng, excepte the knowlege of God. A dolatre and Idole are mocked.

1stoma .i. d.

Vpne are all men, whyche haue not knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thynges whych are sene, knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euerything. Nether toke they so much regarde of the workes that are made, as to knowe, who was the craftesman of them, but some toke the spere, some the wynd or aye, some the course of the starres, some the water, some the Sunne and Moone, or y lychtes of heauen whyche enle the earth, for gods. But though they had such pleasure in theyr bewtye, that they thoughte them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knownen, howe muche more saynter he is that made them.

For the maker of bewty hath ordeyned al these thynges. Or yf they meruayled at the power & workes of them, they shuld haue perceaued ther by, y he whych made these thynges, is myghtyer then they. For by y greatnesse and bewte of the creature, the maker thereof maye playnely be knownen. Not wythstandyng they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, & wolde fynd hym and get mylke. And why for so much as they go aboute in hys workes and seeke after them, it is a token, y they regarde and holde muche of hys workes y are sene, howebeit they are not wholly to be excused. For yf they vnderstandyng & knowlege be so greates: y they can descerne the worlde & the creatures, why do they not rather fynde oute the Lorde thereof?

But unhappe are they, & amonge the dead is theyr hope, that cal them gods which are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thyng that is founde out by conyng, the sympletyde of beastes, or any wayne stone that hath bene made by the hande of olde. * Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the woode, and pareth of the barkke of it conyngly: and so wyth the one parte maketh a vessel to be vled, and directeth meat wyth the resydue. As for the other parte y is lefte, whych is profyttable for nothyng (for it is a croked pece of wod and full of knobbes) he carneth it dilygentlye thorowe hys banke, and accordyng to y knowlege of hys conyng, he geueth it some propozycion, fashoneth it after y sympletyde of a man, or maketh it lyke some beast straketh it ouer wyth red, and paynteth it, and loke what soule spotte is in it he casteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in wall, & maketh it fast wyth yron, prouiding so for it, lest it happe to fall. for it is wel knownen, y it can not helpe it selfe. And why: it is but an Image, & must of necessity be helped. Then goeth he & offereth of hys goodes vnto it, for hys chyldren, and for hys wyfe he seket helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, y hathe no soule: for health, he maketh hys petycyon vnto hym that is speke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto hym y is dead he calleth vnto hym for helpe y is not able to helpe hym selfe: and to sende hym a good iournepe, he prayeth hym that maye not goo. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne any thyng or to worke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The xliii. Chapter.

The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages. A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The cruellies that cometh of ydolatre.

Nayne, another man purposyng to sayle and begynnyng to take hys iournepe thorowe the ragynge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weaker then the tre that beareth hym. For as for it, couetousnes of monye hath founde it oute, and the craftesman made it wyth hys conyng.

But thy prouidence, O father gouerneth all thynges from the begynnyng: * For thou haste made awaye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of the waues: declarynge thereby that thou hast power to helpe in al thynges, prae though a man wente to the see wythout shyppe. Nevertheless, that the workes of thy wysdom shuld not be vayne, y hast caused an Ark to be made: and therfore do men comyt theyr synes to a smale pece of woode, passyng over the see in a shyppe, and are saued.

* For in the old tyme also when the proud gyautes perished, he (in whome the hope was lefte to increase the worlde) wente into the ship whych was gouerned thorowe thy hande, and so lefte seede behynde hym vnto the worlde. For happye is the tre where thorowe ryghteousnes cometh: but cursed is the ydole that is made with handes, yea both it & he that made it. He because he made it & it because it was called god, where as it is but a fayne thyng. * For y vngodly & hys vngodlynes are bothe lyke abhominable vnto God. Eue so y worke and he y made it also, shalbe punyshed together. Therefore shall there a plage come vpon the ydolles of the heathen: for out of the creatures of God they are become abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for y fete of y vnwyle. And why: y sekynge out of ydoles is the begynnyng of whoredome, and the begynnyng vpon of them is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnyng, nether shal they contynue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mentred for hys sonne y was taken a waye from hym, he made hym an ymage (in al y hath) of hys dead of hys dead sonne and so beganne to worshype hym as a god, whych was but a dead man, and ordeyned hys seruantes to offer vnto hym.

Thus by proces of tyme and thow an vngreuous custome, thys error was kept as a lawe & tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honoure ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myghte not worshype them presently, they picture was brought from farre, lyke the ymage of a kynge whome they wolde honoure to the intent that wth grete diligence they myghte worshype hym whych was farre of, as though he had bene presente.

Agayne the synfuler connyng ofecraftesman gaue the ignorant also a grete occasyon to worshype ymages. For the workman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure y set hym a worke, laboured wth all hys connyng to make the ymage of the best fashyon. And, so thow the bewte of the worke the comen people was deceaued, in so much they toke hym now for a God, whych a lytle afore was but honored as a ma. And thys was the error of mas life, wher men (ether for to serue theyr owne affectyon, or to do some pleasure vnto the kynges) ascribed vnto stones & stukes the name of God, whych oughte to be geuen vnto no man.

Deu. xxi. d.
Mee. vii. d.
Ead. xii. a.

Moreover, thys was not ynough for them y they erred in the knowlege of God, but where as they lyued in grete warres of ignorance, those many and grete plages called they peace for ether they due theyr owne chyldren, & ofsered them, or dyd sacryfice in the nyght season or eysheide vnto unreasonable waches so that they kepte nether lyfe nor marpage cleane but ether one due another to death malprouyse, or elles greued hys neyghboure wth aduoutre. And thus were all thynges mytte together, bloude, man slaughter, thefte, dyspnylacyon, corrupcyon, vnfaithfulnesse, sedycyon, perjury, dyquetyng of good men, vnthanchfulnesse, despyng of soules, chaungynge of byrthe, vnstedfastnesse of marpage, mylord of aduoutre & vncleynesse. And why the honouringe of abhominable ymages is the cause the begynnyng and ende of all euell. For they that worshype Idoles: ether they be mad wher they be merc, or prophete lyer, or lyue vngodlye, or elles lyghthe for sweare them selues. For in so much as they truste in the ydoles whych haue nether soule nor vnderstandynge though they sweare falselye yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plage vpo them and y worthe, for they haue an euell openyon of God, geuynge hede vnto ydoles swearyng vnjustlye to deceaue, and dyspnyng ryghteousnes. For theyr swaryng is no vertue, but a plage of them that spone, and goeth euer wth the offence of the vngodlye.

The. xv. Chapter.

The hope of the fard fall, prapryng the merce of God for whose graces sake they serue the ydoles.

Alt thou (O once God) arte swete longe sufferynge, and true, & in merce ordynest thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thine, for we knowe thy strength. If we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the, is perfect ryghteousnes. Yea, to knowe thy ryghteousnes and power is the rote of immortalte. As for the thyng that men haue founde out thow theyr euell science, it hath not dysceaued vs as the payntynge of the picture an vnprofitable labour, and caryed ymage, wth dyuers coloures, whose sight entyseth y ignorant so y be honoured & loued the picture of a brade ymage y hath no soule.

Neuerthelesse, they loue such euell thynges, are worthe of the death. they that trust in them, they y make them, they y loue them, and they y honoure them. The potter also taketh & tempereth softe earth, labourer it, and geueth it the fashyon of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one peece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for serupce, and some contrary. But where to euery vessel serueth, y knoweth the potter hym selfe. So wth hys vayne labour he maketh a God of the same claye: thys doth euen he, whych a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and wthyn a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the earth agayne.

For wthstandynge, he careth not y more because he shall labour, nor because hys lyfe is shorte but stryuethe to excell golde synthes, the syluer synthes and copersynthes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vayne thynges. For his herte is ashes, hys hope is but vayne earth, and hys lyfe is more vyle then claye, for so much as he knoweth not hys owne maker, y gaue hym hys soule to worke, and brethid in hym y breth of lyfe. They counte oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuetylacyon to be but a markete and that men shoulde euer be gettynge, and that by cruel meanes. I owe he that of earth maketh fraile vesselles and ymages, knoweth hym selfe to offende aboue al other.

All the enemyes of the people, and y holde them in subieccyon are vnwyse, unhappye, and receayvynge proude vnto theyr owne soules for they iudge all the ydoles of the heathen to be goddes, whych nether haue eyesyghte to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor synners or hādes for to grope and as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made them, and he y hath but a borrowed spere, fashyoned them. But no man can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seynge he is but mostall hym selfe, it is but mortal y he maketh wth vnyghteous handes he hym selfe is better then they whome he worshypeth, for he lyued though he was mostall so dyd neuer they. Yea, they worshypped beastes also, whych are mooste myserable for compare thynges, that can not sele vnto them, and they are worse then those.

Yet is there not one of these beastes, that wth hys syghte can beholde any good thyng neyther haue they geuen prayse nor thanckes vnto God.

The punishment of Idolaters, and the benyfytes done vnto the fard fall.

For these

Or these and such other thyngges haue they suffered wothpe punyement and thoroowe the multytude of beastes are they coted out. In stead of the which punyementes thou hast gracp ouly ordred thine owne people and geuen them theyr desyre that they louged for: a newe and straunge tast, * preparing them quaples to be theyr meat: to the intent that (by the thynges whych were shewed and sente vnto them) they shoulde be so greedy of meat, myght be wythdrawen euen from the desyre that was necessarp. But these wythin shorte tyme were broughte vnto pouerte, and tasted a newe mea-te. For it was requysite that (without excuse) destruccyon shoulde come vpon those which used tyrauntye, and to shewe onlye vnto the other, howe theyr enemyes were destroyed.

* For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they perished thoroowe theyr synnes of cruell serpentis. Notwithstandyng theyr wyathe endured not perpetuallye, but they were put in feare for a litle season, & they myght be reformed, haupnge a token of saluacyon, to remember the commaundemente of thy lawe.

For he shoulde conuerted, was not healed by the thyng ge shewyd, but by the, & saluoure of all. So in this thou shewdest thyne enemyes, that it is thou, whych deliuerest from all euil. As for the

* when they were bytten woth grethopers and flies, they dyed, for they were worthy to perishe by such. But neyther the teth of dragons nor of venomous wormes ouer came thyr chyldren, for thy mercede was euer by them, and helped them

Therefore were they punished to remember thy wordes, but hastelpe were they healed agayne, lest they shoulde fall into so depe forgetfulnesse, & they myght not vse thy helpe. It was nether herbe nor plaster that restored them to health, but thy worde (O Lorde) whych healeth all thyngges, It is thou (O Lorde) that haue power of lyfe and death: * thou ledest vnto deathes doze, ad bryngest vnto agayne. But man thoroowe wekednes slayth his owne soule & when he shoulde goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether may he call agayn the soule that is taken away. It is not possible to escape thy hande. For the ungodlye shoulde not knowe the, were punyshed by the strength of thyne arme: with straun-ge waters, haples and raynes were they persecuted, & thoroowe fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng & fyre myght do more then water whych quenched all thynges but the worlde is the aduenger of the righteous.

Some tyme was the fyre so tame, & the beastes whych were sent to punysh the ungodly, brennot: and & because they shoulde se and knowe, & they were persecuted woth the punymente of God. And sometyme brente the fyre in the water on euery syde, & it myght destroye the vnrpghteous nacyon of the earth. * Agayne thou hast fed thyne owne people woth Angels fo-de, and sente them breaðe eedy from heauen (woute theyr labour) beyng very pleasaunt and agood of taste. And to shewe thy ryches & swetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest euer y one theyr desyre, so & euery man myghte take what lyked hym best. But the snowe and yse abode & violence of the fyre and melted not: & they myghte knowe, & the fyre burnyng in the hable & rayne, destroyed the frute of the enemyes, the fy-re also forgot bys strength agayne & the ryghteous myghte be rejoyced. For the creature shoulde serue the, whych arte the maker (is feare in punyshyng the vnrpghteous, but it is calpe & gentle to do good, vnto such as put theyr trust is the nurse of all thynges, accordyng to the de-syre of them & had neade thereof & thy chyldren * that it is not the nature and the growyng of frutes that seadeth men, but that it is thy worde, whych preserueth them that put theyr trust in the. For loke what might not be destroyed w-the fyre, as soone as it was warmed woth a lytle sunne beame, it melted: & all men myghte knowe & thankes ought to be geuen vnto the before the sunne yse, & & thou oughtest to be worshipped before & day spring. For & hope of the vntankfull shal melte awaye as the wynter yse and peryshe as water, that is not necessary.

The iudgements of God vpon the Egyptians,

Rate are thy iudgements (O Lorde) and thy counseils can not be expessed therefore men do erre, that wyl not be reformed woth thy wysdome. *

For when the vnrpghteous thoughte to haue thy holy people in subieccion, they were bounde woth the bandes of darchenes, & longe nyghte, but vnder the rose, thyngunge to escape the enclastynge wysdome. And while they thoughte to be byd in the darchenes of theyr sin-nes, they were scatered abroad in the very myddyt of the darche coueryng of forgetfulnesse, put to horryble feare and wonderoulye vexed: for the corner where they myght not kepe them from feare (because the sound came downe and vexed them) yea, many terriblye and straunge byssons made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myghte geue them lyghte, nether myght the clere flammes of the starres lyghten & horryble nyght. For there appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, verpe dyedful At the whych (when they sawe nothyng) they were so afrayed, & they thought & thyng which they sawe, to be the more fearefull. * As for the sorcery and enchaunement & they vled, it came to derysyon, & the proude wysdome was brou-ghte to shame. For they shoulde be prynced to byue awaye the fearefulness and dyede from the weake soules were sicke for feare them selues, and

E For it is an heuie thyng, when a mans owne conscience beareth recorde of hys wyckednes & condemneth hym. And wher a vered and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thynges in hande. Fearfulnesse is no thyng els, but a declaration that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to answer for hym selfe. And looke howe much lesse the hope is wythin, the moare is the vncertaintye of the matter, for the whych he is punished. But they that came in the myghtye nyghte, slepte the slepe that fel vpon them from vnder and from aboue. Sometime were they afearde thoro we that feare of þe wonders, & sometime they were so weake that they sowned wythall: for an hastye and sodayne fearfulnesse came vpon them.

D Afterwarde, þe anpe of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in prison, but wythout charyte. But þe any dwelte in a byllage, þe he had ben an hearde or husbandeman, he suffered in tollerable necessyte for they were all bounde wyth one chayne of darckenesse.

Whether it were a blasfyme wynde, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge þe thicke branches of the trees, or þe vehemence of hasty runninge water, or greates noyse of the fallinge downe of stones, or the playinge & runninge of beastes whom they sawe not, or þe myghtie noyse of roarynge beastes, or the sounde that aunswereth agayne in þe hye mountaynes. It made them sorrowe for verp feare. For all the earth shyned wth cleare lychte, and no man was hindered in hys labour. Whelpe vpon them there fell an heuie nyght, an ymage of darckenesse that was to come vpon them. Yea, they were vnto them selues þe mooste heuie and hoerrible darckenesse.

The xviii. Chapter.

The first lychte that the Jewes had in Egypte. The persecution of the church. The Jewes smyte all the first borne of Egypte. The spone of the people in the wilderness. And God breymeth the iure & the dead, with his censures.

In everthelesse, the sayntes had a verp great lychte (and the enemyes hearde theyr voyce but they sawe not the fygure of them.) And because they suffered not the same thynges they magnified the and they that were vered afore (because they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besought the. D God that there myghte be a difference. Therefore had they a burning pyller of fyre to leade them in the vnkowen waye, & thou gauest them the Sunne for a free gyfte wythout any hurte. Reason it was that they shoulde wante lychte, and be put in þe prison of darckenesse, whych kepte the chyldren in captivite, by whome the vncorrupt lychte of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen. When they thought to slaye the babes of the ryghteous (one beyng layde out, and prescribed to be leader vnto the other,) & thou broughtest oute the whole multitude of the chyldren and destroyedest these in the myghtie water. Of that nyghte were oure fathers certyfyed afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myghte be of good cheare. Thus the people receaved the healt of the ryghteous, but the vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou haste hurte oure enemyes, so haste thou promoted vs whom thou caldest afore. For the righteous chyldren of the good men offered secretly, and obeyed the lawe of righteousnes vnto vyte þe iuste shoulde receave good and euell in lyke maner, spryngyng prayles vnto þe father of al men. Agayne, there was heard an unconueniente voyce of the enemyes, and a piteous crye for the chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruaunte were punished in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable that dyed one death.

Neyther were the lychte suffyciente to hurte the dead, for in the twynnyng of an eye the noblest nacyon of them was destroyed. As ofte as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them beleue. But in the destruction of the fyrste borne they knowleged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were stil and when the nyghte was in the myddest of her course, the Almyghtye worde. Lorde, leape downe from heauen oute of thy roiall thronne, as a rougheman of warre, in the myddest of the lande that was destroyed. And the Warpe swarde perfortuned theyr strypte commaundement standyng and fellyng all thynges wyth deathe yea. It stode vpon the earthe and reached vnto the heauen. Then the syghte of the euell dreames vered them sodenlye, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawares.

Then laye there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quicke, and shewed the cause of hys death. For the vspions that vered them shewed them these thynges afore. So that they were not ignoraunte, wherfore they perished.

Then temptacyon of deathe touched the ryghteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wilderness there was murtheryng, but the wrath endured not longe. For the blamelesse wente in all the hast and took the battayle vpon hym, brought forth the weapons of hys mystryng. euen prayer and the censures of the conspyng. set hym selfe agaynst the wrath. & so broughte the myserye to an ende. declaringe thereby that he was the seruaunte. For he ouer came not the multitude wyth bodelye power, nor wyth weapons of myghte but wth the word he subdued hym that vered hym, puttinge them in remembrance of þe othe & couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, & parted the waye vnto þe lychte. And wher in hys longe garment was all the bewte & in þe foure rowes of the stones was the glorie of the fathers gracen, and the mayesty was wyrtten in the crowne of hys heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place and was afraied of them for it was one lyke a temptacyon worthy of wrath.

The xix. Chapter.

The death of the Egyptians, and the greatesone of the church. The Jewes that was geuen at the besyng of the people. The elements serue not onely to the wyl of God but also to the wyl of man.

So for the vngodlye, the wrath came vpon them wythoute mercy vnto the ende for he knewe

For he knewe before what shoulde happen vnto them, how that (when they had consented to let them go, and had sente oute wth greates dyligence) they wolde repente and folowe vpon the * For when they were yet mournynge and makinge lamentacion by the graues of the deed, they deuyled another folowenelle: so that they persecuted them in theyr synging, whome they had caste oute afore wth prayer. Mothe necessity also broughte them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that hapened vnto them afore. But the thyng that was wantynge of theyr punysshement, was requyte so to be fulfilled vpon them wth tormentes, that thy people myghte haue a marvellous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge deathe.

Then was every creature fastyned agayne of newe, accordynge to the wyll of theyr maker, obeyinge thy commaundementes that thy chyldren myghte be kepte wthoute hurte. For the cloude ouer shadowed theyr tentes, and the drye earthe appered, where afore was water: so that in the red see, there was a waye wthoute impedymente: and the greates depe became a greane felde: where thorowe all the people wente that were defended wth thy harde synging thy wonderous and metuelous woordes.

For as the hoxes so were they fed, and leaped lyke lamberes, prayng the (O Lord which haddest deliuered them: ) And why? they were yet mynde full of thy thynges that hapened whyle they dwelte in the lande: howe the grounde broughte forth the sypes in steade of catell: and howe the ryuer scauled wth the multitude of frogges in steade of fowles.

* But at the laste they sawe a newe creature of byrdes, what tyme as they were decaued wth luste, and despyred delycate meates.

For when they were speakynge of theyr appetite, the quayles came vpon them from the see, and punysshementes came vpon the spynners not wthoute the tokens whiche came to passe afore by the vehemence of the streames, for they suffered wthouthely accordynge to theyr wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably and churlyshely wth straungers. Some receaued no vnknown gesses, some broughte y<sup>e</sup> straungers into bondage y<sup>e</sup> dyd them good. Whylde all these thynges there were some, y<sup>e</sup> not onely receaued no straungers wth theyr wylls, but persecuted those also, * and dyd them muche euell, that receaued them gladly. Therefore were they punyshed wth * blyndenesse, lyke as they that were couered wth todayne darchenesse at the doores of the ryghteous, so that euerye one soughte the entraunce of his doore.

Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tyme is chaunged vpon an instrumente of musyke, and yett all the residue kepe theyr melodye, whiche maye easely be perceaued, by the syghte of the thynges that are come to passe.

The drye lande was turned into a watery and the thyng that afore swamme in the water, wente nowe vpon drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary vnto his owne vertue) and the water forgot his owne kynde to quenche. Agayne, the flames of nopsome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that wente wth them, neyther melted they the fyre, whiche elles melteth lyghtly. In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (O Lord) and broughte the to honour. thou haste not dyspyssed them but alwaye, and in all places hast y<sup>e</sup> stande by them.

The ende of the booke of wysdome.

The booke of Jesus, the sonne of Sirach/which is called in Latin Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Jesus the sonne of Sirach vnto his booke.

Any and greates men haue declared wysdome vnto vs oute of the lawe, oute of the Prophetes and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it: and reade it, shoulde not onelye them selues be wylle there thorowe, but serue other also wth teachynge and wyrtynge.

After that my graundefather Jesus had geuen dyligence laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, and other bookes that were lefte vs of oure fathers, & had well excercysed him selfe therein he purposed also to wyrtie some thyng of wysdome and good maners, to the intent that they which were wyllynge to learne & to be wylle myght haue the more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacion.

Wherefore, I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to read it wth diligence, & to take it in good wth though oute wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng y<sup>e</sup> is wyrtten in y<sup>e</sup> hebreue toung, soundeth not so wel when it is translated into another spech. Not only this booke of myne, but also y<sup>e</sup> lawe, the Prophetes, & other bookes sounde far other wylle, then they do, when they are spoken in theyr owne language. Nowe in y<sup>e</sup> xxviii. yere when I came into Egypt in y<sup>e</sup> tyme of Ptolomey Euergetes: & contynued there al my lyfe, I gat liberte to rede & wyrtie many good thynges. Wherefore I thought it good & necessary, to bestowe my diligēce & traunple to interpret this booke. And consyderinge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this booke, & to byrge it vnto lyghte y<sup>e</sup> the straungers also whiche are disposed to learne, myghte apply them selues vnto good maners & lyue accordynge to y<sup>e</sup> lawe of the Lorde.

There is one: euen the hygheste, the maker of all thynges, the Almyghty, the kyng of power (of whom men oughte to stande greatly in awe) wyche sitteth vpon his throne beyng a God of domynyon. He hath created her thorow the holy ghoost he hath sene her, nombred her, and mesured her, he hath poued her out vpon all hys workes, and vpon all fleshe, accordynge to hys gyfte he geueth her rychely vnto them þe loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worshippe and triumph, gladnesse and a topfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a merie herte, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght Soddes scruple, that preserueth and iustifyeth the herte, & geueth myrth and gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde shalbe happy, & whan he hath nede of comfort, he shalbe blessed. To feare god is wisdom þe maketh rych, and byngeth al good wyth her. She filleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wisdom, and geueth plenteous peace and health. The feare of the Lorde dyspuncty oute spynne, for he þe is wythout feare cannot be made ryghteous, & hys wyf full boldenes is hys owne destruccyon. A payente man wyll suffer vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandynge wyll hyde hys wordes for a tyme, & many mens lippes shal speak of hys wisdom. In the treasures of wisdom is the declaracion of doctrine, but the sinner abhorreth the worshippe of God. Wher sonne þe thou desyre wisdom, kepe the commaundementes, & God shal geue þe vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wisdom & nectour, he hath pleasure in sayth & lounge mekenes, & he shal fyll the treasures therof. Be not obstinate & vnfartfall to the feate of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym wyth a double herte. Be not an ppeccate in the syghte of men, & take good hede what þe speakest. of herte, whych put not theyr truste in God, and therefore shall they not be defended of hym.
Alloo be vnto them that haue lost pacience, for laken the righte wayes, & are turned backe into froward wayes. What wyl they do whan the Lorde shall begynne to vpsset them?

They y feare the Lorde, kepe his commaunde-

The.iii. Chapter.

C To oure father and mother ought we to geue double honour, of the blessinge and curse of the father and mother. As mā ought oure eneymys to searche out the secretes of God.

A The chyldren of wylledome are a congregacyon of the ryghteous, & theyr exercyse is obedyence & loue. Breare me your father. O my deare childe)

* do thereafter that ye maye be safe * For the Lorde wyl haue the father honoured of the chyldre: & looke what a mother commaundeth her childe to do, he wyl haue it kept. Who so honoureth his father, his synnes shall be forgeuen hym. * & he that honoureth his mother is lyke one y gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne chyldren, & when he maketh his prayer he shall be herde. He y honoureth his father, shall haue a longe lyfe: & he that is obedyent for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth his father and mother, and doth them serupce, as it were vnto the Lorde hym selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in worde and in all pacience, that thou mayest haue goddes blessinge, and his blessynge shall abyde with the at the laste.

* The blessinge of the father buyldeth vp the houses of the chyldren, but the mothers curse rote th out the foundacyons. Reioyse not when thy father is rejoyced, for it is not honoure vnto the, but shame. For the worshyppe of amans father is his owne worshyppe, & where the father is wythout honoure, it is the dysonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in his age, & greue hym not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandynge faile, haue pacience wyth hym, & despyse hym not in thy strength. For the good dede y thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgotten, & whan y thy selfe wantest it shall be rewarded the ( & for thy motheres offence thou shalt be recompensed wyth good, yee, it shall be founded for y in ryghteousnes) & in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remembred. thy synnes also shall melte awaye, lyke as the yse in the sayre warme wetter.

He that forsaketh his father shall come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne persourne thy wordes wyth louynge mekenesse, so shalt thou be beloved aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauour in the syghte of God. For grete power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

* Secke not oute the thynges that are aboue thy capacitye, & searche not the grounde of such thynges as are to myghty for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the, thyncke vpon that alwaye, & be not curyous in manye of his workes. For it is not nedefull for the to se with thyne eyes the thynges that are secreete. Make not thou to much searche in superfluous thynges, and be not curyous in manye of his workes. For manye thynges are shewed vnto the alreadye, whyche be aboue the capacitye of men. The medlynge wyth suche hath beggled many a man, and tangled theyr wyttes in vanyte. Nowe he that loueth patell shall perceyue therein.

An harde herte shall feare euell at the laste (and he that loueth daunger, shall perceyue therein) an hert that goeth two wayes, shall not profpere: and he that is frowarde of herte wyl euer be worse and worse. A wycked herte shall be laden wyth sorowes, & the vngodlye spinner wyl beape one synne vpon another. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of syn-ne shall be rooted oute in them, and not knowen.
The herte of hym y hath vnderstandynge shall perceau he thynges, & a good eare wyl gladly herken vnto wylledome. An herte y is wyse & hath vnderstandynge, wyl abstayne from syn-and encrease in the wordes of ryghteousnes.
Water quencheb burnynge fyre, & mercy reconyleth synners. God hath respecte vnto hym that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon him agaynst the tyme to come: so that when he falleth, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

B * Despuer hym that suffreth wronge from the hāde of the oppressour, and be not faynt her ted whan thou syttest in iudgement. Remember ful vnto the fatherles as a father, and be in stea de of an husbāde vnto theyr mother: so shalt thou be as an obedyente sonne of the hyst. & he shall loue the more then thy mother doth. Wisedome bzyeth lyfe into her chyldren, receaueth them that seke her & wyl go before them in the waye of ryghteousnes. He y loueth her, loneth lyfe & they that seke her dyligentely, shal haue great ioy. They that kepe her, shal haue the herptage of lyfe for where she entreth in, there is the bles syng of God. They that honoure her, shal be the seruauntes of the holpe one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so greeueth eate vnto her, shall iudge the heathen, and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safelye.

C He that beleueth her, shal haue her in posses sion, and hys generacyon shall endure for whā he falleth she goeth wyth hym, and chooseth him amonge the best. Feare, drede, and temptacyon shall she bzyng vpon hym, and trye hym in her doctryne, till she haue proued hym in hys thou ghtes, that he comyt no synne vnto her. Then shall she stablyshe hym, bzyng the ryghte way vnto hym, make him a gladman, & wyl hym her secretes, & heape vpon hym the treasures of kno welege, vnderstandynge of ryghteousnes. But yf he goo wronge, she shall forsake hym, & geue hym ouer into the handes of hys enemye.

D My sonne, make muche of the tyme, eschue the thyng that is euell, and for thy lyfe shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bzyngeth synne, and there is a shame that bzy ngeth worshyp & fauoure. * Accept no personne after t, yne owne wyl, y thou be not consoan ded to thine owne decay. Be not ashamed of thy neyghboure in hys aduersitee, & kepe not backe thy counsell whan it maye do good neyther yf de thy wylsome in her betwyl. For in the tong is wylsome knowen, so is vnderstanding know lege and learnynge in the talkynge of the wylse and stedfastnesse in the workes of righteousnes. In no wylse speake agaynst the worde of truth but be ashamed of the lyes of tynne owne igno rance. Shame not to confesse thyne erroure, & submyt not thy selfe vnto every man because of synne. Wythstande not the face of the myghtye and stryue thou not agaynst the streame. But for ryghteousnesse take payne with al thy soule and for the truth stryue thou vnto death. & God shall fyghte for the agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not hasty in thy tounge, neyther slacke and neglygente in thy workes. Be not as a Lyon in thine owne house, destroyng the howbolde folkes, and oppressing them that are vnder the * Let not thyne hande be stretched oute to recea ue, and shutte whan thou shouldest geue.

E The v. Chapter.

F In tynchele maye we not put any confidence, the vengeance of God shal be feared and reseruaunce maye we not fowe.

Huste not vnto thy riches, & saye not tushe, I haue ynough for my lyfe. For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and temptation. Followe not the luste of thyne owne harte in thy strength, and saye not tushe, howe haue I had strength, or who wyl bzyng me vnder because of my workes. For doubteles God shall aduenge it. And saye not I haue syn ned, and what euell hath happened me: For the Almyghtye is a pacpente rewarder.

* Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therefore wythoute feare, neyther heape one sin ne vpon another. And saye not tushe, the mer cy of the Lord is greates, he shal forgene me my synnes, be thyneuer so many. For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wyth, from hym also, & his indygnacyon cometh downe vpon synners.

Make no taryng to turne vnto the Lord & put not of from daye to daye for suddenlye shal hys wyth come, & in the tyme of vengeance he shall destroy the. * Trust not in wycked ryches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punysh mente and wyth. Be not carped aboute to che ry wynde & go not into euery waye, for so doth the synner that hath a double tong. Stand fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandynge, abyde by the worde, & folowe the worde of peace & ryghteousnes. Be gentle to he are the worde of God, that thou mayest vnder stande it, and make a true answer wyth wyl dome. * Be swyfte to heare but slowe and pac yent in geuynge answer. If thou haste vndersta dyng, shap thy neyghboure an answer: If no, laye thy hand vpon thy mouth lest thou be trap ped in an vndercrete worde, & so confounded ho noure and worshyp is in a mans wylse talkynge but the tonge of the vndercrete is owne destru cyō. * Be not a prync accuser as long as thou ly uell, and vlc ro slaunder wyth thy tonge. For shame and sorowe goeth ouer the chese, and an euell name ouer hym that is double tonged but he that is a prync accuser of other men, shal be hated, enuyd and confounded. Be that thou in thy lyfe the small and greates a lyke.

Not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frendes sake, for who so is euell, shal be the heye of rebuke and disho noure, & whosoever brareth enuye and a double tonge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuyce of thyne owne vnder standynge, leaste thy strength be hūte by too lyshenesse, and leaste thy leanes wyther, and thy feynte be destroyed, and so thou belesse as a drye tree in the whyldernes. For a wycked soule destroyeth hym that hath it, maketh hym to be laughed to scoone of hys enemyes, (and bzyngeth hym to the porcyon of the vngodlye.) * A swete worde, multiplyeth frendes, and pa cyfyeth them threbe at vartyaunce, and a thank full tonge wyl be plentiful in a good man. ¶ We must for sake euill, and yet not indite our selues. For he becometh of the wyle toward his wyle, as a frende by a chylde, by a seruante, his father and mother the prelate, &c.

Make no labour to be made a Judge excepte it were so, that thou couldest myghtely put downe wyckednes for yf thou shouldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest sayle in grynge sentence. * Frende not in the multitude of the cytye, & put not thy selfe amonge the people. * Synde not two synnes together, for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpurged. Saye not: tushe, God wyll looke vpon the multitude of my oblacions, and whan I offer to the hygheste God he wyll accepte it.

Be not saynte herted whan thou makeste thy prayer, neyther slacke in geuyng of almes. Laugh no man to scorne in the beuanelle of his soule, for God, whych seyth all thynges, is he that can brynge downe, and set vp agayne. * Accepte not leasynge agaynst thy brother, neyther do the same agaynst thy frende. Take not to make any maner of lye, for the custemes therof are not good. Make not manye wordes when thou arte amonge the elders, & when y prayest, make not much bal lye. * Let no laborious work be tedious vnto the, neyther the busbādny which the Almyghtye hath created. Make not thy boast in the multitude of thy wyckednes, but humble thy selfe euen from thyne herte: and remember that the wyatbe shall not be longe in taryng and that the vengeance of the fleshe of the vngodlye is a very fyre and woynne. Seue not ouer thy frende for any good, nor thy saythfull brother for the beste golde.

Departe not from a dyscrete and good woman, that is fallen vnto the for thy porcyon in the feare of the Lord, for the gyfte of her honesty is aboue golde. * Where as thy seruante worketh truly, intreate hym not euill, nor the byrlyng that is saythfull vnto the. Loue a dyscret seruant as thyne owne soule: defraud hym not of his lybertye, neyther leaue hym a poore man. * If thou haue catel, loke wel to them: & yf they be for thy prospe, kepe them. * If thou haue sonnes, byngge them vp in nourtour & learning & holde them in awe from the pouthe vp. A saythfull frende hath no ycare, the weyghte of golde & siluer is not to be compared to the goodness of his sayth. My sonne, receaue doctryne from thy pouthe vp, so shalt thou synde wyse dome tyll thou be olde. Go to her as one that pioweth and soweth, and wayte paciently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes ryght soone. Howe erer adynge Marye is wyse dome to vnelearned men: an vntedfast bodye wyll not remayne in her. ## The .x. Chapter.

¶ Of kynge and Judges. Pryde and couetousnes are to be abhorred. Labour is prayse.

A pseye iudge wyl order hys people wyth dyscrecion: and where a man of vnderstādyng beareth rule, ther goeth it well. * As þe iudge of the people is hym selfe, even so are hys of fpcers and loke what maner of man the ruler of the ctye is, such are they that dwell therein also.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God (and all iniquyte of the people is to be abhorred) * whan hys tyme is, he shall set a profitable ruler vpo it. In the hand of God is the power of man. * vpon the scribes shall be laye hys honoure. * Remember no wronge of thy neygbour, & medle not thou wyth no vnyghteous woꝛkes. Pryde is hateful before God & man, & all wyckednes of the heathē is to be abhorred.

* Because of vnyghteous dealynge, wronge-blasphemies, dyuers dyscretes, a realme shall be translated from one people to another.

There is nothing worse the a couetous mā. Why art þe proude, O thou earth & ashes: Ther is not a moare wycked thyng, then to loue moꝛte. And why: such one hath hys soule to sell, yet is he but fylthye dounge whyle he lyueth.

And though the dyspencion shewe hys helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusyon it goeth after thys maner, to dape a kynge, to moꝛowe deede. For whan a man dyeth, he is the helye of serpentes, beastes, and wormes. The begynnyng of mannes pryde, is to fall awaye from God. And why: hys herte is gone from hys maker, for Pryde is the oꝛygyall of all synne. Who so taketh holde thereof, shalbe fylled with cursynge, and at the laste it shall ouerthrowe hym. Therefore hath the Lorde broughte the congregacions of the wycked to dyshonoure, and destroyed them to the ende.

* God hath destroyed the seates of proude prynces, & set vp the meke in thep stede. God hath wethered the cotes of the proude heathē & planted the lowly amonge them. * God hath ouerthrowen the landes of the heathen, and destroyed them vnto the grounde. He hath caused them to wether away, he hath broughte them to naughte, & made the memorial of them to cease from oute of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, & lefte the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for man, nether woꝛthfulnes for mens chyldre. The seed of men that feare God, shalbe brought to honoure, but the seed whych transgresseth the commaundementes of the Lorde shalbe shamed. He that is the ruler amonge bꝛethren, is holden in honoure amonge them, and he that regardeth suche as feare the Lorde. The glory of the ryche of the honourable, and of the poꝛe is the feare of God.

Dyspysse not thou the lust poꝛe man, and magnifye not the ryche vngodly. Erate is the iudge and myghtie in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. * Into the seruante that is discrete, shall the free do seruice. * He that is wysse and wel nourtured, wyl not grudge when he is reformed, and an ignoraunte bodie shall not come to honoure. Be not proude to do thy woꝛke, and dyspayre not in þe tyme of aduersyte. * Better is he that laboureth and hath plenteousnesse of all thynges, then he that is gorgeous, and wanteth breade.

¶ Up sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her, her due honour. Who shall iustifye hym þe synneth agaynst hym selfe: Who wyl honour hym, þe dyshonoureth hys owne soule. The poꝛe is honoured for hys fapthfulnes & truthe but the ryche is had in reputaciō because of his good des. He that oꝛdꝛeth hym selfe honestly in pouertye, howe much moꝛe shall he behaue hym selfe honestly in ryches. And who so oꝛdꝛeth hym selfe vnhonestly in ryches, howe much moꝛe shall he behaue hym selfe vnhonestly in pouertye.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ The prayse of humylyte. After the outwarde appareance oughte we not to iudge. Of heauy and rashe iudgemente. The ryche is not without offence. All thynges come of God. All men are not to be broughte into thyne house.

Whe wysedome of hym þe is brought lowe, shall lyfte vp hys brade and shal make hym to stꝛ among great men. Commerde not thou a man in hys beuetye, nether dyspysse a man in hys bitter apperance. The we is but a small beast amonge the foules, yet is her frute exceedinge swete. Be not proude of thy rayment, & exalte not thy selfe in the dape of thy honoure for the woꝛkes of the hꝛst only are wonderful, pea, glorious, secrete, & vknown are hys woꝛkes. Many tirautes haue bene fayne to sit downe vpo the erth, & the vnluckely hath worn the crowne. Many myghty me haue ben broughte lowe, & the honourable haue bene deliuered into other mens hādes. * Cōdempe no man before þe haue tryed out the matter, and whan thou hast made inquisition, then reforme ryghteously. * Geue no sentence, before thou hast hard the cause, but fyrste let me tell oute thep tales.

Streue not for a matter that toucheth not thy selfe, & stande not in the iudgemente of synners. Up sonne medle not wyth many matters * and if thou wylte be ryche, thou shalt not get it: & though þe runnest thy way afore, yet shalt thou not escape. * There is some mā þe labourch & the moꝛe he werpeth hym selfe, the lesse he hath. Agayne, some man is slouthfull, hath the nede of helpe: wanteth strengthe, and hath greute pouertye, and Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good seteth hym vp from hys lowe estate, * and lyfseth vp hys heade, so that manye men maruell at hym, and geue honoure vnto God.

* Prosperyte & aduersite, lyfe and deathe, pouer & te and rycheesse come: all of the Lorde. Wysedome & nourtoure, and knowlege of the lawe, are wyth

God,

God, lone and the wayes of good are wpth him Erroure and darckenesse are made for synners (and they that exalte them selues in euell, were olde in euell.) The gyfte of God remayneth for the ryghteous, and the good wyll shall geue prosperyte for ever. Some man is ryche by ly-upnge nngardly, and that is hys porcyon of his rewarde, in that he sayeth *nowe I haue gotten reyse, and nowe wyll I eate and dryncke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he consydereth not, that the tyme draweth nye (and death approcheth) that he muste leaue all these thyn-ges vnto other men, and dye him selfe. Stande thou faste in thy couenaunte, and exerceyse thy selfe therein, and remayne in the worcke vnto thy age. Cōtynue not in the workes of sinners but put thy trust in God, & byde in thyne estate For it is but an easie thynge in the syght of God to make a poore man ryche, and p̄soderlye. The blessing of God hasteth to the rewarde of p̄s ghteous, & maketh hys frutes sone to flourish & prospere. Saye not what helpeth it me: & what shal I haue the while? Agayne, say not: I haue p̄nongh, howe can I wante? *When thou arte in wellfare, forget not aduersyte, & whē it goeth not wel wpth the, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a small thynge vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery mā accordyng to hys wayes. The aduersyte of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure: and when a man dyeth, hys workes are dyscouered Praise no bodye before hys death, for a man shal be known in hys chyldren.

E Brynge not euerye man into thyne house, for the dysceatful layeth wayte dyuersly. Lyke as a partych in a maunde, so is the herte of the proude: & like as a spyte that loketh vpon the fal of hys neyghboure. For he turneth good vnto euell, and slaundereth the chosen. Of one sparke is made a great fyre (and of one dysceatfull mā is bloude increased) and an vngodlye man lay-eth wayte for bloude. Beware of the dysceatful for he p̄magyneth wycked thynges, to brynge the into a perpetuall shame. If thou takest an aleaunt vnto the, he shal destroye the in vniquet nes, and dryue the from thyne owne wayes.

The. xii. Chapter.

Unto whom we oughte to do good, & enemies oughte to be eschued.

When thou wylte do good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefi-tes. *Do good vnto the righteous and thou shalt fynde great reward though not of hym, yet (no doubte) the Lorde hym selfe shal rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupied in euell & geueth no almes, for the byest hateth the synners and hath mercye vpon them that shewe p̄ worthys of repentance. Geue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receaue not a synner. As for p̄ vngodlye and synners, he shall recompence vengeance vnto them, & kepe them to the daye of wrath Geue thou vnto p̄ good, and receaue not the synner: do well vnto hym that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodlye. Let not the breade be geuen hym, p̄ he be not myghty then thy selfe therein. For so shalt thou receaue twofold as much euell, in all the good that thou doest vnto hym.

 And why? the byggest hateth synners, and shal rewarde vengeance vnto the vngodlye. In p̄s p̄p̄te, a frende shal not be knowne & in aduersyte an enemye shal not be hys. For when a mā is in wealt, it greucth hys enemyes but in he-uynes & trouble a man shal knowe hys frende.
 Trust neuer thyne enemye, for lyke as a p̄son rusteth, so doth hys wyckednes. And though he make muche crouchyng & knelyng, yet kepe well thy mynde and beware of hym. Set hym not by the net her let hym lye at thy ryghte hāde lest he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy rowme & seke thy seat, & so thou at the last remember my wordes, and be pycked at my sayynges.

*Bynd not two synners together, for there shal not one be vnprysshed. Who wyl haue p̄s tyte of the charmer, that is stunged of the serpent or of all suche as come nye the beastes? Euen so is it wpth hym p̄ kepe company wpth a wycked man, & lappeth hym selfe in his synnes. For a season wyl be hyde wpth the, but yf thou com-ble, he targeth not. *An enemye is swete in hys lippes, he cā make many good wordes & speake many good thynges. See, he cā weape with his eyes, but in hys herte he p̄magyneth howe to throwe the into the pyt. & yf he make synd oportunyte, he wyl not be satisfyed wpth bloude.
 If aduersyte come vpo the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst and though he pretend to do the helpe, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake hys heade, and clappe hys bandes ouer the for verpe gladnesse: and while he maketh manye wordes, he shal dysguise hys countenance.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The companyes of the proude & of the viche are to be eschued. The ioue of God, lyke no companye wpth the p̄s lyke.

Who so toucheth pytch, shal be fyed wpthall: and he that is samplary wpth the proude, shal clothe hym selfe wpth pyre. He taketh a burthen vpo hym, that accompanieth a more honorable man than him selfe. Therefore kepe no samplaryte wpth one p̄ is rycher then thy selfe. Howe agre the ketell and the pot to gether: for yf the one be smitten agaynst the other it shal be broken. The ryche dealeth vnghtouslye, and threateneth wpth all, but the poore beyng oppressed and wrongeouslye dealt wth all, suffereth scarcenesse, and geueth sayre wodes. If thou be for hys profyte, he bleseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As longe as thou haste anye thynge of thyne owne he shal be a good felowe wpth the: yea, he shal make the a bare man, and not be loyde for the.

If he haue nede of the, he shal defraude the and wpth a p̄uise moke shal he put the in an hoope, and geue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shal he shame the in hys meate, vntyl he haue syp̄te the cleane vpon twyle or thyrse, and at the laste shal he lau-ghe the to scoyne. Afterwarde, when he seyth

See iii that thou that thou haste nothynge, he shall forsake the, & make hys heade at the (Submyt thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande)

Beware that thou be not dysceaued and broughte downe in thy synplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wysedome: lestke when thou arte broughte lowe, thou be dysceaued thowowe foolshenes. If thou be called of a myghty mā, as sente thy selfe, so that he cal the to hym. the more ofte. Breaue not thou vnto hym, p̄ thou be not oute: but go not p̄ farre of, lest he forget p̄. Althowoe not thy selfe from hys speach, but helpe not hys many wordes. For wyth muche comunycacyō shal he tempte the, & (wyth a pre-up mock) shal he questiō the of thy secretes. The vnnecyptull mynde of his shal make the thy wordes, he shal not spare to do p̄ hurt, & to put the in pyro. Beware and take good hede to thy selfe, for p̄ walkest in parell of thy ouertrowinge.

Nowe when p̄ hearest hys wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, & call vpo hym in thy nede. Euerie beaste loueth hys lyke, euen so let euerie man loue hys neygbboure. Al the wyll resort to the p̄ lyke, and euerie man wyll kepe companye wyth suche as he is hym selfe.

But as the wolfe agreeth wyth the lambe, so doth the vngodly wyth the ryghteous. What felloweshyppe shulde an holpe man haue wyth a dogge? howe can the ryche & the poore agre together? The wyld Ass is the lyon's praye in p̄ wyldernesse, euen so are poore men p̄ meat of the ryche. Lyke as the proude maye not away wyth lowlynes, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the poore. If a ryche man fall, hys frendes let hym vp agayne: but when the poore falleth, hys acquaintaunce forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an erroure, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proud wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punyshed: yea though he speake wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speaketh, euerie mā holdeth hys tonge & looke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What fellowe is this? yf he do amysse, they shall destrope hym. Ryches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscience, and pouerte is a wycked thynge in the mouthe of the vngodlye: The herte of a man chaungeth hys countenaunce, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenaunce is a token of a good herte, for elles it is an hearde thynge to knowe the thoughte.

The xliii. Chapter.

The offence of the tongue. Man is but a vayne thynge. Happye is he that contynueth in wysedome.

Blessed is the man * p̄ hath not fallen w̄ the word of his mouth & is not prycked wyth the conscience of synne. Happye is he p̄ hath no heynyes in hys mynde, and is not fallen from hys hope. It becommeth not a couetous man & a nygarde to be ryche: & what shulde a nygarde do w̄ gold? He p̄ wyth all hys carefulnes heapeth together vnryghtously, gathereth for other folkes. and another mā shall make good chere wyth hys goodes. He p̄ is wycked vnto hym selfe, howe shuld he be good vnto other mē? howe can such one haue any pleasure of hys goodes: There is nothynge worse, then when one dysfaucteth hym selfe & this is a rewarde of his wyckednes. Yf he do any good he doth it not knowyng therof, ad agaynst hys wyll, & at the laste he declareth hys vngreacyousnes. A nygarde hath a wycked eye he turneth away his face, & dyspseth hys owne soule. A couetous mā's eye hath neuer ynough in the porcyō of wyckednesse, vntill the tyme p̄ he wyther awaye, & hath loste hys owne soule.

A wicked eye spareth bread, & there is scarcenes vpo hys table. Wyfōne do good to thy selfe of p̄ thou hast, & geue the Lorde hys due offerynges. Remember that death tarpyeth not, and howe p̄ the cōgnant of p̄ graue is shewed vnto p̄. for p̄ cōt. want of this worlde shal dye the death. Do good vnto thy frend before p̄ dye, & accordyng to thy abelty reach out thyne hande & geue vnto the poore. Be not dyspaynted of p̄ good day & let not p̄ porcyō of p̄ good day ouerpass. Shalt p̄ not leaue thy trasaris & labours vnto other men? In the deuydng of the heretage geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Alowke p̄ ryghtously before thy death, for in the hell there is no rate to fynde. All flesh shal fade & wape like grasse, & lyke a flozshynge leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, some are cōste downe euen so is p̄ generacyō of all fleshe & bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is borne. All transitory thynges shal faile at p̄ laste, & the worke her therof shal go wythal. Euerie chosen worke shal be iustified, & p̄ medid wythal, shal haue honoure therein. Blessed is the man p̄ keper hym in wysedome, & receyseth hym selfe in vnderstandynge, & wyth dyscrecyō shal he thynke vpon the fore knowlege of God, whych cōsydereth the wapes of wysedome in hys hert hath vnderstandynge in hys secretes, goeth after her (as one p̄ seketh her oute) and contynueth in her wapes. He loketh in at her wyndowes, and harkeneth at her doores. He taketh hys rest besyde her house, and fasteneth hys stake in hys walles. He shal pytche hys tente vpe vnto her bande, & in hys tente shal good thynges rest for euer more. He shal set hys chyl dren vnder her cōueringe, and shal dwell vnder her braunches. Vnder her cōuerynge shal he be defended from the heate, and in her glorie shal he rest.

The xv. Chapter.

The goodnes that foloweth hym whiche feareth God. God reiecteth and casteth of the ignare. God is not the author of euil.

If feareth God, wyll do good and who so kepeth the law, shal optayne wysedome. As an honorable mother shal she mete hym and as a byrgyn shal she receaue hym. * Althowoe the breade of lyfe & vnderstandynge shal she fed hym, & geue hym the water of wholesome wysedome to drynke, yf he be constante in her, he shal not be not be moued and yf he holde hym selfe faste by her, he shall not come to confusyon. She shall bypnyge hym to honoure amonge hys neyghbours, and in the myddest of the congregacyō shall she open hys mouth. Wp̄th the spryte of wysedome and vnderstandynge shall she fyll hym & cloth hym wpth the garmente of glorie. She shall heape the treasure of myrth and ioye vpon hym, and geue hym an euertlastynge name to he tyme age. Foolyshe men wpll not take holde vpon her: but suche as haue vnderstandynge, wpll mete her. (Foolyshe men shall not se her, for she is farre from pryde and dysceate. When that go aboute wpth lyes, wpll not remembre her: but men of truth shall be founde in her, and shall praysere euen vnto the beholdynge of God. Praise is not semely in the mouth of the vngodlye, for he is not sente of the Lorde. For of God cometh wysedome, & the prayse shall stande by the wysedome of God, & shall be plenteous in a fapthfull mouth, and the Lorde shall geue her vnto hym.

Saye not thou, it is the Lordes faute that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thyng that God hateth. Say not thou he hath caused me to do wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodly. God hateth all abhomyracyn of errour and they yf feare God wpll loue none such. God made man from the begynnynge & leste hym in the hande of hys counsell. He gaue hys commaundementes & preceptes yf yf wpll obserue the commaundementes, & kepe acceptable fapthfullnes for euer, they shall preserue yf. * He hath set water & fyre before the, reach oute thyne hande vnto whych yf wpll. Before man is lyfe & death good & euell loke what him lyketh. Qualbe geue him. For the wysedome of God is great & myghty in powr & beholdeth all men continuallye. The eyes of the Lorde are vpon them that feare hym & he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodlye: neyther hath he geuen any man space to synne.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Of vngodly and wicked chyliden. No man can bode hym selfe from God. As yf he saye on the receyvinge of his Reuccyon.

Delyte not thou in the multitude of vngodlye chyliden, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Truste not yf to theyr lyfe, & regard not theyr labours for one sonne that feareth God, is better, then a thousande vngodlye. And better is it for a man to dye wpth out chyliden, then to leaue behynde hym suche chyliden as are vngodlye. For yf one that hath vnderstandynge, make a whole cypre be vphol den, but though the vngodlye be many, yet shall it be wasted thorow them. Many such thynges hath myne eye sene & greater thynges then these have I hearde w myne eares. * In the congregacyō of yf vngodlye shall a fyre burne, & amonge vnfapthful people shall the wrath be kyndled.

* The olde gyauntes optayned no grace for theyr synnes, whych were destroyed, trustynge to theyr owne strenght. Nether spared he the amonge whom Lot & wherch was a * straunger ger, but smote them & abhorred them because of yf pryde of theyr wordes. He had no ppyte vpon them, but destroyed all the people, that were so fronte in synne. * And for so much as he ouer sawe not the fyre hundredth thousande, that gathered them selues together in the hardnesse of theyr herte it were meruell yf one bepryge hardnecked, shulde be free. * For merce and wrath is wpth hym: he is bothe myghty to forgene and to powre oute dyspleasure. Lyke as hys merce is grete, euen so is hys punyshement also, he iudgeth a man accordynge to hys workes. The vngodlye shall not escape in hys spowle, and the longe pacence of hym that sheweth merce, shall not byde behynde. Al merce shall make place vnto eueryman accordynge to the worthynes of his workes, and after the vnderstandynge of yf & pylgrymage.

Saye no, thou I wpll hyde my selfe from God for who wpll thyncke vpon me from aboue I shall not be knowen in so grete an heape of people, for what is my soule amonge so many creatures? Beholde, the heauen, yee, the heauen of heauens, yf depe, the earth, and all yf therin is shall be moued at hys presence, the mountaynes, yf hylls and the foundacyons of the earth shall shake for feare, whē God visytereth them. These thynges dorsh no herte vnderstande, but he vnderstandeth euery hert, & who vnderstandeth his wapes? Roman seyth his stormes, & the mooste part of his workes are secret. Who wpll declare the workes of hys cyghteousnes? Or who shall be able to abide them? For yf couenaunt is farre from some, & tryng oute of men is the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon soche thynges: but an vnwyse and erronous man casteth yf mynde vpon foolyshe thynges.

My sonne, hearken thou vnto me, and learne vnderstandynge, & marke my wordes wpth thyne herte, I wpll geue the a sure doctryne, and playnely shall I instruct the (marke my wordes then in thyne hert for in righteousnes of yf sprec do I speake of yf wonders yf God hath thewed among hys workes from yf begynnynge. And in trath do I shewe the knowlege of hym. God hath set his workes in good order from the begynnynge & part of them both be sundred from yf other. He hath garnished his workes from euery laking, & theyr begynnynge, accordig to the generacyons. None of them byndred another, nether was any of them dysobedyent vnto hys wordes. After this God looked vpon the earth and fylled it wpth hys goodes. Wp̄th that manner of lypynge beastes hath he couered the groude, & theyr all shall be turned vnto earth agayne.

he had the domynion of all the beastes and fou hym selfe, and gaue them dyscrecyon and touge eyes, and eares and a hert, to vnderstande, and fylled them wyth instruccyon & vnderstandyng he created for them also the knowlege of the spete, fylled theyr hertes wyth vnderstandyng and shewed them good and euell. he set his eye vpon theyr hertes, declarynge vnto them his eyes, and theyr eares heard the maner of his voyce. And he sayde vnto them: beware of all vnrightheous thynges he gaue every man also a commaundement concernyng his neyghbour Theyr wayes are euer before him, and are not from his eyes: he hath set a ruler vpon eue ry people, & but Israell is the Lordes porcyon.

All theyr workes are as the sunne in the syght of God, and his eyes are alwaye lokyng vpon theyr wayes. All theyr vnrightheousnesse are manifeste vnto hym, and all theyr wycked nesse are open in his syghte.

* The mercede that a man sheweth is as it were a purse wyth him, and the grace that is ge uen to a man preserveth hym as the apple of an eye. * At the laste shal he awake, and rewarde every man vpon his heade, & shal turne them to gether into the nethermoste partes of the earth * But vnto them that will repente he hath ge uen the waye of ryghteousnes. As for such as be wake, he comforteth them, suffereth them, & sendeth them the porcyon of the verite. * Turne then vnto the Lorde: forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lorde, do the lesse offence, turne agayne vnto the Lorde, forsake thyne vn ryghteousnes, be an vtter enemye to abhomy nacyon, learne to knowe his ryghteousnes and iud gementes of God, stande in the porcyon that is set forth for the and in the prayer of the moste hygh God. Go in the porcyon of the holy worl de wch as he luyng & geue thakes vnto god * Who wyll prayse the Lorde in the heyl: Abide not thou in the erroure of the vngodlye, but geue hym thankes before death. As for the deed, thankfulness perseyeth from hym as no thyng. Geue thou thankes in thy lyfe: yea, whyle thou arte luyng, and whole shalte þ geue thankes, and prayse God, and reioyce in his mercede. * Howe greate is the lounge kyndnesse of the Lorde, and his mercifull good nesse vnto such as turne vnto hym. For al thyng ges, maye not be in man: and why? the sonne of man is not immortal and he hath pleasur in the vanite of wyckednes. What is more cleare the the Sunne? Yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wycked then the thyng that fleshe and bloude hath ymagined: and that same shalbe reproveth The Lorde seyth the power of the hygh heauē and all are but rary and alhes.

The xxvi. Chapter.

The mercelous workes of God, the myghte and myghte of man. Agayne God boughte we not to complai ne. þeape must we continually.

That lyueth for evermoore, * A made al thynges together. God onely is ryghteous, and remap neth a vycorpyous kyng for e uer. * Who shalbe able to expre se the workes of him? Who wyl seke oute the grounde of his no ble actes: Who shal declare the power of his greatestes? Or who wyl take vpon hym to tell oute his mercy: As for the wonderous workes of the Lorde, there maye nothyng be taken fro them, nothyng maye be put vnto them, nethe maye the grounde of them be founde oute. But when a man hath done his best, he muste begyn agayne: and when he thynketh to come to an en de, he muste go agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worth? What good, or euell can he do? * If the nombre of a mans dayes be almoste an hundred yere, it is much.

Lyke as droppes of rayne are vnto the see and as a grauell stoone is in comparyson of the sande: so are these fewe yeres to the dayes e uerlastynge. Therefore is the Lorde pacyente w them, and poureth out his mercede vpon them. he sawe and perceaved the thoughtes and yma gnacyons of theyr herte, that they were euell, therefore heaped he vpon his mercy full goodnesse vpon them, and shewed them the waye of rygh teousnes. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neyghbour: but the mercy of God is vpon al fleshe. he chasteneth, he teacheth and nur tureth: yee, even as a shepherde turneth agay ne his flocke, so doth he al them that receaue cha stenyng, nourtur & doctryne. * Mercifull is he vnto them, & stande in awe of his iudgementes

My sonne, when thou doest good, make no grudgyng at it & what soever thou givest, spea ke no dyscomfutable wordes. Shew not the dewe coole the hete: even so is a word better the a gyfte. * Is not a frendlye word a good honest gyfte: but a gracious man giveth them bothe.
* A foole shall caste a man in the teeth, and that roughly, and a gyfte of the hygarde putteth out the eyes. Set thy ryghteousnes before thou come to iudgemente. Learne before thou speake, and go to physyke or euer thou be sycke. * examen iudge thy selfe, before the iudgemente come, ad so shalte thou fynde grace in the syghte of God.
Humble thy selfe before thou be sycke, and in ty my of thy deafele shewe thy conuersacyon.

* Let not to praye alwaye, & stande not in fear to be reformed vnto death, for the rewar de of God endureth for euer. Before thou pray est, prepare thy soule, and be not as one þ temp pon the tyme of pouertye and scarcenelle.

D From the mornynge vntyll the evenynge the tyme is chaunged, and all suche thynges are done in the syghte of God. A wyle man feareth God in all thynges, and in þe dayes of trespasse he kepeth hym selfe from synne. A dyscrete man hath pleasure in wysedome, and he þe fyndeth her, maketh much of her. They þe haue had vnderstandynge, haue deale wylle in wordes, haue vnderstande the truth and ryghteousnes, & haue soughte out wyle sentences and fudgements. * For we not thynges, but turne þe from thyne owne wylle. For if thou geuiste thy soule þe despises it, that make thyne enemyes to laughe the to scorne. Take not thy pleasure in greare voluptuolnes, & medle not to much wylle. Make not to great chere of the thyng that thou haste wonne by aduantage, lest thou sale into pouertye, and haue nothyng in thy purse.

The. xix. Chapter.

Of wyse and whozome byng men to pouerte: in thy woordes must thou be dyscrete. The byfference of the wysedome of God and man, wherby thou mayeste knowe what is in man. Correction must be used wylle without anger.

A labourynge man that is geuen vnto dronkenesse shall not be ryche, and he that maketh not muche of small thynges, shall fall by lytle & lytle. * A yue and women make wyle men rennagates, & put men of vnderstandynge to reprofe, & he that companyeth aduocates shall become a wycked man. Mothes ad wormes shall haue hym to herytage, ver, he shall be set vp to a greate example, & his soule shall be rooted out of the nombre. * He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyght mynded, and doth agaynste hym selfe. * Whoso reioyseth in wyckednesse, shall be punyshed: he that hateth to be reformed, his lyfe shall be shortened, and he that ablozeth bablyng of wordes, quengeth wyckednesse. He that offendeth agaynste his owne soule, shall repent it, and he that reioyseth in wyckednesse, shall be punyshed.

Rehearse not a wycked and churlyshe woerde to wyle, and thou shalt not be hyndred. Seue thy secrettes neyther to frende nor foe, & yf thou haste offended, tell it not. For he shall berken vnto the and marke the, and when he fyndeth oportynyte, he shall hate the, and so shall he be alway about þe. * Yf thou hast heard a woerde agaynste thy neyghboure, let it be deed wythin the, and be sure þe shalt haue no harme thereby. A fooles trespaseth wyth a woerde, lyke as a woman þe is payned wyth bearynge of a chyld. Lyke as an arrowe shot in a dogges thygh, so is a woerde in a foolles hert. * Tel thy frende his faute lest he be ignorant, and saye: I haue not done it, or yf he haue spoken, that he do it nomore. Reproue thy neyghboure that he kepe his tounge, & yf he haue spoken, that he saye it nomore.

Tell thy neyghboure his faute, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and geue not credence to euery woerde. A man falleth sometyme wyth his tounge, but not wyth his wylle. * For what is he, that hath not offended in his tounge, geue thy neyghboure warnynge, before þe threaten hym, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is all wysedome, and he that is a ryghte wyle man, kepeth the lawe. As for the doctryne of wyckednesse, it is no wysedome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge, it is but wyckednes and abhominacion, and blasphemynge of wysedom. A simple man of small vnderstandynge, that feareth God, is better then one that hath much wysedome, & transgresseth the lawe of the hyghest. A craftye soile man can be wyle, but he is vnryghteous, & wyth gyftes he wasteth þe ope & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye and can duke wyth his head, and yet is he but a dysceauer wythin, he bydoth his face, & and dysguyseth it: and because he shulde not be known, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do the no harme, yet when he maye fynde oportynyte, he shall do some euell. A man maye be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandynge, maye be perceaued by the looke, of his countenaunce. * A mans garmente, laughter, & gopnge declareth what he is.

The. xx. Chapter.

Of correction and repentance. Of the gyfte of the wyle man, and of the foole, of syngre.

Some man reioyseth his neyghboure, but not in due season: Agayne, some man holdeth his tounge, and he is wyle and dyscrete. It is much better to geue warnynge and to reprove, then to beare euell wylle, for he þe knowlegeth hym selfe openly, shall be preserued from hurte and destruccyon. Lyke as when a gelded man thowwe desyre and luste desyleth a mayden, even so is it wyth hym that vseth violence and vnrighteousnes in the lawe. Howe good a thyng is it, a man that is reprovied to shewe openly his repentance, for so shalt thou escape wylfull synne.

Some man kepeth seylence, and is founde wyle, but he that is not ashamed, what he sayth is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tounge, because he hath not the vnderstandynge of the language, and some man kepeth seylence, waiting a conueniente tyme. * A wyle man wylle holde his tounge tyl he se oportynite, but a wanton ad vndyscrete bodie shall regarde no tyme. He þe vseth many wordes, shall hurte his owne soule, and he that taketh the auctorite vpon hym vnryghteously, shall be hated. Some man hath ofte tymes prosperite in wycked thynges. Agayne, some man getteth much, and hath harme & losse. There is some gyfte, that is nothyng worthe: Agayne, there is some gyfte, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fall for beynge to proude, and some cometh to worshyppe from lowe estate. Some man byeth muche for a lytle pryce, and muste paye for it seuen folde.

* A wyle man wyth his wordes maketh hym selfe to be loved, but the fauoure of foolles, shall be poured out. The gyfte of the vnwyle shall do the no good, for his eyes are senenfold. * He shall geue lytle, and saye he gaue much, he openeth neath hys mouth and cryeth oute, as it were one that cryeth oute wyne. To daye he lendeth, to morowe asketh he agayne and such a man is to be hated. The foole sayth I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yea, euē they that eate my breade, speake no good of me. Howe ofte, & of how many shal he be laughed to scorne? he taketh a more perillous fall by such wordes then yf he fel vpon the grounde: euen so shal the falles of the wycked men come hastely. In the mouth of hym that is vntaughte, are many vnconueniente and vnnete wordes. A wyse sentence shal not be allowed at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh not it in due season.

Some man spinneth not, because he hath not wherewithall, and in hys reaste he shal be stinged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule wpth shame, and for an unwyse bodys sake destroyeth he it, & wpth acceptyng of persons shal he vndo hym selfe. Some man promyseth hys frende a gyfte for very shame, and getteth an enemy of hym for nought. A lye is a wycked shame in a man yet shal it be euer in the mouth of the unwyse. A thefe is better, then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shal haue destruccyon to herpytage. The condycions of lyars are vnbonest, and theyr shame is euer wpth them.

A wyse man shal bypnyge hym selfe to honoure wpth hys wordes, & and he that hath vnderstandynge, shal be set by amonge greaue men. He that tyllteth hys lande shal encrease hys heape of corne: he that worketh ryghteousnes shal be exhalted, & he that pleaseth greaue men, shal cleape much euell. Rewardest and giffes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make hym dole, that he cannot tell men theyr fautes. Wysdome that is hyd, & treasure that is hooded vpon what profyte is in them both? Better is he that kepeth hys ignorance secreete, then a man that bydeth hys wysdome.

The xxi. Chapter.

Of the repentance of synne. Wher map we haue some be on synne, the holdenes of an heretike. The ende of synners, & of a foole and of the wyse man. Of hym that curseth the deuyll.

If sonne yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but praye for thy fore synnes that they maye be forgoen the fle from synne, euen as from a serpente: for yf thou comest to nye her, she wyl bite y. The teeth thereof are as the teethe of a Lyon, to slaye the soules of men. The wyckednesse of man is a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh such woundes that they cannot be healed.

Strype and wrongeous dealynge shal wast away a mans goodes, and thowre pryde a cyche house shal be broughte to noughte so the ryches of the proude shal be rooted oute. The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, ad cometh vnto the eares, and hys vengeance (or defence) shal come and y hastely. Who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly persone, but he y feareth God, wyl remembre hym selfe. A myghtye man is knowne asar of by hys tong: but he that hath vnderstandynge, perceaueth that he shal haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth hys house with other mens cost, is lyke one y gathereth stones in wynter. The congregaciō of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, their ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodlye is set wpth stones, but in theyr ende is hel, darkenesse, and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyl holde faste y vnderstandynge thereof, and the ende of the feare of God is wysdome and vnderstandynge. He that is not wyse, wyl not be taught in good but the unwyse man aboundeth in wyckednes: and where bytternesse is, there is no vnderstandynge. The knowlege of the wyse shal flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, and hys counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The herte of a foole is lyke a broken vessel he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandynge heareth a wyse worde, he shal comende it, and make much of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shal haue no pleasure therin, but caste it behynde hys backe. The talkynge of a foole is lyke an heape burthen by the waye but to heare a wyse man speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouth of the wyse and theyr shal ponder hys wordes in theyr hertes. A lyke as is a house y destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto to a foole. As for the knowlege of y vnwyse, it is but darcke wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters about hys fete, and lyke manacles vpon hys ryghte hande. A foole lyfeth vpon hys voyce w laughster, but a wyse man shal scarce laugh secretlye.

Learnynge is vnto a wyse man a Jewell of golde, and lyke an armelet vpon hys ryghte arme. A foolthe mans fote is soone in hys neyhoures house, but one that hath experyence, shal be a shamed at the persone of the myghtye.

A foole wyl pepe in at the wyndowe into the house, but he that is well nourtered, wyl stand wthoute. A foolthe man standeth hekenyng at the doze, but he that is wyse wyl be ashamed.

The lypes of the vnwyse wyl be tellynge foolthe thynges, but y wordes of such as haue vnderstandynge, shal be wayed in the balaunce. The hert of folles is in their mouth, but y mouth of y wyse is in theyr hert. When y vngodly curseth the blasphemers he curseth hys owne soule. A pryue accuser of other men shal defyle hys owne soule, & be hated of euery mā: (but he y kepeth hys tōge & is discrete, shal come to honour).

The xxii. Chapter.

Of the purgacion of the slouthfull. Of the foolthe sonne and daughter, we must haue dyscrepan holys and to whome we oughte to praye, of soe wynges vpon the deeb. A foole is not to be much talked wthal. A surper, and wynges to brake frenchespepe and ampte.

Slouthfull bodye is moulded of a store of claye, and euery man wyl speake to hys dyspraple. A slouthfull bodye is made of the dong of oxen, and euery one y toucheth hym must wth hys handes agayne. A mysertered sonne is the dysponoure of the father. A foolthe daugh daughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she y commeth to dyshonestye, bringeth her father in heynesse. A daughter that is past shame, dishonoureth both her father and her husband, the vngodly shal regard her, but they both shal dyspise her. The playng of musike is not mete wher heuyness is, euen so is the correccion and doctryne of wysedome euer vnplesaunte vnto fooles.

23 ¶ Who so teacheth a foole, is euē as one that gloweth a potcherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that beareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man oute of an heape slepe.

Who so telleth a foole of wyfedom, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one þat is a slepe. When he hath tolde his tale, he sayeth what is þat matter. When one dyeth, lamentacyon is made for hym because the lyghte fauyleth hym, euen so let men mourne ouer a foole for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lytle weapyng because of the deed, for he is come to rest, but the life of þat foole is worse then the death. Seuen dayes doo men mourne for him that is deed, but the lamen-tacyon ouer the unwyf and yngodlye schulde endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Talke not much wpyth a foole, and go not wpyth hym that hath no vnderstandynge. Beware of hym leeste it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalte not be defyled wpyth hys synne. Depart from hym, and thou shalte fynde reste and shalt not be drawen backe into his foolythenes. What is better then leade / And what shulde a foole be calledelles but leader. * Sande, salte, & a lumps of yron is easer to beare, then an vn-wylse, foolyshe, and vngodlye man. Lyke as the bande of woode bounde together in the founda-cyon of the house cannot be lownd, euen so is it wyt the hert that is stablyshed in the thought of counsell. The thoughte of the wylse shall neyther feare, nor be offended at any tyme.

 Lyke as a fayre plastered wal in a wynter house, and an hye buyldynge, maye not abyde the wynde and storme: euen so is a fooles herte a frayde in hys ymagynacon, he feareth at ene ey thynge, and cannot endure. (A wauerynge herte in the ymagynacon of a foole wpll not euer stand in awe, but he that abydeth in the comaundementes of God, wpll alway feare.) he that npppeth a mans eye byngeth forth teares and he that prycketh the herte, byngeth forth meanynge and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byders, frayeth them awayne: and he that blasphemeth hys frend, breaketh the frendeship though he thou dzeweiste a swearde at thy frende yet dyspar. enot for thou mayest come agayne to thy frend. If he speake sowerly, feare not for ye maye be agreed together agayne, excepte it be that thou blaspheme hym, dysdayne hym, open hys secretes and wounde hym traytorously him. If he knowlege not his synne, he maketh a double offence, & if he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde ryghteous: for his house shall be full of plagues.

* The wordes of the swearer byyngeth de-eth God graunt y it be not founde in the house of Jacob. But they that feare God, eschewe al fliche, and lye not welterynge in sinne. Also not thy mouth to vn honest and fylthy talkinge, for in it is þ worde of synne. Remember thy father & thy mother when thou arte set amonge great men. leeste God forget the in theyr syghte, & lest thou do tynge in thy custome suffer rebuke, and wythe not to haue bene borne & so curse the day of thy natypte. * The man that is accustomed wth the wordes of blasphemye, wpll neuer be reformed all the dayes of hys lyfe. To some twyse twyle is to much, but the thyrde bringeth wrath & destruction. An hote flame cannot be quenched: (euen lyke a burning fyre, tyl it haue swa-lowed vp some thyng: euen so an vnchaſt man hath no rest in hys flesh, tyl he haue kyndled a fire

Al breade is swete to an whoremonger, he wyl not leaue of tyl he haue hys purpose. A ma-that breaketh web locke, and regardeth not hys soule, but sayeth: * Tyl he, who seyth me: I am compassed aboute wyth darckenelle the walles couer me, no bodie seith me: whom nedde I to fe-are? The hyghest wyl not remembre my syn-nes. He vnderstandeth not that hys eyes se al thynges, for al such feare of men dyueth away the feare of God from hym for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and consydereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the sunne, behol-dyng all the wayes of men and the grounde of the deepe, and lokyng euen to mens hertes in secret places. The Lorde God knewe al thynges oz euer they were made, & after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon them al. * The same man shal be openly punished in the stretes of the cyyte: and shal be chased abroade lyke a ponge horse foale. and when he thynketh leaste vpon it, he shal be taken. Thus shal he be put to shame of every man, because he wolde not vnderstande the feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it go also wyth every wyfe, that leaueh her husbande, and getteth enherytaunce by a straunge marriage. * Fyfte she hath bene vnfaithful vnto the lawe of the hyghest. Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husbnde. Thyrde she hath playde the whore in aduouerie, and gotten her chylidren by an other man. She shal be brought oute of the congregacyon, and her chylidren shal be lokyd vpon. Her chylidren shal not take roote and as for frute, her braunches shal bring forth none. A shamefull reporte shal she leaue behynde her, and her dyshonoure shal not be put oute.
And they that remaine, shal knowe, that ther is no thyng better then the feare of God, and ther is no thyng sweter then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the Lorde. A great woorthyppe is it to folowe the Lorde, for longe lyfe shal be receaved of hym.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

A prayse of wisdoms forebryng forth of the mouth of God. Of her wordes and place where she dwelleth.

Wisdom shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the myddeste of hys people: In the congregacyons of the hyghest shal she open her mouth, and tryumphe in the beholdyng of hys power: In the myddest of her people shal she be exalted and wondred at in the holisfulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shal be commended, and amonge such as he blessed she shal be prayſed, and shal saye: I am come oute of the mouth of the hyghest, fyfte borne before all creatures. I caused the lyghte that shalpe not to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earthe as a cloude. My dwellyng is aboue in the heygth, and my seate is in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute the compasse of heauen and peaced the grounde of the deepe: I haue walked in the floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes. my domynion is in every people and in every nacyon, and wyth my power haue I troden do-wne the hertes of all, bothe hye and lowe.

In all these thynges also I soughte reste, and a dwellinge in some enherytaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a commaundemente: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellinge be in Jacob, and thyne enherytaunce in Israel, and roote thy selfe amonge my chosen. * I was created from the begynnynge, and before the worlde, and shal not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. * In the holpe habytacyon haue I ser-ued before hym, and so was I stablyshed in Sy-on. * In the holpe cyyte rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalem was my power: I tooke roote in an honorable people euen in the porcyon of the Lorde and in hys herptage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the Sanctes. I am set vp an hye lyke a Cedar vpon Lybanus, and as a Cypress tree, vpon the mounte hermon. I am exalted lyke as a Palme tree in Eades, and as a Roole plante in Jericho, As a sayre Olive tree in the felde, & am exalted lyke as a Plautayne tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yea, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Wyrr of the beste.

I haue made my dwellinges to smel as it were of Rosen, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Lybanus when it is not hewen do-wne, and my odoure is as the pure Balme.
As the Cerybrynte haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are the braunches of honoure and lounge sauoure. * As the vyne haue I broughte forth fruite of swete sauoure and my floures are the frute of honoure and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowlege, and of holye hope. * In me is all grace and lyfe and truth. In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue.

Come vnto me all ye that be despyous of me, and fyl your selues wyth my frutes. for my spete is sweter then honye, and so is myne enherytaunce more then the honye combe: the reuie-braunce of me endureth for euer moare. They that eate me, shal haue the moare hunger, and they that dryncke me, shal thyrste the moare.
Who so herkeneth vnto me shal not come to cofusyon and they that worke in me shal not offende. They that make me to be knowne, shal haue euertlastyng lyfe.

All these thynges are the booke of lyfe, the couenaunte of the hyghest, and the knowlege of the truth. * Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of ryghteousnesse for an herptage vnto the house of Jacob, and committed the promptes vnto Israel. * Out of Dauid hys seruaunt he ordered to rayse vp a mooste myghty kyng syteyng in the seate of honoure for euer moare.
* Hys fylleth wyth wysdome lyke as the floud of Physon, and as the floud of Epyrys, when the newe

D + Thys byngeth a plenteous vnderstandyng lyke Euphrates and fylleth it vp, as Joy dayne in the tyme of heruest. Thys maketh narture to breake forth as the lyght, and as the water Syhon in the barueste. The fyrste hath not known her perfectye, nomoate shall the laste seke oute the grounde of her. For her thoughte is fuller then the see, and her counsell is profounder then the greate deepe.

I wysedome haue cast oute floudes. I am as a great waterbrooke oute of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dox, and as a watercondite am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayde I wyl water the garden of my ponge plantes, and fyl the frute of my byrth: So my water broke became excedyng great, & my ryuer appro-ched vnto y see. For I make doctrine to be vnto al me as lyght: as y saye morning, & I shal make it to be euer y clearer. I wyl pearse thorow al y lower partes of the earth. I wyl looke vpon al such as be a slepe, and lyghten all them that put theyr truste in the Lorde. I shal yet powre oute doctryne, lyke as prophecie & leaue it vnto such as seke after wysedome, and theyr generacjōs shal I neuer fayle, vnto the hoipe enclastyng wylde. * Beholde howe that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely, but for all them that seke after the truthe.

The xxv. Chapter.

A Of thre thynges wyche pleasech God, and of thre wyche he hatech. Of nyne thynges that be to be suspecte: and of the fourth, chesely of the malice of a woman.

Thre thynges there are, y my sprete fauoureth, wyche be also allowed before God and men. * The vnyte of byrthrien: the loue of neyghboures. * a mā and wyfe that a gre well together.

Thre thynges there be wyche my soule ha-teth, & I vterly abhorre the life of them. A poze man that is proude. A ryche man that is a lyer, & an olde bodie that dotes, and is vncaste.

If thou haste gathered nothyng in thy youth, what wylte thou fynde the in thyne age.
Howe pleasaunte a thyng is it when graye-headed men are discrete, and when the elders ca-geue good counsell: Howe comelye a thyng is wysedome vnto aged men: pea, vnderstandin-ge and counsell is a glorifyng thyng. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experyence ad the feare of God is theyr worshippe.

There be nyne thynges, wyche I haue iudged in myne herte to be happye, and the tenth wyl I tell forth vnto men wyth my tounge. A man that whyle he lyueth, hath lope of hys chy-dren, and seyth the fall of hys enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth wyth an houswyfe of vnderstandynge, & that hath not fallen wyth his tong, and that hath not bene sayne to serue such as are vnnete for hym. Well is hym, that syn-deth a faythfull frende: and well is hym, wyche talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth hym Howe greate is he, that syndeth wysedome & knowleg: Yet is he not aboue hym, that feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath set it selfe a boue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto who it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shal he be lykened, y kep eth it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of hys loue, ad the begynnyng of fayth is to cleaue fast vnto it The heynnesse of the harte is all the punysshment and the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al Al punysshment & plage is nothyng in comparyson of the plage of the herte, euen so al wykednes is nothyng, to the wyckednesse of a womā

Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a man is no thyng in comparyson of it, that hys euell wyl-lers do vnto hym: and al vengeance is nothyng to the vengeance of thyne enemye.

There is not a more wycked head then the heade of the serpente, and there is no wrathe aboue the wrathe of a womā. * I wyl rather dwel wyth a Lyon & Dragon, then to kepe house wyth a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shall muffle her countenaunce as it were a beare, & as a lacke shall she shewe it amonge the neyghbours. Her husbā is broughte to shame amonge hys neyghbours & when he heareth it, it maketh hym to sygh. Al wyckednes is but lytle to y wyckednes of a woman, the porcyon of y vngodly shal fal vpo her Lyke as to clyme vp a lande wape is to the fecte of the aged, euen so is a wyfe ful of wor-des to a still quyet man. * Loke not to narrowlye vpon the bewtye of a woman, leaste thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her. The wraeth of a woman is byshonoure and greate confusyon.

If a woman get the mastery, then is she contrary to her husbāde. A wycked wyfe maketh a loipe herte, an heauie countenaunce, and a deed wounde. * Weake handes and feble knees is a woman that her husbāde is not the better for. )
Of the woman came the begynnyng of synne: and thorow her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle nethe geue a wy-kyd woman her wyl. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syghte of thyne enemyes. Cut her of then from the flesch that she do not alwaye abuse the.

The xxvi. Chapter.

A Of the prynces of a good woman. Of the feare of thre thynges, and of the fourth. Of the ielous and drunken woman. Of two thynges that cause to rewe, & of the byrth wyche murther wyche.

Appye is the man that hath a verteous wyfe, for the number of hys yeres shalbe double. An honest woman maketh her husbāde a ioyful man, and she shall fyl the yeres of hys lyfe in prae. A verteous woman is a noble gyfte wyche shalbe geuen for a good porcyon vnto such as feare God. Whether a man be ryche or poore he maye haue euer a merce herte, and a chearfull countenaunce. There be thre thyngges that my herte feareth, and my face is a fray-de of the fourth. Treason in a cpty, a sedycyous people, and noysome tonges, all these are deny-er then death. But when one is jelous ouer his wyfe, it byngeth the payne and sorowe vnto the harte a woman y telleth oute all thynges, is a scourge of the tonge. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is as when an vnlpye payre of Oxen

The whordome of a woman maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eyeliddes. * If thy daughter be not chamefaste, hold her strait lye, lest she abuse her selfe thowowe ouer muche lyberte. Beware of all the dyschonestye of her eyes: and maruayle not if she do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the way, and is thyrp lye: so shal she open her mouth, and dyspynke of euerye nexte water that she maye get.

By euerye hedge shal she lye downe, and open her quiver agaynst euerye arrowe. A louyng wyse reioyseth her husbnde, and fedeth hys bones wth her wysedome. A woman of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, * to all wel nurtured myndes maye nothyng be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyfte aboue other gyftes, and there is no weyght to be compared vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it aryseth, is an ornameinte in the hyghe heauen of the Lorde, so is a vertuous wyse the bewtye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lycht is vpon the holpe candle stycke, so is the bewtye of the face vpon an honeste bodye. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpon the sockettes of syluer: so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacyons that be layde vpon an hole stoupe rocke: so are the commaundementes of God vpon the hert of an holy womā.

There be two thynges that greue my hert and the thynde is a dyspleasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre suffereth scarcenelle and pouerty. When men of vnderstanding and wysedome are not set by: And when one departeth from ryghteousnesse vnto synne. Who so doth suche, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto the swerde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynke to be hearde and parlous. A marchaunte cannot lychtlye kepe hym from wryng, neyther a tannet hym selfe from syn.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The poyse that wolde be ryche. The probacion of the man that feareth God. The vnconfortenelle of a foole. The secrettes of frende, are not to be befreed. The wycked pynnyng well whiche turneth vpon hym selfe.

Because of pouertye haue manye one offended * he that seeketh to be ryche turneth hys eyes asyde. Lyke as a nape in the wall stycketh faste betwixte two stones, euen so doth syn stycke betwixte the byer & the seller. If he holde hym not dyspgentlye in the feare of the Lorde, hys house shal soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one lyfeth, the flychynesse remayneth in the spue: So remayneth there some vncleane thyng in the thoughte of man. The ouen pro- ueth y potters vessell, * so dothe temptacyon of trouble tye ryghteous mē. * The tre of the felde is known by hys frute, so is the thoughte of mans herte known by hys wordes. Praple no man excepte thou haue hearde hym, for a man is knowe by his wordes. If thou folowest ryghteousnes, thou shalte get her, and put her vpon the as a fayre garmente. And shalte dwel wth her, and she shal defende the for euer: and in the dape of knowlege thou shalte fynde stedfastnes. The byrdes resorte vnto the plynke: so doth the truth turne vnto them that be occupied wth- all. The Lyeon wayteth the praye: so do the synners lurke vpon the workes of wyckednesse. The talkyng of hym that feareth God, is nothyng but wysedome: as for a foole he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be amonge the vndyscrete, kepe thy wordes vntill a conueniente tyme, but amonge suche as be wyse, speake on hardelpe. The talkyng of fooles is abhomy- nacyon, and theyr spoite is voluptuousnesse and mysnurtoure. Muche wearyng maketh thy beere to stande vp: and to styue wth such stoppeth the eares.

The styffe of the proude is bloudshedding & theyr blasphemynge is heuie to heare. * Who so dyscouereth secrettes leseth hys credence, and fyndeth no frende after hys wyll. Loue thy frende, and bynd thy selfe in faythfulness wth hym but if thou bewrayest hys secrettes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For lyke as the man is pdestroyed bys enemye so is he also that dealeth falselye in the frendeshyppe of hys neyghbour.

Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go oute of hys hande, cannot take her agayne: Euen so thou if thou geue ouer thy frende thou cannest not get hym agayne.

Yea, I canst not come by hym: for he is to far of he is vnto the as a Roos escaped oute of a snare for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they maye be bounde up agayne, & an euil word may be recouled but who so bewrayeth y secrettes of a frende, there is nomore hope to be had vnto hym.

* He that wycketh wth the eyes, pynnyngeth some euil, & noman shal take hym from it. When thou art present he shal hyghlye commen- de and praple thy wordes: but at the last he shal tunc hys tale, and flander thy sayinge. Many thynges haue I hated but nothyng so euell, for the Lorde hym selfe also abhorreth such a one.

* Who so casteth a stone on hys, it shal fall vpon hys owne heade ad he that smyteth wth a gyle, woundeth hym selfe. Who so dyspgeth a pye shal fall therin. * he that layeth a stone in hys neyghbours waye, shal stromble therō and he that layeth a snare for another shal be take in it hym selfe. * Who so geueth a wycked noysome counsayll, it shal come vpon hym selfe, & he shal not knowe from whence. The proude blasphemie and are scornfull, but vengraunce lurketh for them as a Lyon. They reioyse at the fall of the ryghteous shal be taken in the snare: anguysh of herte shal consume them, before they dye. Angre and rygousnesse are t we al, on p- nable thynges, & the vngodly hath them. Lethe vpon hym.

forgeue thy neyghbour the hurte that he hath done to the, and so shall thy synnes be forgiven the also, when thou prayest. A man that bereth hatred agaynste another, howe dare he desyre forgiveness of God? He that sheweth no mercye to a man whych is lyke hym self, howe dare he aske forgiveness of his synnes? If he that is but fleshe, beareth hatred and kepe it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remember the ende, and let enemye passe, whych seeketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remember the commaundementes so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghbour. Chyncke vpon the couenaunte of the hygheste, and forgeue thy neyghbours ignorance. Beware of stryfe and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angry man kindleth varpaunce, and the vngodlye dysquyeth frenedes, and putteth dyscorde amonge them that be at peace. The more wood there is, the moare wehemente is the fyre: and the myghtier that men be, the greater is the wrath, and the longer the stryfe endureth, the moare it burneth.

All hasty braulynge kindleth a fyre, and an hasty stryfe sheddeth bloude. A tonge also that beareth fals wytnesse byngeth deat. If thou blowe the sparke, it shall burne. If thou spyt vpon it, it shall go forth: and both these out of the mouth. The slanderer and double tonged is cursed, for manye one that be frendes setteth he at varpaunce. The thyrd tonge hath dysquyeted manye one, and dysuen them from one land to another. Stronge cyties of the ryche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of greute men. (The strength of the people hath it brought downe, and bene the decay of myghtye nacions.) The thyrd tonge hath caste oute many an honest woman, and robbed them of theyr labours. Who so herkeneth vnto suche, shall neuer fynde reste, and neuer dwel safelye. The stroke of the rodde maketh adders, but the stroke of the tonge synneth the bones in sondre. There be manye that haue perished wth the sword, but manye moore thowowe the tonge.

Well is hym that is kept from an euell tonge and commeth not in the angre thereof, whych draweth not the pocke of suche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pocke thereof is of yron, and the bande of it of Steele. The death thereof is a very euell death: hell were better for one then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flamme thereof maye not burne them. Such as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quench it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leopard. Thou heddest thy goodes wth thronnes: why doeste not thou rather make doores & barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and syluer, why doeste thou not wepe the wordes also vpon the balancs? Beware that thou abyde not in thy tonge, so fall before thyne enemies, that lye wayte for the, (and thy fall be incurable, euen vnto death.)

The xxix. Chapter.

¶ Some we oughte to lende oure money, and to almesse of a farythfull man answeryng for his frende. Of lybe r. to the and hospitalyte.

Who so wyl shewe mercye: let hym lende vnto his neyghbour: and he that is able, let hym kepe the commaundement. Lend vnto thy neyghbour in tyme of his nede, and pay thou thy neyghbour agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde and deale faythfully wth hym, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thyng that is necessarye for the. There haue bene manye, that when a thyng was lente them, rekened it to be founde, and made them trauayle and labour that had helped them. Whyle they receaue anye thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as geue them, for theyr neyghbours good they humble theyr voyce. But when they shulde paye agayne, they kepe it backe, and geue euell wordes, & make manye excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet geneth he scarce the halfe agayne, & rekeneth the other to be founde. And yet he wythholde not his monye, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vnderfouled.

He payeth hym with cursynge and rebuke and geueth hym euell wordes for his good dede. There be manye one whych are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lease the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacyence wth the synner, and wythholde not mercye from hym. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, & let hym not go emptye, from the because of his necessitye. Lese thy monye for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burie it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth.

¶ Gather thy treasure after the commaundemente of the hygheste, and so shall it byng the moare pacyte then golde: & lye vnto thy almesse in the hande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euell.

¶ A mans almesse is as a purse wth hym, & shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and afterwarde shall it aspe and paye euerye man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fyght for the agaynste thyne enemyes, better then the shyld of a gyante, or speare of the myghtye.

A good honest man is surety for his neyghbour, but a wycked person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshyppe of thy surety, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodlye dysple the good dede of his suretye and the vntthankfull and ignorant leaueth his suretye in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghbour: and when he hath loste his honestye he shall forsake hym. Suretyshyppe hath destroyed manye a ryche man, and removed them as the waues of the see. Myghtye people hath it dysuen awaye, and caused them to wander in straying cuntryes. An vngodly man transgressing the commaundement of the Lorde shall fall into the suretyshyppe: and though he force hym selfe to get oute, yet shall he fall into the iudgemente. Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in such dette. The chiefe thyng that kepeth in thy lyfe, is water, and bread, clothynge, and lodgyng.

so is it with the appetynges of dreames. Befor Lyste vp thyne heade ouer the outlandyshe heathen, that they maye learne to knowe thy myght, and power. Lyke as thou arte halowed in vs before them, to bypunge to passe, that thou mayest be magnyfied also in them before vs: that they maye knowe the, lyke as we knowe the. For there is none other God but onelye thou, O Lord. Renue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thyne hande, and thy cyghte arme gloriously. Rapse vp thy indignacyon, and pouer oute thy wrath. Take away the aduersarye and smyte the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remember thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes maye be praysed. Let the wrath of the fyre consume them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perishe that doth the people hurte. Smyt in sonnder the heade of the prynces that be oure enemyes, and saye there is none other but we.

Gather all the trybes of Jacob together agayne, that they maye knowe howe that there is none other God but onelye thou, that they may shewe thy wonderous workes, and be thou thy peoples heritage, lyke as from the begynnyng. O Lord, haue mercye vpon the people, that hath thy name, and vpon Israel, * whome thou haste lokened to a fyrtlye borne sonne. O be merciful vnto Jerusalem the cytye of thy Sanctuarie. * the cytye of thy reste. I praye vnto the, O Lord, vnto thy vnspeakable vertues, and thy people wpyth thy glory. Gueve wytnesse vnto thy creature, whome thou madest from the beginning and rapse vp the prophetes that haue ben shewed in thy name. Rewarde them that wapte for the, that thy prophetes maye be found fapthfull. O Lord, heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordyng to the blyssyng of Aaron ouer the people: and guyde thou vs in the waye of cyghteousnesse, * that all they whych dwell vpon the earth maye knowe, that thou arte the Lord the eternall God, whiche is from everlastyng.

The deyl deuoureth all meates, yet is one meate better than another. Lyke as the tounge tasteth verrysonne, * so dothe an herte of vnderstandyng marke fals wordes. A frowarde herte geueth heynesse, but a man of experyence lyftech hym vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then another. A fapth wyfe reioyseth her husbände, and a man loueth not hyrge better. If she be lounyng and vertuous wpythall, then is not her husbände like other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodlye possesyon: she is vnto hym a helpe, and pyllet wher vpon he resteth, where no hedge is, there the goodes are spoyled and where no huswye is, there the frendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credence geuen to a robber, that goeth from one cytye to another: so is not the man beleued, if hath no nesse: and must turne in, where he maye abyde in cyghte.

* Let the remembrance of the deede cease in hys reste, and comforte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, for hys sperte is departed from hym. The wysedome of the scrpbe is at conueniente tyme of reste: and he that ceaseth from excercyse and labour shalbe wyse.

He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in proddynge, and dypynge the oren, and geth about wth such workes, he can speake of oren: he setteth hys herte to make forowes, and is dyligence to geue the kyne fodder. So is every carpenter also and workemaster that laboureth still nyghte and daye: he carueth, graueth, cutteth oute, and hys desyre is in sondrye conynge thynges, hys herte ymagyneth howe he maye conynge cast an ymage, hys diligence also and watchynge perfourmeth the worke. The prynciple, in lyke maner bydeth by hys styke, and doth hys dyligence to labour the yron. The vapour of the fyre burneth hys fleshe, & he muste fyghte wth the hate of the forname. The noise of the hammer soundeth euer in hys eares, & his eyes loke still vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set his mynde thereon, & he wyl make out his worke, & thertore he watcheth, how he may set it out, & bring it to an end.

So doth the potter spt by hys worke, he turneth the whele about wth hys fete, he is dyligent and carefull in al doynges, & hys labour and worke is without nombre. He fashioneth the claye wth hys arme, & wth hys fete he tēpereth it. Hys herte ymagyneth howe he maye make it pleasaunte, & hys dyligence is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope in theyr handes, & every one thynketh to be conynge in hys worke. Althowt these may not the ctyes be mayntayned, inhabited, nor occupied: and they come not hre in the congregacyon, neither spt they vpon y iudgemente seates: they vnderstande not the couenaunte of the lawe: they cannot declare equityte & iugement: they cannot fynde out the darcke sentences, but thowow them that the creature of the worlde be mayntayned, theyr prayer concerneth onely the worke and labour of conynge.

The xxxiij Chapter.

That aplyeth hys maynde to vnderstandynge the lawe of God, doth dyligently seke out the wysedome of them of the olde tyme, and excercyseth hym selfe in the prophetes. He kepeth the saynges of famous men, and preasseth to the vnderstandynge of darcke sentences of wysedome. He seketh out the mysterie of secrete saynges, & excercyseth hym selfe therein continually. He doth scrupce amonge great men & appereth before the Prynce. He goeth into a straunge countrey, & trauayleth thowowe it: to see what good or euil is among men, he proueth it and seketh it oute. He purpolet in hys herte, to resorte earlye vnto the Lorde that made him & to praye before the hyest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for his synnes. When the great Lorde wyl, he shalbe fylled wth the sperte of vnderstandynge that he may then pour out wise sentences, & geue thanks vnto y Lorde in his prayer. He shal order hys deuyce, & leade his knowlege a ryght & geue hym vnderstandynge of secrete thynges. He shal shewe forth the science of hys learnynge, and reioyce in the countenance of the law of the Lorde. The whole congregacyon shal commend hys wysdome & it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of hym shal neuer be forgotten, & his name shal continue fro one generacyon to another. His wysdome shal be spoken of among the people, & the whole congregation shal openly declare his praise. While he liueth he hath a greater name then a thousand besyde & after hys death, the same name remaineth vnto hym. Yet wyl I speake of moomen of vnderstandynge, for I am full as the mone.

¶ Hecken vnto me (ye holy vtreous chylde) bringe forth the fruite, as the Rose that is planted by the brokes of the felde, & geue ye a swete smel as Lybanus. Florish as the Rose gardyn synge a songe of praise. O geue thanks vnto God ouer all hys workes. Seue glorie and honoure vnto the Lorde, shewe hys prayse wth poure lippes. Pee, euen wth the songe of poure lippes, wth harpes, and playnge, and in geuyng thanks vnto hym, sape after this maner. * All the workes of the Lorde are exceldyng good, and all hys commaundementes are mete and conueniente in due season.

A man nedeth not to sape: what is y / what is that? For at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At hys commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the word of his mouth the water stode still. In hys commaundement is every thyng acceptable & reconyled, and hys health cannot be mynyshed. The workes of all fleshe are before hym, & there is nothyng hyd from his eyes. He seyth from euerlastynge to euerlastynge & there is nothyng to wonderfull, or hys vnto hym. A man nedeth not to sape then, what is this or that? For he hath made al thynges to do good vnto man. Hys blessing shal renne ouer as the streame, and moisture the earthe lyke a floude. of water. Like as he maketh y water for drouth so shal hys wrath fall vpon the heathen.

* Hys wayes are playne & right vnto the lust but the vngodly stumbe at them. For the good are good thynges created from the begynnyng & euil thynges for the vngodly. * Al thynges necessarye for the lyfe of man are created from the beginning: water, fyre, yron, & salt, meale, wheate and hony, mylke, and wyne, oyle, and cloth, & y. * Al these thynges are created for the best to the faythfull. But to the vngodlye shal all these thynges be turned to hurt and harme. There be spertes that are created for vengeance, and in theyr rigourousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. In the tyme of the ende they shal pour out theyr strength, & pacify the wrath of hym y made them. * Fyre, hayle, hunger, and death: all these thynges are created for vengeance.

The teeth of wyld nopsome beastes the scorpyons, serpentes, and the swerde are created also for vengeance, to the destruction of y vngodly. ¶ All the they shalbe

Many mycepe lyght in a mans life. All thynges passe awaye. At a fynde a stable sayth remayneth. Of the blessing of the ryghteous and p<sup>er</sup>secution of the feare of God.

Greate trouaile is created for all men, and an heuie pocke vpon all men chylidren, from the daye that they goo out of theyr mothers wombe till they be buried in the earth (the mother of all thynges: namely theyr thoughtes and p<sup>er</sup>secutions, feare of the herte coun-cell, a medytacion is longyng, and desyre the day of death from the hyghest that lytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and moost symple vpon the earth from him that is gorgeously arrayed, and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is but homely, and simply clothed. There is no thyng but what he, zeale, fearfulness, vnquietude, & feare of death, rygorous, anger, & strepe And in the nyght, when one shalder rest & sleape vpon his bed, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandyng & knowlege. A lytle or nothyng is bys till, in the sleape as wel as in the day of labour.

We feareth & is dysquyeted in the vylon of his herte, as one that rennet out of a battaile and in the tyme of health he awaketh and maruellyth that the feare was nothyng. Such thin-ges happen vnto all fleshe, both man and beast: but seuen folde to the vngodly. Adrouer, death bloudshedynge, strepe, and swearde, oppression, hunger, dedenecyon, and punishmente: these thynges are all created agaynst the vngodlye for theyr sakes came the floude also. * All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: and all waters shalbe agayne into the see. All byrdes & vntygth cownseles shalbe put awape, but faythfulness and truth shal endure for euer. The substaunce & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dried vp and synke a ware as the water floude, and they shal make a soude like a great thoder in y<sup>e</sup> rayne

Lyke as the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the trauing resourshall not obtayne many braunches and the vncleane rootes vpon the hye rockes, shalbe rooted oute before the grasse by the water syde and vpon the ryuer bankes.

Freundynesse and lyberallite in the increase and blessing of God, is lyke a paradise & garden of pleasure suche merce also and kyndnes, endureth for euer. * To labour and to be cōtent with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt lyfe and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chylidren and to repayre the cytye maketh a perpetuall name, but an honeste woman is more worth then them bothe. Wine and mynstrelsy reioyce the herte, but the ioue of wis-dome is aboue them both.

Dypnyng and harpyng make a swete noy-se, but a frendly tonge goeth beyond them both Thyne eye desyrez fauour and bewtye, but a grene seide tyme, rather then them both. A frend and companion come together at opportynite but aboue them bothe is a wyfe that agreeth wth her husbände. One by other helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shal deliuer more then them both. Gold and siluer fasten the feete but a good counsell is more pleasaunte the them bothe. Temporal substaunce and strength, lyfe vpon the mynde: but the feare of the Lord wanteth nothyng, and nedeth no helpe.

The feare of the Lord is a pleasaunte garden of blessing, and nothyng so bewtyfull as it is. Wysonne leade not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thoughte for his owne lyfynge howe to vpholde his lyfe, for he leadeh hym selfe wth other mennes meate.
But a wyfe and well nurtered mā wyl be ware therof. Beggyng is swete in the month of y<sup>e</sup> vnchamefast, but in bys belly there burneth a fyre.

The .xli. Chapter.

Of the remembrance of death. Death is not to be feared. & lyke vpon them that feake the name of God. Good name and fame. An exhortacion to geue heed vnto wysdom. Of what chynges a man ought to be ashamed.

Deth, howe bytter is the remembraunce of the, to a man that seeketh rest and comfort in bys substaunce and ryches, vnto the mā that hath prospered in all thyngges, p<sup>er</sup>, vnto hym y<sup>e</sup> yet is able to receaue meat Death howe acceptable and good is thy iud-gement vnto the nedefull, and vnto hym whose strength fayleth, & that is nowe in the last age, and that all thynges is full of care and fearful-nesse vnto hym also y<sup>e</sup> is indyspayre, & hath no hope nor patience: We not thou afraid of death remember them that haue bene before the: and that come after the, thyng is the iudgement of y<sup>e</sup> Lord ouer all fleshe. * And why woldeste thou be agaynst the pleasure of the byester. Whether it be ten hundredth, or a thousand peaces, death asketh not howe longe one hath liued.

The chylidren of the vngodly are abhomy-nable chylidren. as so are they that kepe company wth the vngodly. * The inheritaunce of vngodly chylidren shall come to naught, and their posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confusion. The chylidren complayne of an vngodlye father, and why: for bys sake they are rebuked and dyspysed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) agayne: so go the vngodly also oute of the curse into destruccyon. The sorowe of men is in thep bodye: but the name of the vngodlye shalbe put out. * Laboure to get the a good name, for that shal contynue suer by the, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good ipse hathe a nobye of dapes, but a good name endureth euer * My chyldren kepe wisedome in peace for wisedome that is hyd: and a treasure that is not sene, what profyte is in them both? A man that hydeth hys foolyshe nesse, is better then a man that hydeth hys wisedome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in all thynges and alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth muste proue & measure it. Be ashamed of whordome before father & mother: Be ashamed of leasping before the prynces & men of auctorite: Of lyme before the Judge and ruler. Of offence before the congregation & people: Of vntighteousnes before a companyon and frende. Of theste, before thy neyghbours. * As for the truth of God & hys couenaunte, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye wth thyne elbowes vpon the breade: Be ashamed to looke vpon batlottes. Be ashamed to turne away thy face frō thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue. Be ashamed also to looke vpon another manes wyfe, & to make anye tryfynge wordes wth her mayden, or to stand by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vphayde thy frende when thou greuest anye thyng, caste hym not in the teeth wythal.

The xliii Chapter.

Secretes maye not be opened. The laue of God muste be taught. A daughter. A woman. God knoweth al thynges: yea, enuie be secreted at thy deede.

Remembre not a thyng twyse, and dysclose not the wordes, that thou hast heard in secrete. Be shamefast and wel manered in dede so shall euery mā fauoure the. Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, & accepte no persone to offende. Namelye, or these thynges be not a shamed: Of the laue of God, of the couenaunte of Judgement to brynge the vngodly from his vngodlynes vnto ryghteousnes & to make him a good man: to deale faythfully with thy neyghboure & companyon: to dystribute the heritage vnto thy frendes: to be dyspente to kepe trewe measure and weyghte: to be contente whether thou gettest much or lytle: to deale trulpe wth temporal goodes: in byng & sellynge, to brynge vpon chyldren wth dyspente to correcte an euil seruante, to kepe thyne is from an euil wyfe to set a locke wher many handes are: what thou deliuerest and geuest oute to be kepte, to tell it, & to wepe it: to wyte vpon all thy oute geuyng & receayng: to enfourme the vnlerned and vnwile: Of the aged, that are Judged, of the yōge. If thou be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalte be learned & wyse and accepte of all men.

The daughter maketh the father to watch secretly: & the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye hys slepe: yea, in the youth: lest she shulde ouer growe hym. And when she hath an husbande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be defyled or rauyshed in her vyrgynyte, or get sen wth chylde in her fathers house. Or when she cometh to the man, lest she behaue herselfe not ryght, or contynue vnscreptfull. * If thy daughter be wanton kepe her straitely, lest she cause thyne enemies to laugh the to scorn, & the whole cite to geue the an euil reposte, & so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before all the people. * Beholde not euery bodys bewtye, and haue not to muche dwellynge amonge women. For lyke as the worme & mothe cometh oute of the clotbyng & so doth wychednesse come of women.

It is better to be wth an euill man, then wth a frendly wyfe that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remember the workes of the Lorde, and declare the thynges that I haue sene. In the wordes of the Lorde are hys workes. The Sunne ouerloketh all thynges wth hys shyne, and all hys workes are ful of the clearnesse thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that hys Sapientes shulde tell oute al hys wonderous workes, whiche the Almyghty Lorde hath stablyshed? Al thynges endure in his glorie. He seketh out the grounde of the deepe, & the herte of men, & he knoweth all theyr pynagynacpon and wisedome. For the Lorde knoweth all seience, and he looketh into the token of the tyme he declareth the thynges that are passe & for to come, & dyscloseth thynges that are secreete.

* No thoughte maye escape hym, neyther may any worde be hid from hym. He hath garnished the hye excellent workes of hys wysedome, & he is from euerlastynge to euerlastynge. Into hym maye no thyng be added neyther can he be mynyshed, he hath no nede of any mans counsell. O, howe amiable are all hys workes, and as a sparke to looke vpon. They lyue all, & endure for euer: and when soeuer nede is, they are all obedyente vnto him. They are double, one agaynste another: he hath made no thyng that hath fault or blemyshe. * He hath stablyshed the goodes of euery one: and who maye be satysfied wth hys glorie, when he seeth it.

The xliii Chapter.

The Sunne of the creation of the worldes of God.

The glorie of the byght, is & the fayre and clere spymament, the bewtye of the heauen is hys glorious cleynesse. The Sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the going out of it, a maruelous worke of the hyest. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for the heat thereof? Who so keepeth an ouen when it is hoore the tymes more doth the sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, when it bresteth out the fyre beames & shyneth wth the byghtnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the Lorde that made it, & in hys commaundement he causeth it to runne hastily.

* The Moone also is in all, and at conuenyente season it sheweth the tymes & is a token of the tyme. * The tokē of the solempne feast is taken of the Moone, a lyght that mynysheth & increaseth agayne. The moneth is called after the moneth that it groweth wonderously in her chaungynge.

The arump of heuen also is in the byght in the firmamente of heauen / it genneth a clare and glozyous myne. Thys is the clarenesse of the starres, the bewtyfull apparell of heauen, the apparel that the Lorde lighteneth in the heygth In hys holpe worke they contynue in theyr or-

* Gen. 1. 15 & 16. Loke vpon the rapne bowe, and prayse hym þ made it: verry bewtyfull is it in hys myne. He compasseth the heauen aboute wpyth hys clare-nesse and gloze, the handes of the hyghest hath bended it. Thowowe hys commaundemente he maketh the snowe to fal, and the thunder of his iudgemente to smyte hastely. Thowowe hys comaundemente the treasures are opened, and the cloudes fleas the fowles. In hys power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the hay-le stones. The mountaynes melte at the syghte of hym the wynde bloweth accordyng to hys wyl. The sounde of his thoder beateth the earth and so doth the storme of the North. the whoyle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule casteth out and spredeth the snowe abroad: and as the greshoppers that destroy al, so falleth yt downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the whyteneesse thereof, and the herte is afrayed at þe rapne of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth lyke salte, and when it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the pycke of a thysle.

When the colde North wynde bloweth, harde Chysfall cometh of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynges together of water, and putteth on the waters as a brast plate he deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernes: & looke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medycyne of all these is whea cloude cometh hastely: & when a dewe commeth vpon the heate it shalbe refreshed agayne

D In hys worde he styllith the wynde In hys councill he seteth the depe, and (the Lorde) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of the perelles and harmes thereof, and when we heare it wpyth oure eares, we maruayle thereat.
For there be straunge wonderous workes, by uerse maner of nyce beastes & whalythes. Tho-rowe hym are al thynges set in good order, & par-fourmed, and in hys worde all thynges endure.

I speake muche, but I cannot suffycentely attayne vnto it, for he hym selfe onely is the perfection of all wordes. We shulde prayse the Lorde after all our power, for he is greate in al hys workes. The Lorde is to be feared, yee, very greate is he, & maruelous is hys power.
Prayse the Lorde, and magnifye hym as much as ye may, yet doth he farre exceed al praise. O magnifye hym wpyth al your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in nowyse able suffycently to prayse hym. Who hath seene hym, that he myghte tell vs?

* Who can magnifye hym so greative as he is. For there are hyd yet greater thynges the-these be: as for vs, we haue seene but fewe of hys workes. For the Lorde hath made all thynges and geuen wysdome to suche as feare God.

The xliii. Chapter.

Thys prayent certen holy men, Enoch, Noe, Abrahā, Isaac and Jacob.

Et vs commendeth the noble famous men, and the generacyon of our forefathers and fathers. Many more glo-ryous actes hath the Lorde done, and shewed hys grete power euer sence the beginnyng. The noble famous me raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule.
In theyr wysdome and vnderstandyng, they folowed the counsell shewed in the prophetes.* They led the folke thowowe the counsell & wysdome of the scripbes of the people. Wyse sentences are found in theyr instruction. They sought the swetnes and melody of musyke, & broughte forth the pleasaunte songes in scrypture. They were ryche also, and coude comforte and pacify those that dwelte wpyth them. All these were very noble and honourable men in theyr generacyons, and were well reposed of in theyr tymes.
These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shal alwaye be spoken of. Afterwarde, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone.* They came to naughte and perished as though they had neuer bene: and became as though they had neuer bene bozne. yea, & theyr chylidren also wpyth them.

Neuerthelesse, these are the lounge men, whose ryghteousnesse shal neuer be forgotten but contynue by theyr proscrippte. Theyr chylidren are an holpe good heritage. Theyr seed endureth fast in the couenaunte. For theyr sakes shal theyr chylidren and seed contynue for euer, & theyr prayse shal neuer be put downe. Theyr bodys are buried in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euer moare: The people can speake of theyr wysdome, and the congregacyon can talke of theyr prayse.* Enoch walked ryghte and acceptably befor the Lorde: therefore was he translated for an example of a mendmente to the generacions.* Noe, was a stedfast and ryghteous man, & in the time of wyath he became a reconstyng. Therefore was he left a remnaunte vnto the earth, when the floude came.
An euerlastyng couenaunte was made wpyth hym, that all fleshe shulde perishe nomoore w-the water. Abraham was a grete father of manye people, in gloze was there none lyke vnto hym. He kepte the lawe of the hyghest, and came into a couenaunte wpyth hym. He set the co-uenaunte in hys fleshe, and when he was proued, he was founde saythfull. Therefore swore God vnto hym, wpyth an othe, þ he wolde blesse all people in hys seed, that he wolde multiplie and increase hym as the duste of the earth, and to exalte hys seede as the starres: yee, and that hys seede shulde haue the possession, an inheritaunce of the lande from see to see, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the world.

* Wpyth Isaac dyd he stablyshe the same couenau. & for Abraham hys fathers sake yee, that gracious blesyng, and belth of all men & couenaunte dyd he stablyshe wpyth Isaac, and made it rest vpon the heade of Jacob. He knewe hym: in that he prospered hym so wel and rych-ly, and gaue them an heritage and sundred hys portyon by it selfe, & parted it amonge the twelue

He chose Aaron hys brother also out of the trybe of Leuy, exalted him, and made him such lyke. * An everlastynge couenaunte made he wth hym, and gaue hym the presthode in the people. He made hym glorious in bewyful araye, and clothed hym wth the garmentes of honoure. He put perfect ioye vpon hym, and gyrded hym wth strength. He decked hym wth syde clothes, and a tuncle, wth an ouerbodye cote also and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he him belles of golde and that many. * þe when he wente in, the sound myghte be heard, that they myghte make a noyse in the Sanctuarie, and geue the people warninge. The holye garment was wrought and broded wth golde, yelow, sylke and purple. And in the bestlappet there was a goodly worke, wherein was fastened lyghte & perfectenesse.

Upon the same also there was a worke fastened, and set wth costelye peryous stones, all bounde wth golde: and this he broughte in hys mynistracyon. The stones were fastened for a remembraunce, after the nombre of the xii trybes of Israell. Upon hys mytter there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunte to looke vpon. Before hym were there sene no suche fayre ornaments, and these it behoued hym alwaye to vse: There myghte none other put them on, but onelye hys chyldren and hys chylders chyldren perpetullye. Thys was now confirmed hym wth an everlastynge couenaunte, and to hys frede, as þe dayes of beauen, namelye þe hys chyldren shulde alwaye mynister before hym, and performed þe offyce of the presthode, and wth the people good in hys name. Before al meylpynge chose he hym that he shulde offer incense before the Lorde, and make odoures for a swete sauoure and remembraunce, that he shulde reconsole the people of the Lord wth hym agayne. * He gaue hym auctorite also in hys commaundementes and in the couenaunte that he shulde teache Jacob the statutes and testymonys, and to enforme Israell in hys lawe.

Therefore there stood by certayne agaynst hym, and had enuy at hym in the wylder: namelye they that were at Dathan, and Abiram syde, and the furyous congregacyon of Choz. Thys the Lorde sawe and it displeased hym, and in hys wrothefull indygnacyon were they consumed. A grete wonder dyd he vpon them, & consumed them wth the fyre. * Wylde thys, he made Aaron yet more honourable and glorious. He gaue him an heritage, and parted the fyrste frutes vnto hym. * Into hym spacyll he appoynted the breade for sustenance, (for the prestes dyd eate of the offerpynges of the Lorde) thys gaue he vnto hym and hys seed. * Elles had he no heritage nor porcyon in the lande, and wth the people. For whē the people were turned backe, he put hym selfe forth wth the ryghte scone and that wth a good wyl, to pacifye the wrath of the Lorde towarde Israell. Therefore was there a couenaunte of peace made wth hym þe shulde be the pryncypall amonge the ryghteous and the people, that he and hys posterite shulde haue the office of the presthode for euer (Lyke as there was made a couenaunte wth Dauid of the trybe of Iuda, that from amonge hys sonnes onelye there shulde be a kynge.) Ahly and strong in battayle * was Jesus the sonne of Naue, whych in stead of Moyses the prophet was geuen to be a Captayne of the people, whych accordyng vnto hys name, was a grete sauyour vnto the electe of God to punyche the enemyes that rose by agaynst Israell, that Israell myghte optayne the enherytaunce. Howe grete, noble, & excellent was he, when he left by hys hand, and drowe out hys swearde agaynst the cptyes: Who stod so manly before hym. For the Lorde hym selfe brought in the enemyes. * Stode not the Sunne still at hys commaundement, & one daye was as long as two. He called vpon the hyghest and moost myghtie, when the enemyes preased vpon hym on euery syde, and the Lorde heard hym wth the hayle stones. They smote the heathen people myghtely, and in the falling downe they slew all the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe hys hooste, and all hys defence, that the Lorde hym selfe foughte agaynst them for he lowered vpon the myghtye men of them.

In the tyme of Moyses also, he and Calch the sonne of Iephune, dyd a good worke, which stoode agaynst the enemyes, whithheld the people from synne, and stilled the wycked murmuringe. * And of syre hundred thousande people of foote, they two were preserved to bringe the into the herytage, namely, a lande that floweth wth mylke and honye.

* The Lorde gaue strength also vnto Caleb whiche remayned wth hym vnto hys age so that he wente vp into the hygh places of the lande and hys seed conquered the same for an herytage, that all the chyldren of Israell myghte se, howe good a thyng it is, to be obedyente vnto the Lorde. And the iudges or rulers, euery one after his name whose hert wente not a whoring, nor departed from the Lorde, and that forsoke not the Lorde vnfaythfully, whose remembrance hath a good reporte.

Pea they bones floyste out of theyr place and theyr names shall neuer be chaunged, (but honoure remayneth still wth the chyldren of those holpe men.

Samuel the prophete beloued of the Lord hys God * ordeyned a kynge, and anoynted the prynces ouer the people. In the lawe of the Lorde he Judged the congregacion, and the Lorde had respecte vnto Jacob: The Prophete was founde dyligente in hys saythfulnesse pea, and he is knowne saythfull in hys wordes: because he sawe the God of lychte * He called vpon the Lorde Almyghty, when the enemyes preased vpon hym on euery syde, what tyme as he offered the suckynge lambs. And the Lorde thundered from heauen, and made hys voyce to be heard wth a great noyse. He dyscomfyted the Prynces of Egre, and all the rulers of the Philistynes * Before hys laste ende he made protestacion in the syghte of the Lorde, and hys anoynted that he tooke neyther substance nor good of anye man, no not so muche as a shoe, and no man myghte accuse hym. After this he tolde, that hys ende was at hande, and he willed the kynge also hys ende, and death, and from the earthe lyfte he vp hys voyce in the prophete that the vngodlye people shulde perceyue.

The xlviij. Chapter.

The prayse of Nathan, Dauid, and Salomon.

Afterwarde in the tyme of kynge Dauid there rose vp a Prophet called Nathan: for lyke as the fat is taken awaye from the offerynge, so was Dauid chosen out of the chyldren of Israell. He tooke hys pastyme wth the Lyons, and wth kyddes and wth beares lyke as wth lambs. * Slewe he not a Gyaunte when he was yet but yonge and tooke awaye the rebuke fro his people: what tyme as he toke the scoone in hys hande, and smote downe proud Goliah wth the spyng. For he called vpon the hyghest Lorde whiche gaue hym strenght in hys ryghte hande, so that he ouerthrew the myghty Gyaunte in the battayl that he myghte set vp the horne of hys people agayne.

* Thus broughte he hym to worshyppe a- boue all prynces, and made him to haue a good reporte in the prayse of the Lorde, that he shulde were a crowne of glorie. * For he destroyed the enemyes on euery syde, rooted oute the Philistynes hys aduersaries, and brake theyr home in sunder, lyke as it is broken it this day. In all hys workes he prayled the hyghest and holpest, ascribed the honoure vnto hym.

Whiche hys whole herte dyd he prayse the Lorde, and loued God that made hym * He set synners also before the altare, and in theyr tune he made swete songes.

He ordeyned to kepe the holpe dayes worshypfully, and that the solempne feast thowowe the whole yere shulde be honorablye holden, wth praylynge the name of the Lorde, & wth synngynge by tunes in þ morning in the sanctuary.

* The Lorde tooke away hys synnes, and exhaulted hys horne for euer. He gaue hym the countenance of the kyngedome, and the throne of worshyppe in Israell * After hym there rose vp the wyse sone called Salomon, and for his sake he droue the enemyes awaye farre of. This Salomon rayned wth peace in hys tyme, for God gaue hym rest from hys enemyes on euery syde that he myghte buylde hym an house in hys name, & prepare the Sanctuary for euer, lyke as he was wel instruct in hys yowthe, and filled wth wisdom and vnderstandynge, as it were wth a water floude. He couered and fylled the whole lande wth symplytudes & wyse prudent sentences.

Hys name wente abroad in the fles, because of hys peace he was beloued. All landes maruelled at hys Songes, Proverbes, symplytudes, and at hys peace, and at the name of the Lorde God, whiche is called the God of Israell.

* He gathered gold as tyme, and he had as muche syluer as leade. * He was moued in his dynat loue towardes women, and was ouercome in affectyon. He rayned hys honoure & worshyppe pea, hys posterite defyled he also in bringynge the wrath of the Lorde vpon hys chyldren & sorowe after hys tyme. * So þ hys kyngedome was deuyded, & Ephraim became an vnfaythful, & vncoustante kyngedome. * Neuertheles, God forsoke not hys merce, neyther was he utterly destroyed because of hys workes, that he shulde leaue hym no posterite. As for the seed þ came vpon hym, whiche he loued, he broughte it not vterly to naught but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Dauid oute of hym. Thus rested Salomon wth hys fathers, and oute of hys seed he left behynde hym a verpe foolyshenes of the people, & suche one as had no vnderstandynge. * Euen Roboam, whiche turned away the people thowowe hys counsell, & Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, & whiche caused Israell to syn, & shewed Ephraim the waye of vngodlynes. In so much that theyr synnes & mysdedes had the vpperhande so sore, þ at the laste they were dreuen out of the lande for the same: Pea, he soughte oute and broughte vp all wyckednes, tll the vengeance came vpon them.

The xlvij. Chapter.

The prayse of Eliah, Elieus, Ezechiah, and Esay.

Then stood

Ehen stode vp * Eliah the prophet as a fyre, and hys worde brenke lyke a creschet. He broughte an hunger vppon them, and in hys zeale he made them few in number. For they myghte not awaye wyth the commaundementes of the Lorde. Thowwe the worde of the Lorde he shut the heauen, * and. iij. times brought he the fyre downe. Thus became Eliah honozable in hys wonderous dedes. Who may make hys boast to be lyke him? One that was dred rased he vp from death, & in the worde of the hyst he brought hym out of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynge & destroyed the, and the hondurable from theyr seate. Upon the moant Syna he hearde the pynphemente, and vpon Horeb the Judgement of the vengeance. He prophesied recompence vnto kynge, * ordayned prophetes after him: he was taken vp in the strome of fyre, in a charret of horses of the Lorde. He was ordeyned in the reprobunges in tyme to pacifye the wrath of the Lorde, & to turne the hertes of the fathers vnto the chylde, and to set vp the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blessyd were they that sawe the, and were garnished in loue for welcume in lyfe, but after death we shall haue no suche name.)

* Eliah was couered in the strome, but he lyf was fylled wth hys sperte. Whyle he lyued he was afrayed of no wyse, and no man myghte ouercome hym. There coude no worde desceane hym, * and after hys deathe hys bodye prophesied: he dyd wonders in hys lyfe, and in death were hys workes maruelous. For al this the people amended not, neyther departed they from thair synes: & tyl they were carped away prisoners out of the lande, and were scatered abroad in all countreys so that of them there remayned, but a very lytle people, & a pyse vnto the house of Danyel. howebeit some of them dyd ryghte, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Hezekias made hys cypre stronge, conueyed hym water into it, dygged thowwe the stonye rocke wth yron, and made vp a well by the wyter syde. In hys tyme came Sennacherib vp and sent Rabshakes, lyfte vp hys hande agaynst Syon, and despyled tem wyth greates pyde. Then trembled theyr hertes and handes so that they sorowed lyke a woman trauelynge wth chylde. So they called vpon the Lorde wach is mercifull, and lyfte vp theyr handes besyde hym. Immedyately the Lorde heard them oute of heauen: (he thought nemoze vpon theyr synes, nor gaue the ouer to theyr enemyes:) but deliuered them by the hand of Elap. * He smote the hooste of the Assyrians, and hys Angel destroyed them. For Hezekias had done the thyng that pleased the Lorde, and remayned stedfastly in the waye of Danyel hys father. As Elap the grete and faythfull prophete in the syghte of God had commaunded hym. * In hys tyme the sonne wente backward: and he lengthened the kynge's lyfe. Wth a ryghte sperte prophesied he, what shulde come to passe at the laste, & to suche as were sorrowful in Syon: he gaue con-solacyon. wher wyth they myghte comfort th em selues for eu. more he shewed thynges y were for to come, & secrete. or euer they came to passe.

The iij. Chapter.

Of Josaphat, Hezekiah, Dauid, Jeremie, Ezechiel, Zerobabel, Jesus, Azoraph, Enoch, and Joseph

Jhe remembraunce of * Josaphat is lyke as when the Apotecary maketh many precyous swete smelling thynges together. Hys remembraunce shal be swete as honny in al mouthes and as the playnge of Musycke at a bancket of wyne. He was appoynted to turne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abhomyne of the vngodlye. He dyrected hys herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodlye he set vp the worshippe of God agayne. All kynge (excepte Dauid, Hezekias and Josaphat) commytted wyckednesse for euen the kynge of Juda, also so. sooke the lawe of God. For they gaue theyr tyme vnto other, theyr honoure and worshippe also to a straunge people.

Therefore was the elect cypre of the Sanctuare brenke wth fyre, * and the stretes thereof lay desolate & wast in the hande of Jeremie, for they intreated hym euell, whiche neuerthelesse was a prophete ordeyned frome hys motheres wombe, that he myghte roote oute, breake of, * and destroye: and that he myghte buylde vp, and plant agayne. * Ezechiel saw the glory of the Lorde in a vlyon, whych was shewed hym vpon the charret of the cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemies in the tyme, to doo good vnto such as had ordred theyr wayes aright. And the bones of the twelue prophetes flourished from out of theyr place for they gaue comferte and consolation vnto Jacob, & deliuered the faythfull people. * How shall we prayse zerobabel, whiche was as a kynge in the ryght hande?

* So was Jesus also the sonne of Josede: these men in theyr tyme buylde the house, and set vp the Sanctuare of the Lorde agayne: whiche was prepared for an euertlastyng worshyppe. * And Achemias is alwaye to be commended, which set vp for vs the walles that were broken downe, made the portes and barres agayne and buylde the houses of the newe. * But vpon the earth is there noman created lyke Enoch, for he was taken vp from the earth. * And Joseph whiche was lorde of his brethren, and the vpholder of his people: his bones were couered and kepte. Seth and Sem were in grete honoure amonge the people: and so was Adam above all the beastes when he was created.

The iij. Chapter.

Of Symon the sonne of Onias.

Symon * the sonne of Onias the hye preeste, whiche in his lyfe set vp the house agayne, & in his dayes made fast the temple. The beryght of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge and the hye walles of the temple. In his dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were creedyng full as the see. He took care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction.

Erreccion he kepte hys cete, and made it strong, that it woulde not be leaged. He dwelte in honoure and worshyppe amonge hys people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, & the court. He gaue lpghte as the mountayne starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the Moone whē it is full. He shyned as the Sunne in the temple of God. He is as bryghte as the raynebowe in the fayre cloudes, and shyneth as the floures and roses in the sprynge of the peare, and as lylies by the ryuers of water. Lyke as the braunches vpon the mounte Lybanus, in the tyme of Somer: as a fyre and incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set wpth all maner of peryous stones, and as an Olive tree, that is fructifull and as a Cypress tree, whych groweth vpon hys.

When he put on the garmente of honoure & was clothed wpth all bewte: when he wente to the holpe aulter to garnyshe the coveringe of the Sanctuarie: when he tooke the porcyons oute of the Priestes hande, he hym selfe stode by the hearthe of the aulter, and hys byet hien to unde about in order. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the mounte Lybanus, so stode they rounde about hym. And as the braunches of the Olive tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in thei glorie, and the oblacions of the Lorde in thei handes before all the congregacion of Israel. And that he myghte sufficently perfourme hys serunce vpon the aulter, and garnyshe the offeringe of the best God, he stretched oute hys hand, & tooke of the drynke offeringe, & poured in of hys wyne so he poured vpo the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the beste Prynce.

Then began the sonnes of Aaron to syng and to blowe wpth trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were all the people afrayde and fell downe to the earth vpon thei faces to worshyppe the Lorde thei God & to geue thankes to the Almyghy God. They songe goodly also wpth thei voyces, so that there was a pleasaunte noyse in the grete house of the Lorde. And the people in thei Prayer, besoughte the Lorde the hyghest, that he wolde be mercifull vnto the honoure of the Lorde were performed, thus ended they thei ministracion and serunce. Then went he downe and stretched oute hys handes ouer the whoole myltitude of the people of Israel, that they shoulde geue prayse and thankes oute of thei lippes vnto the Lorde, and to reioyce in hys name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he myghte openly shewe the thankes geuyng before the hyghest, namelye thus: O geue prayse & thankes (ye al) vnto the Lorde our God whych hath euer done noble & great thynges: whych hath increased our dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealete wpth vs accordyng to hys mercede: & he wyl geue vs the ioyfulnesse of herte, and peace for our tyme in Israel. Whych faythfully kepeth hys mercede for vs euermore, & alway deluereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my herte: as for the firste whome I hate, it is no people. They that lyt vpon the wantarne of Samaria, the Phylistynes, and the foolyshe people that dwell in Sichemys.

Ihesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus, of Ierusalem, haue tokened vpon these in fourmacions and documentes of wysdome and vnderstandinge in this booke, and poured out the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that excerpeth hym selfe therein: and who so taketh such to hert shalbe wylle for euer. If he do these thynges he shalbe stronge in all. For the lpghte of the Lorde leadeth hym.

The .ii. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Syrach.

I will thanke the O Lorde and kyngge, and prayse the O God, my sauyour. I wyl pelyde prayse vnto thy name, for thou art my defender and helper, and hast preserued my bodye fro destruction, from the snare of trayturous tonges, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyes. Thou haste bene my helper, from suche as stode vpon agaynst me, and hast deliuered me after the myltitude of thy mercede, and for thy lonly names sake. Thou haste deliuered me from the rooyng of them that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the handes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the myltitude of them that troubled me and wente aboute to set fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not brynte in the myddes of the fyre. From the deepe of hel, from an vncleane tonge, from lyeinge wordes, from the wycked kyngge, and from an verryghteous tonge. My soule shal prayse the Lorde vnto death, for my lyfe drew me vnto hel downward.

They compassed me rounde aboute on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I sought aboute me, if there were any man that wolde socour me, but there was none. They thought I vpon thy mercede, O Lord, and vpon thyne actes that thou haste done euer of olde: namelye: & thou deliuerest suche as put thei truste in the, and ryddest them oute of the handes of the lecher. Thus lifte I vp my prayer from the earth and prayed for deliuerance from death. I called vpon the Lorde the father of my Lorde, that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I wyl prayse thy name continuallye, yeldyngge, honoure and thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was heard. Thou sauedest me from destruction and deliueredest me from the verryghteous tyme. Therefore, wyl I acknowledge and prayse the, and magnifye the name of the Lorde.

When I was yet but yonge, or euer I went astraye, I despyed wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, & sought her vnto the laste. Then flozped she vnto me, as a grape that is soone ripe. My hert reioysed in her, then went my foote the ryghte waye: yee from youthe vp, soughte I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I found me muche wysdome: and prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyl I ascribethe glorie vnto hym that geueth me wysdome for I am aduysed to do ther do thereafter. I wyl be gelous to cleave vnto the chynge that is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled wpth her, and I haue bene dyligent to be occupied in her, I left myne handes on hye, then was my soule lyghtened thowowe wysedome, that I knowledged my folynesse, I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one herte from the begynnyng, and I founde her in clenness. And therefore shall I not be forsaken.

My herte longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thowowe her the Lorde hath geuen me a newe tonge, wherwyth I wyl praye hym. * Come vnto me ye vblearned & dwel in the house of wysedome: withdraue not your selues from her, but talke and comune of these thynges, for your soules are very thyrstye. I opened my mouth & spake: Come and by wysdome wout any mony, bowe downe your necke vnder her yoke, & your soule shall receaue wysdome. She is hearde at hand, and is content to be founde. Behold wpth your eyes, & howe that I haue had but litle laboure, & yet haue founde muche reste. Receaue wysedome, and ye shall haue plenteousnes of spluer & golde in possession. Let your mynde reioyse in hys mercye, and be not ashamed of hys prayse. Worke hys worke by tymes, and he shall geue you your rewarde in due season.

The ende of the booke of Iesus the sonne of Ierach: whiche is called in Latyne, Ecclesiasticus.

The booke of the prophet Baruch.

The fyrste Chapter.

Baruch wrote a booke duringe the captiuitie of Babylon, whiche he reb before Ierachiah and at the people. The Jewes sente the booke wpth mony vnto Jerusalem, so they might hearken, to the intente that they shoulde praye for them.

And these are the wordes of the booke, whiche were writen by Baruch the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasias, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Melchias, at Babylon, in the fyfte yere, and in the vii. daye of the moneth, what tyme as the Chaldees toke Jerusalem, & bzene it vp wpth fyre.

And Baruch dyd reade the wordes of this booke, & Ierachiah the sonne of Iochym king of Iuda myghte heare: and in the presence of all the people that were come to heare the booke: yea, and before all the noble kynges sonnes, before the Lordes of the counsayl, & elders: and before the whole people, from the lowest vnto the highest: before all them that dwelte at Babylon by the water of Sodor. Whych when they herd it, wept, fasted, and prayed before the Lorde.

They made a collecepon also of mony, accordyng to euery mans poure, and sente it to Jerusalem vnto Iochim the sonne of Melchias the sonne of Salon preast, wpth the other preastes and to all the people whych were wyth hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaimentes of the temple of the Lorde (p were taken away out of the temple) that they myght bringe them agayne into the lande of Iuda, the tenth daye of the moneth Syban: namelpe, the first vesselles (whiche Sedechiah the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda had made) after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had taken Ierachiah, & all hys prynces, lordes, & all the people, & led them captiue from Jerusalem vnto Babylon.

And they sayde. Behold, we haue sent you mony, & to by you burntofferinges and incense wythall: make you vblearned breade, and offere for synne vpon the aulter of the Lorde our God: And praye for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor, kyng of Babylon, and for the welfare of Balthazar hys sonne: that they dales maye be vpon earth, as the dayes of heauen that God also maye geue vs strength & lyghten our eyes, that we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, & vnder the protection of Balthazar hys sonne: & we may long do them scrupce, and fynde fauour in thyr syghthe.

Praye for vs also vnto the Lorde our God for we haue synned agaynst the Lord our God and vnto thys daye, is not hys wrath turned yet awaye from vs. And se that ye reade thys booke (whych we haue sente vnto you to be rehearsed in the temple of the Lorde) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme conueniente.

Thus shall ye saye: The Lorde our God is ryghteous, but we are worthy of confusyon, and shame: lyke as it is come to passe thys daye vnto all Iuda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Jerusalem, to oure kynges, prynces, preastes, prophetes and oure fathers. We haue sinned before the Lorde our God, we haue not put our trust in hym, nor geuen hym credence, we haue not obeyed him, we haue not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde our God, to walke in the commaundementes that he gaue vs.

Synsthe day that he brought our forefathers out of the land of Egypt vnto this presen t daye we haue bene euery amysbelcupnge an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lorde our God: we stroyng our selues utterly, and spryncklyng backe, that we shoulde not heare hys voyce.

* Therefore, there are come vpon vs great plagues and druers curses. Lyke as the Lorde deuised by Moyses his seruaut: which brought oure fathers oute of the lande of Egypt, to geue vs a lande that floweth wpth mylk and honye, lyke as it is to se thys daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not harkened vnto the voyce of p Lord our God, accordyng to all the wordes of the Prophetes, whom he sente vnto vs & to our rulers: but euery mā folowed hys owne mynde & wycked ymagynacion to offer vnto straung gods: to do euell in the syghthe of the Lorde our God.

The ii Chapter.

The Jewes confesse that they suffer wofully for thyr synnes. Theyre confession of the byssum. The Jewes desire to haue the Ierach of God turned from them. For the Lorde wyl that we be vnto prynces all though they be euell. The promyseth that he wyl call agayne the people from captiuite, and geue them a newe and agaynlyng testament.

WH the whyche cause the Lorde our God hath performed bys deuyce whereof he certyfied vs, and oure heades that ruled in Ierusalem, and oure kynges, oure prynces wpth all Israel & Iuda And such plagues hath the Lorde broughte vpon vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen, lyke as it is fulfilled in Ierusalem, & accordyng as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moyses: that a man shulde eate the fleshe of his owne sonne, and the fleshe of his owne daughter. Moreover, he hath deliuered them into the handes of all the kynges, that are rounde aboute vs (to be confounded & desolate) and scatered them abrode in all landes and nacjons. Thus are we broughte beneth and not a boue, because we haue synned agaynst the Lorde our God, and haue not bene obedyente vnto his voyce. * Therefore the Lorde our God is ryghteous, and we wpth oure fathers, as reaso is) are brought to open shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagues that are come vpon vs already, the Lorde hath deuysed them for vs: yet wolde we not praise vnto the Lord our God that we myghte turne euery man from his vngodly wayes. So the Lorde hath caused suche plagues to come vpon vs: for he is ryghteous in all his workes, whych he hath commaunded vs, whych we also haue not done, nor harkened vnto his voyce for to walke in the commaundementes of the Lord þe hath geuen vnto vs.

Turne thy wrath from vs (we beseeche the) for we are but a fewe left a monge the heathen, where thou haste scatered vs. * Heare oure prayers (O Lorde) and oure petcyons, bring vs out of captiuyte, for thyne owne sake geue vs fauoure in þy syght of them, which haue led vs awaye: that all landes may knowe that thou arte the Lorde our God: and that Israel and his generacyon calleth vpon thy name.

O Lorde we poure out our prayers before the, and requyre merce in thy syghte O Lorde our God: not for any godlines of our forefathers, but because thou haste sente oute thy wrath and indignacyon vpon vs: accordyng as thou dydeste threaten vs, by thy seruantes the prophetes, sayinge. * Thus sayeth the Lorde: howe downe your shulders & neckes
